1997 MOUTON

$124.95 BTL - $1499 CS

"...the wine exhibits a dense ruby/purple color, and an open-knit nose of cedar wood, blackberry liqueur, cassis, and coffee. Fleishy, ripe, and mouth-filling, with low acidity, soft tannin, and admirable concentration and length, this delicious Pauillac will be drinkable in 2-3 years, and should age for 15+. It is an impressive effort..."

R. PARKER 90 PTS

1994 CHEVAL BLANC

$114.95 BTL - $1379 CS

"Subtle aromas of fruit, grilled meat and cedar, yet it's a blockbuster on the palate. Full-bodied and tannic. Chewy. Better in 2000."

WINE SPECTATOR 91 PTS

2001 BONNEAU DU MARTRAY CORTON CHARLEMAGNE

$59.95 BTL - $719 CS

"A gracious, sensual wine, the aromatically demure 2001 Corton-Charlemagne reveals a light to medium-bodied personality. Displaying outstanding depth, its softly textured character is filled with fresh talcum powder, mineral, and pear flavors. Projected maturity 2005-2013."

ORIGINAL WOOD CASES: BACK-VINTAGE WINE IN PRISTINE CONDITION.

1982 GRUAUD LAROSE

$299 BTL - $3585 CS

"Unbelievably powerful, thick, and intense, with full body, mouth-searing tannin levels, a grilled steak-like flavor, and a huge, intense finish, this is a monster, blockbuster 1982...It should prove to be one of the most profound Gruaud-Laroses made in the twentieth century. In quality, it is a first-growth"

R. PARKER 96+ PTS

1996 HAUT BRION

$195 BTL - $2339 CS

"The wine exhibits a dark ruby color with purple nuances...I am addicted to its perfume and complexity. It is never the biggest of the first-growths, but it is usually among the most compelling wines of this elite group, with the most profound set of aromatics of any of its peers. That being said, the 1996 should turn out to be an exquisite wine."

R. PARKER 95 PTS

1997 DOMINUS

$139 BTL - $1665 CS

"...this wine is a fleshy, silky-textured, opulent wine with a gorgeous nose of roasted herbs, coffee, jammy black cherry and plum-like fruit. The wine is medium to full-bodied, very concentrated, and silky-textured. It is gorgeous to drink now, but should age easily for 10-15 years."

R. PARKER 94 PTS

1997 PICHON LALANDE

$49.95 BTL - $599 CS

"...open-knit, with plentiful quantities of roasted herbs, smoky oak, vanilla, and creamy black currant fruit. A lush texture, low acidity, and an accessible, velvety-textured style will have many admirers. Consume it over the next decade. Drink 2000-2010."

R. PARKER 88 PTS

1989 MOUTON

$299 BOTTLE - $3585 CS
$2395 IMPERIAL (6L)

"One of the stars in every vintage. The exciting 1989 Mouton defines class and concentration, with thick, chewy cassis, mint and berry flavors, full, silky tannins and great harmony. Best after 2000."

1997 LEOVILLE LAS CASES

$69.95 BTL - $839 CS

"A star of the vintage, this classy, cedary, black currant, and sweet cherry-scented, dense ruby-colored Las Cases exhibits a beautiful dosage of new oak, medium body, expansive, ripe, concentrated flavors, plenty of glycerin, and exceptional purity. It is low in acidity, and already delicious. Anticipated maturity: now-2016."

R. PARKER 90 PTS

■ "A wine aficionado's paradise," this legendary Madison Avenue purveyor, once again the Survey's No.1 store in its category, is lauded for its "deep, deep selection" that while "strongest in high-end Bordeaux" (find "that double magnum of '82 Lafite-Rothschild") is "comprehensive" in all regions and price points, including nearly 400 options under $10; rest assured, "even if you don't look rich and want an inexpensive bottle of Beaujolais," the staff will be "helpful," but if you can't stop by, or are frustrated that only a "fraction of the bottles are on display," they "have a great Web site" and catalog, both of which include lots of accessories.

Two Local Vendors, Hampton Clam Bake & Catering and The Fish Farm, working hand in hand since 1994 to exceed the expectations of their clients

ASK GAEL

I'm in the Hamptons and need a reality check.

Crank down a few decibels with lunch at The Fish Farm. Get Marie Valenti to dish up her marvelous, peppery swordfish chili (a pint is perfect for two) and a couple of honest lobster rolls, barely mayo'd and sporting a big chunk of tail meat on top. Coleslaw is a must. Potato puree and just a dab of cream thicken the New England clam chowder and the lobster bisque. Marie cooks salmon farmed or wild, served with local corn. A crab cake on a bun is skinny but full of crabmeat. Husband Bob does the Key-lime tart. Thirty years ago, the Valentis came here to raise pan-size striped bass. "But no one was eating whole fish back then," she says. They switched to stocking local lobsters and fish, then started cooking eight years ago. Pick up to go, or settle at an umbrella'd picnic table overlooking the water. BYOB if you wish. You'll forget you ever heard of the Hamptons. Noon to 7:30. ## New Branches Opening Soon in Southampton, Westhampton Beach, Riverhead

We think you should choose your mortgage the same way you choose your new house.

As one of the country's largest and best savings banks, Hudson City Savings understands that buying a new home is one of the most important investments you'll ever make. We've lent billions of dollars for mortgages in New Jersey since 1868 and know from experience it's important to shop for your financing as carefully as you do for your home.

That's why we offer a variety of mortgage and refinancing plans with the most competitive rates on Long Island.

We also provide quick approval and unlike many banks do not "sell" our mortgages to another institution. Your relationship is with Hudson City Savings Bank for the entire term of your mortgage.

Find out why New Jersey's best savings bank is about to become one of Long Island's. Stop by or call any branch or contact our Mortgage Advisors (South Fork) John Gaudin at (516) 443-0552 or (North Fork) Kelly Bruer at (631) 457-0966 for more details.

Albert Einstein Letter Describes His Pleasant Time on the North Fork

By Dan Rattiner

This year marks the one hundredth anniversary of Einstein's Theory of Relativity. It describes a complicated relationship between time, space, the speed of light and energy that no one had thought of before. In a way, it is Einstein's theory that makes the following story make sense.

In 1976, the year that this nation was 200 years old, I was publishing this newspaper while living in a commune in East Quogue. It was the hippie era, and people did experimental things. One of the things I did was go to a group intensity training session in Manhattan, called EST, at which 300 of us sat on a ballroom floor in a Manhattan hotel for a three day weekend and, among other things, imagined ourselves in the most beautiful place we had ever spent time in. Mine was the deck of a boat anchored in a harbor, the lights flickering on shore, playing music and singing under the stars with a group of other musicians. I had experienced such a place in the harbor at Charlotte Amalie, St. Thomas, the Virgin Islands in 1964.

Thus began, before the year was out, a series of musicales I ran, first aboard a boat in a slip at what is now Riccardo's, and later in the living room of my home, on the side of a hill overlooking the harbor. For eight years, I held these musicales on Saturday nights, enjoying in reality the beautiful place I had visited a decade earlier. People brought guitars, banjos, auto-harps, food and wine. And we played. People were always welcome to bring guests, if they called first.

Sometime in the third year, this would have been around 1978, a young man named Ron Rothman came to a musicale as a guest to play in 1938 and 1939, renting a summer house at Nassau Point, a peninsula that sticks down into Peconic Bay from Southold. And he shopped at Rothman's.

"My grandfather, who was then forty, played every Friday night in the summertime in a string quartet," Ron Rothman told me. "Mozart. Beethoven. Every week at a different participant's home. In talking to Einstein, my grandfather learned that Einstein played a violin in quartets too. He had been doing it since his student days in Germany. So my grandfather invited him to join. And he did. Perhaps you'd like to talk to my grandad about it and write an article for the paper."

I met David Rothman in the Department Store, from which he was semi-retired, soon thereafter. He showed me around and took me in the back where we sat and had coffee. I took notes.

Einstein, in the late 1930s, was still developing theories designed to explain the workings of the universe. Specifically he was working on something called the Unified Field Theory. He was having trouble with it, and he thought he should take the summer off and just think. So he had rented a place at Nassau Point. He came from his home in Princeton with his violin and his grown daughguitar. We became friends. Ron worked for his father, Bob Rothman, who was in his fifties at the time, at Rothman's Department Store in Southold. Earlier, the store had been run by Bob's father, David.

At one point, Rob asked me if I knew that his grandfather David had been a friend of Albert Einstein. I said that I did not. Einstein, it seemed, at age sixty, had spent two summers,

It must be very satisfying, in an odd way, for Don Hewitt of Mecox, the creator of "60 Minutes" on CBS, the most successful news program in its history, to see what has happened to the spin off of his Sunday show, called "60 Minutes Wednesday." Hewitt, much admired, passed the age of eighty three years ago with his Sunday show still flying high, but the execs of CBS insisting his time was over and they wanted a new crowd to do a new show called "60 Minutes Wednesday." Hewitt fought the idea, but it's their network and he lost. Now they cancelled "60 Minutes Wednesday" because of poor ratings. And "60 Minutes," the Sunday version, is still flying

BREAKING NEWS

GARDINER'S ISLAND IS PRESERVED FOR THE NEXT 20 YEARS

An agreement has been reached between the Town of East Hampton and the owners of Gardiner's Island to preserve that property wild and undeveloped, for the next 20 years.

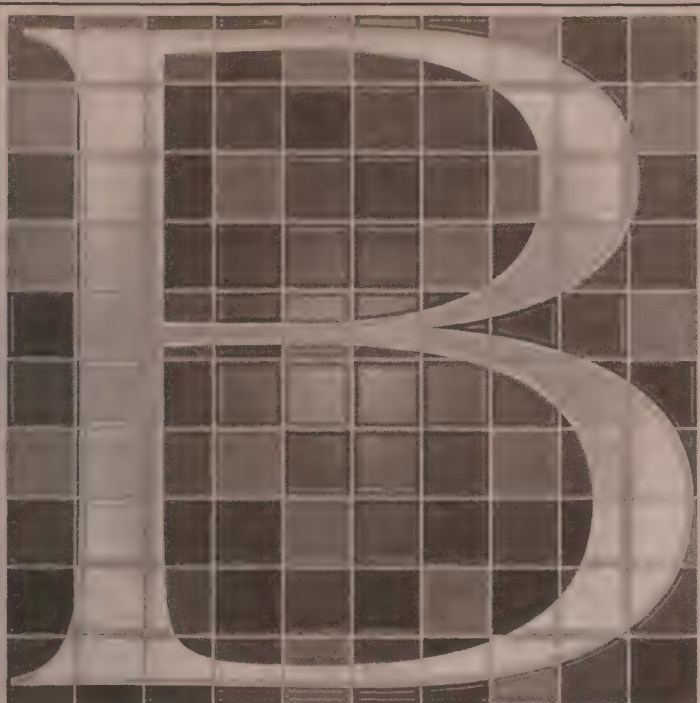

Town Supervisor William McGintee said doing this is "the most significant thing I will ever do in public office."

Alexandra Creel Goelet, a descendant of the Gardiner family, and co-owner with her husband of the 3,300 acre island off Amagansett, said "We just appreciate this opportunity. It enables us to protect our home. And it shows our continuing commitment to protect the island."

The island, which has a Manor House and numerous outbuildings, is the oldest privately owned island in America. It was sold by the Montaukett Indian Chief Wyandanch to Lion Gardiner in 1639 when James I was the King of England and the ruler of the American colonies. Lion Gardiner became the first Lord of the Manor. Robert David Lion Gardiner, who was the 16th Lord of the Manor and who died last year, was the last owner of the island to bear the family name.

The arrangement with the Town involves a conservation easement for 20 years. In exchange for that, the Town agrees to maintain and protect Cartwright Island, a small sandy strip of land just south of Gardiners Island inhabited by birds. There is nothing in the agreement that would allow the public access to the island.

ter, Margot, who arranged things for him. Also a secretary named Miss Ducas. And in the daytime he did a lot of sailing in a little eight-foot catboat on the bay. And at night he worked, or read, or he went off with Rothman to the weekly musicales.

It was in the summer of 1939, here on the East End, that Einstein wrote a famous letter to President Roosevelt, urging him to allocate money for the creation of an atomic bomb. It could be done, he said. And the Germans were working on one. It would be important to have one first.

People wrote letters all the time back then. And the following year, when he spent the summer in Saranac Lake in upstate New York for health reasons, Einstein wrote Rothman almost a dozen letters, the essence of which was that he missed him and the time he had been in Southold.

About two months ago, one of those letters was up for sale on Ebay. It is a generation later and, running Rothman's Department Store today is Ron Rothman, the son of Bob Rothman. Someone called Ron Rothman to tell him that a letter that used to belong to his grandfather was on the Internet.

Ron is one of three children that Bob and his wife had. The letters had been willed to Bob and his two sisters by Grandfather David.

Sometime around 1995, Bob and his two sisters decided to sell the letters, which they were told were quite valuable. They contacted a dealer, and he had put them up for sale for $150,000. But they did not sell. Instead, the dealer offered to buy the letters for a lesser amount, and after talking among themselves, Bob and his two sisters sold them.

Upon hearing that one of the letters was on Ebay back up for sale again, Ron learned the name of the dealer from his father, and contacted him directly. The dealer told him that he had decided to put the letters up as separate lots on Ebay, and the one that was up there now was the first. Ron asked if he could buy all ten of the letters, and he and the dealer agreed on a price for nine. The tenth was a technical explanation of one of Einstein's theories and the dealer did not want to part with it.

Ron says he paid "in four figures" for each of the letters. He did contact some of his cousins about buying the letters back and two of the cousins joined him in the purchase as equal partners. So each of the cousins got three letters. Ron has now sold one of his three to the Southold Historical Society, which will put it on display along with another letter Einstein wrote while in Southold, to a local photographer named Reginald Donahue, thanking him for some photographs he had taken of Einstein during the summer of 1939.

Here is the letter that Einstein wrote to David Rothman in 1940 that is now in the hands of the Historical Society. The gift referred to was the little sailboat, which Einstein said he missed, so David Rothman had arranged to have it shipped to Einstein up in Saranac.

July 20, 1940 Knollwood Saranac Lake, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Rothman: I was really touched when I received your kind gift. I feel happy indeed about your kindness and at the same time ashamed because I could not show my gratitude for all the care in connection with my boat. I am going sailing daily with my sister and I am homesick when I think of the beautiful musical evenings.

With kind regards to you, your family and the musical friends,

Yours sincerely, A. Einstein.

As this whole episode jogged a memory of mine — interviewing grandfather Rothman in 1976, I got out a back issue from that year and reread the article that resulted from that interview. When I interviewed Grandfather Rothman, I had realized this was a rare interview, and I tried to make the interview as detailed as possible, taking very extensive notes.

Some people say the resulting article, the story of Albert Einstein and David Rothman is the best thing I have ever written. If it's true, it's been all downhill for me for the subsequent thirty years.

If you'd care to read it, you will find it as this week's excerpt in this newspaper's AUTHORS IN THE HAMPTONS column beginning on page 68 of today's paper. It is also the lead story in a book published in 1981, now out of print, called ALBERT EINSTEIN'S SUMMER VACATION, so named for that lead story. There are a few copies of it still available at Dan's Papers for $5.95, which we will sell on a first come first served basis.

Dining Out

A List, B List, Nick & Toni's, a Loaf of Bread and a Sick Dog

By Dan Rattiner

Years ago, as far as eating out was concerned, this place was like most other places. You talked about what kind of food you wanted to have for dinner, agreed that maybe Italian might be good tonight, and then you'd pile in the car and go to a nearby Italian restaurant, go inside, find a table and sit down. Often, you'd know the owner. He'd have a brief conversation with you, turn you over to a waitress who would take your order, and then you'd all eat. It would be pretty good. When the bill would arrive, you'd find it was pretty reasonable to take your family out once in awhile like this. At what passed for good restaurants back then, the cost might be, in today's money, about $20 a person.

Today, eating out is a very big deal. It is also expensive. At probably eighty percent of the restaurants on the East End, three couples can go out and spend the equivalent of what they might spend for a laptop computer.

But then, you get what you pay for. At the front door you will be met by a pretty young hostess in an evening gown who will seat you at a table. There will be someone who gets you your drinks, another person who brings you your water and rolls, then the waitress who will tell you the specials of the day. There might be a sommelier, and you will probably get a visit by either the general manager or the owner before the dinner is over. And when it gets to dessert, if you decline to order anything they will bring you a little something sweet anyway.

You will also hear all the code words and phrases. Enjoy. Sparkling or Flat? May I take your coat? Everything all right? As for the chopped steak with onions or spaghetti and meatballs somewhere. It can still be done.

The trouble is, that given zoning, health department rules and the like, the number of restaurants on the East End has stayed pretty much the same over the years. It is simply impossible to get commercial property that has not had a restaurant license before and go through all the rigmarole to build one. Think of it. Parking. Plumbing. The Neighbors. Fire Code laws. Exhaust venting. Health requirements. Seating limitations. Kitchen permits. Liquor licenses. It takes years. And even then it can't be done.

At the same time this has been going on, the population of the Hamptons, particularly in the summer time, has tripled and quadrupled. What we now have, for the group of people who have never learned how to cook and who never married someone who knows how to cook — I am among this group — is a whole lot of people fighting for limited space every night in restaurants. As eating is necessary to survival, anxiety and stress results. If you don't play your cards right, you could starve. Right here in the Hamptons. And from this come stories. So here is one.

Last week, the week before Memorial Day, I food, it is spectacular. Prepared by chefs who are accorded all the luxuries of rock stars, it measures up to the very finest stuff you might find in Manhattan. It will be Pacific Rim food, or Khmer Thai or Brazilian. These are the cuisines that are relatively new in the Hamptons. And personally I am delighted to have them.

became suddenly aware that the summer battle over restaurant seating had begun. It was limited to Friday and Saturday nights to be sure. But I eat on both those days. I began to look into the matter on Wednesday.

Now, what I have done to deal with all of this, is to try to cozy up to three or four particular restaurants. I have found which ones they are in the most unaggressive way. During the off-season I go to them. If I like the food and if they are nice to me, they make the semi-finals. If they make a big fuss over me, smiling and telling me they are glad to see me here, they get four stars from me and that is where I go.

In some ways, it is like a flirtation. There have been times I have gone to a restaurant and they've been so happy to see me, everybody seems to love the food, except I don't. There's something about it. So I don't go there, but I feel bad for them. Like I jilted them. So this cuts both ways.

Anyway, on Wednesday, I got up my courage and called one of my four star restaurant friends to make a very difficult request — Nick & Toni's in East Hampton — and I asked if they could accommodate me for dinner for me and my significant other on Friday night at 7 p.m. I got through to them at ten minutes past two.

I should explain this. Nick & Toni's is on my list but it is also on probably half the town's list. They can almost pick and choose whom they want to eat there in the summertime. As a B List Celebrity — I have no illusions — I am fussed over in the wintertime and they find room for me almost any time I want. When summer arrives they get the A List. And they only have so many seats. I had less than a snowball's chance in hell of getting 7 p.m. on a Friday night. But that Wednesday I thought, what the hell. All they can do is reject me. So I started calling them at one minute to two. Before two, they don't answer the phone. A recording answers to tell you that you have to call after two.

Somehow, at ten after, instead of a busy signal, I got through. And yes, they were totally booked, but they would figure something out and accommodate us. I can't tell you how much this meant to me. It was an announcement that I might be graduating to B Plus-hood. How else to explain it? The A List people not coming out? Naah.

It should be noted here that there is a certain irony about Nick & Toni's. They have been in business now almost twenty years. But before that, the restaurant occupying the site — remember what I said at the top of the article about restaurant locations — was Ma Bergman's, an inexpensive family restaurant most noted for Ma Bergman's special spaghetti and meatballs and her special Italian hospitality. I cannot explain how she was a Bergman. She was Italian. And if the place were full, one of her teenage kids doing her homework at a table in the dining room would be asked very nicely to pack up and go upstairs to the apartment. The customers needed a table.

I savored the idea of Nick & Toni's at 7 p.m. on a Friday night for the whole rest of the week. I even thought to call them up and ask them for one of the prime tables. It's in the front room, right near the front door, one of eight tables filled with A List people, between which pass all the B List people heading for the dining rooms in the back. But I didn't call. I didn't want to push my luck. I also savored the thought of my favorite dinner at Nick & Toni's, which is the crispy oven roasted chicken and potatoes with bacon pieces. Yum.

So then came Friday afternoon and I went out on the beach in my four-wheel drive and wrote a story for this paper on my laptop. When I got it done, the sun was low in the sky and the clock read six thirty.

I called Nick & Toni's from the car on my cell phone.

"Everything is fine," I said, "but we might be a little late. I'm just going home. I should get there at 7, and to you at maybe 7:10."

"No rush. We'll expect you at 7:30."

This is what I mean about being nice to me. I pulled in the driveway to find that my significant other had her 10-year-old female cocker spaniel on a leash out in the back yard. She was trying to make her throw up.

"I gave her a dose of Hydrogen Peroxide," she said. "The vet said I had to do it. Her belly is all distended."

"What happened?" I asked.

"Somebody left a loaf of bread on the kitchen table," she said. "She ate it."

"The whole thing?"

"Yes." She was walking the dog around and

How Hubris (Look it up) Will Send a Woman to Jail in California

By Dan Rattiner

I thought you might like to know how the case came out involving that woman who "found" a finger in her chili at Wendy's. The police apparently put a bug on the woman and her husband, grilled all the neighbors and finally came up with a man who is the brother-in-law of the husband who actually did lose a finger in an industrial accident at a concrete plant where he worked, two weeks before the finger was "found."

And it's his finger. The police still have it, of course. It's evidence. And they put a little tag on it. And so I guess they brought the brother-in-law in and grabbed him by the wrists and there was the incriminating evidence on one of his hands — only four fingers. They then took the finger — I'm just imagining this is what happened of course — and brought it over to this fellow and tried to match it up to his other fingers and, guess what! Yup! It fit. And to paraphrase the late and beloved Johnny Cochran "if the finger fit then you must convict."

And so he must have said sew it back, sew it back, I can be whole again, and the police must have said too bad for you Mr. Conspirator. You're under arrest too. And so, having fingered the perp, they led him away.

And so there you are. And there are several morals of this story. One is that if you run a scam where you pretend to find a finger in the chili of a fast food restaurant, it's probably a bad idea to go on a regional TV news program to get some free publicity about it which is what the "victim" did. You're much better off just taking the nuisance lawsuit prevention settlement offer — usually in the tens of thousands of dollars, and just quietly walking away counting the money. What's the matter with these people?

They were seduced, I believe, by TV, by the promise of fifteen minutes of fame. And it cost them.

In this case, the TV show created a panic, caused at least some people in California to shy away from going to Wendy's, and in the subsequent weeks, resulted in a revenue loss in the millions of dollars a day at Wendy's around the state. And nothing pisses off the executives of a national company than losses in the millions of dollars a day. And so there was no stone unturned and no finger left uninspected in order to prove this woman wrong. The search for the missing finger became a hunt for the authorities of California, about equal in intensity to the search for the answer to Who Killed JFK, or the cause of the explosion of Flight 800

RESIDING IN SOUTHAMPTON VILLAGE (MAYBE)

By Dan Rattiner

You'd think the people who run the Village of Southampton would know where that Village ends and the Township within which it resides, begins. There would be a sign. Maybe something announcing where the Knights of Columbus or the Rotary meets or something that says No Peddlers or No Parking on Village Streets from 2 to 4 a.m. or in the case of Southampton Village the sign that reads Please Obey Our Dress Codes.

It would not be a blurred line. It would be a very clear line, maybe an inch wide or maybe a laser beam wide and if you ran toward it the cops could chase you until you got over the line and then they would have to turn back.

Well, nobody's exactly sure right now about the boundary of Southampton Village at the spot where it crosses Tuckahoe Road. And it matters. It really does. It is possible that, depending upon where this line is, that all the laws of the Village passed during the last fifteen years by just one vote shouldn't have counted.

The discovery about this borderline has come about because of the stiff competition being waged in the upcoming Mayoralty and Trustee elections in that Village. And the discrepancy about that line, which seems to involve about twenty-five feet, looms large.

In one scenario, the borderline of the Village of Southampton Village crosses the property of Harold Steudte, a well-known builder, who owns a home on an acre fronting onto Tuckahoe Lane not far from the Tuckahoe School. Mr. Steudte, who is a sitting Trustee, has a survey done by the firm of Squires and Holden in 1988, and it shows the dotted line crossing his property right at the back of his back yard. Almost all his property is not in the Village. But there's this small triangle about or the pursuit of the Muslim terrorists who ordered 9/11. How much taxpayer's money was spent to hire these authorities to do this for Wendy's?

In the words of a prosecuting attorney in the case of Ronald O. Perelman versus Morgan Stanley, when it comes to corporations, it's all about the money. Perelman, who lives in East Hampton and happens to be a billionaire, was suing Morgan Stanley for defrauding him. The jury had already awarded him $600 million in provable damages. Now they were being asked to consider giving him up to $1.9 billion in punitive damages.

"Since you can't spank a corporation," said lawyer Jack Scarfalo, "since you can't send it to bed without supper or restrict it for the weekend, or, for that matter, send it to jail, the only way you can punish a corporation is by extracting from its pocketbook a sum of money."

The jury gave Perelman $850 million.

So it's really not about whether our procedures are so good that a finger in the chili would be an impossibility. If you say you found one in some chili, we'll give you $20,000 and no questions asked. But if you tell a TV station you found one and this results in a ten million dollar panic of lost business, we'll pursue you and your nine fingered friend Brian Rossiter to the ends of the earth, pin your asses to the wall and send you packing off to jail. That is how much we corporations value our reputations. • around. Occasionally the dog stopped, the muscles in her stomach flexing and unflexing. But then she walked on.

"I have to keep her walking."

"Is there anything I can do?" I asked.

"You can get more Hydrogen Peroxide. It's by the kitchen sink. Put four tablespoons in a cup."

I did that, and while I was measuring out the four tablespoons, I glanced at the clock. 7:10 pm.

Out in the yard, the dog retched on the bricks by the pool. I don't want to describe this in any detail, but I ran and got paper towels and a plastic bag and took care of it. It was a little retch. The dog retched again. So I cleaned up that. 7:20 p.m.

"Is that enough?" I asked my girlfriend.

"She's still distended."

I called Nick & Toni's. Let me tell you, stand them up, stand any restaurant up and you are off the list. "I have a sick dog," I told them. "We're trying to make her throw up."

"And if she doesn't throw up more," my girlfriend said from the patio, "we have to take her to the hospital."

"I will call you back in ten more minutes."

Who has a dog that eats a loaf of bread? A huge side of beef, I can understand. But bread?

This ten-year-old dog will eat anything that is left out. She'll eat Fritos. Broccoli. She has no sense of what might be good or bad. We have other dogs. To feed the other dogs, we have to take the cocker spaniel into the bedroom for a half hour. Otherwise she eats everybody's dinner. There is no logical explanation for this, except, maybe, she was deprived at some point in the distant past, scarred for life. I don't know. She needs a psychiatrist.

Now it was 7:30 p.m., the bewitching hour. Nick & Toni's is just ten minutes from my house. And the dog had thrown up a third time. But she still looked distended. She kept trying to lie down.

"Oh, no, you don't," my girlfriend would say and pull her to her feet. The vet had said keep her walking.

At 7:35, the dog threw up a fourth time. I tried to be nonchalant about it. "Do you think that's enough?" I asked.

Dishonest Lobbying Costs Broadwater Round One on the East End

By Mark P. Greenstein

Houston-based Broadwater Energy is the joint venture of TransCanada Corporation and Shell Oil. They hope to build the first, floating offshore gas terminal on the Long Island Sound and have it complete by as early as 2010. This gas terminal would be used for super tankers and others carrying natural gas in concentrated liquid form called LNG (Liquid Natural Gas).

In order for Broadwater Energy's proposal to be accepted, they believe, it would be helpful to have popular support from those residents living and working close to the proposed gas terminal. To accomplish this they hired several well-known former government officials. Most notable of these who's who of movers and shakers of industry and politics is none other than former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani. To win Suffolk County's support, Broadwater also hired John Gallagher, the former Suffolk County Police Commissioner and Bob Gaffney the former Suffolk County Executive.

With such a distinguished consortium of individuals working as consultants and lobbyists in support of Broadwater it would seem like a sure bet that Broadwater would be able to get their proposal to build their floating gas terminal on the Sound approved on the local and State levels.

The gas terminal Broadwater hopes to build would be 1200 feet long, longer than the world's largest ocean liner, The Queen Mary II. It would be located about 9 miles north of the Shoreham Wading River on the Long Island Sound and approximately halfway between New York (Long Island) and Connecticut.

Legislator Jon Cooper (D. Huntington) is against this "floating LNG barge in the Sound, not only for environmental reasons but also, I saw it as a potential terrorist target. Also 80-85% of the natural gas would be used in the Metropolitan New York and Connecticut areas and not even used here," Cooper said.

So he sponsored a bill to oppose the Broadwater facility to show the State and federal governments that the 1.5 million residents in Suffolk County do not need Broadwater in their backyard.

Broadwater's PR plan was to first send out mailers and then follow up with phone solicitations inviting the Long Island residents to be immediately transferred to their legislators where they could then ask their legislators to support and call for a full and fair review of Broadwater and for cheaper energy sources as

TOUGH ON GROUP RENTERS IN SOUTHAMPTON

By David Stoll

Largely due to uncommonly rainy and cold weekend weather throughout the winter and spring, many summer rentals are still on the market, and owners are now focusing on July/August rentals rather than seasonal rentals. That is probably a good thing, because it is not too late for homeowners in the Southampton Township to learn what is required of them before they rent their home for the season. The word on the street is that this summer, Southampton plans to vigorously enforce laws long on the book requiring people renting their homes for the summer season to go through an arduous permit process. The rules themselves and the enhanced enforcement are meant to prevent the share houses that have become notorious in recent seasons because of noise, parking and other nuisances.

Here is the gist of what owners need to do.

In order for a homeowner to rent his house for all or part of a season, he must obtain a permit from the Town Building Inspector. The permit application, which must be filed before the rental period begins, is required to contain:

- the names/addresses of each owner
- the address and tax map number of the house being rented

- the number of tenants who will occupy the house

- a floor plan showing the location and size of each bedroom

- a copy of a contract between the homeowner and a garbage hauler providing for at least weekly garbage removal, along with an affidavit from the hauler that it has been pre-paid for the entire season (or an affidavit from the owner acknowledging responsibility for garbage removal)

- the names and addresses of each tenant
- the length of the rental

the solicitors would request of the residents.

Suddenly it seemed that residents on the phone with these solicitors were immediately transferred with or without their approval, and with or without, in some cases, their understanding that they were being put directly through to a phone call right then to their legislators offices. Suddenly all 18 legislators began to receive a high volume of phone calls being routed to their office phone numbers.

A month ago at the first vote of Jon Cooper's resolution to oppose the Broadwater proposal there weren't enough votes to approve or reject the bill. Out of 18 legislators, 10 were needed to reject the project and to show Broadwater that they didn't have the support of Suffolk County's Legislature.

At the first vote only 8 voted against and the rest voted to give the Broadwater proposal more time to present their case once again, planning to meet a month later for a second vote on Broadwater. But now, this obnoxious behavior, totally alienated the legislators.

Broadwater then set into motion a public relations and lobbying strategy involving a massive mailing and telemarketing campaign intended to win the support of the majority of legislators and residents.

"The second and decisive vote took place last Tuesday and passed unanimously against Broadwater. We ended getting every legislator to vote against the proposal," Jon Cooper said. "The phone barrages on behalf of Broadwater that took place the previous Wednesday, Thursday and Friday seemed to have the opposite effect than they intended. Broadwater's aggressive tactics backfired against them. Before the second vote was taken this past Tuesday, I spent four months lobbying and only got 8 votes against the Broadwater Proposal. Now there were a lot of people on the phone not knowing to whom or why they were being patched in to my office. This is a violation of the Federal Telecommunications Act. You cannot patch people directly in to offices when lobbying a cause, especially when they tell you that they don't want to be patched in. In many cases homeowners said, "No," they didn't want to have their call forwarded on to me and other legislators. I answered these calls and it seemed that most didn't know even why the call was forwarded to me," Jon Cooper said.

"Either through mailing or phone solicitations they would ask residents to support Broadwater, would say their project would lower gas prices. They would then mislead them about a gas pipeline, then even go so far as to say that I was still undecided and on the fence in my decision even though I was an opponent of the project and they, the residents, should call me to see that a fair hearing on Broadwater was conducted."

Legislator Jay Schneiderman (R. Montauk) said, "I'd answer the many phone calls and say, 'Legislator Jay Schniederman, how may I help you?' and some would answer, 'I'd like a full review regarding Broad..something or other? I'm not sure.' Others would say, 'I don't know why they forwarded my call on to you?' I got about 40 calls like this.

"Once we commercialize the Sound what other floating utilities stations will get involved? This could open up a Pandora's box," Schneiderman continued. "There are more than a handful of security issues. What are the provisions against a terrorist flying a plane into the LNG terminal? Or a boat rigged with bombs coming along side the terminal? These are legitimate public safety concerns. I see zero benefit and a lot of potential down side."

"I feel Broadwater is the wrong direction for us. I support clean, renewable energy technologies like wind and solar and I am trying to promote an offshore wind project off Robert Moses State Park with LIPA's (Long Island Power Authority) participation. It would be the nations first offshore wind farm."

FERC (The Federal Energy Regulation Commission) is responsible for assessing the environmental impact and determining if Broadwater's construction is in the public interest. Three of four of FERC's panel members are Republicans appointed by President George W. Bush. FERC has the authority to override any local or state decision concerning Broadwater. However, Broadwater would still need an agreement to lease bottom lands in the Long Island Sound and would also need environmental permits that are in compliance with air and water pollution rules.

Connecticut State legislators and New York politicians are rallying against this proposal for numerous reasons including the environmental and terrorist threats.

This gas terminal will potentially hold up to 92.5 million gallons of LNG (liquid natural gas). A study was recently concluded at the Institute for Energy, Law and Enterprise at the University of Houston Law Center that found that when a supertanker with three tanks holding about 20 million gallons ruptured and ignited, the resulting blaze would measure 2000 feet across and be hot enough to cause second degree burns 1.3 miles away.

There have been at least 15 significant spills since 1965, including two explosions with deadly fires in Maryland in 1979 and Algeria in 2004. The one in Algeria killed scores of people with $800 million in damages.

Richard Amper, executive director of the Long Island Pine Barren Society, said, "We may just beat this monster if we all band together. This has the magnitude of the threat that Shoreham(Power Plant) had."

Distinctive arrangements for every occasion.

Police Fair

Sirens, Whistles, Handcuffs, Flashing Lights and Motorcycles Here

By David Lion Rattiner

The East Hampton Village Police Department last Saturday held a small fair in Herrick Park to give a demonstration in law enforcement. It was a lot of fun. Many of the village of East Hampton's finest were there to show kids how to turn the sirens on in their squad cars and how to use the bullhorn to shout out commands. When I walked up to Herrick Park on Saturday, I was amazed at how many kids were so excited to see police officers and their stuff. I thought I was going to be the excited one.

The police had the event set up in a way that made it easy to see all of the different things that they use in law enforcement. They set up all of their different vehicles in a circle, and had officers standing in front of the vehicles so that kids could walk up to them and ask them questions about what it is like being a police officer. As I walked around taking pictures, I noticed that one of the cops in front of the four wheeler looked very familiar. "Hey Dave! How are you?" he said to me when he saw me.

"Chris Jack? Is that you? I don't believe it. You are a cop now?"

"I'm a cop now. Are you reporting on this for Dan's Papers?"

"Yeah, this seems like a great thing to do for the kids. Wow man, this is so amazing that you are a cop. Congratulations, this is just fantastic."

I came to learn that one of the kids that I graduated high school with is now one of East Hampton's finest, protecting and serving the public. I then met a couple of other rookies who also went to East Hampton High School. All of them were sharp as whistles as one would expect from an East Hampton police officer. This was very strange for me because the last time I saw these people was nearly five years ago in the school cafeteria. Things have certainly changed since then, for the better.

After briefly speaking with Chris about his accomplishments I began to roam the different tables that the police had set up for all to see. One of the tables had automatic weapons lying 30 feet on a side where it clips off a piece of what he owns.

According to those who have seen it, Steudte has posted a sign out in his backyard way out there that reads WELCOME TO SOUTHAMPTON VILLAGE. And so it is and so you are. This is important because the law requires that any Trustee on the Village Board be a resident of the Village with his home on the property. Steudte does not claim that his home is in the Village. But his backyard is. And so he qualifies.

But now, as happens every two years in the Village of Southampton, elections are being held for Mr. Steudte's seat and several of his opponents, together with several concerned citizens, say that Mr. Steudte does not now and never has lived in the Village. The survey done is some kind of fake. He is an outlander and has no business being in office in that entity.

They have pointed out a strange set of circumstances that seem to bear this out. Steudte was first elected to the Village Board in 1991. But before that, in 1990, he had been a member of the Zoning Board of Appeals. That year, 1990, coincides exactly with when Steudte's name first appears on the tax roles of that Village. He paid a total of $7.67 for his little sliver of uninhabited land that year. Is it possible that the line crossing his property suddenly appeared in 1990 just as he needed to qualify as a resident of the Village, but not before? If it was there before, why wasn't he paying taxes on it?

The group opposing Steudte commissioned their own surveyors to find out where the Village line was. On May 5 of this year, the well-known firm of Young and Young in Riverhead came to the electrifying conclusion that the Village line never enters Mr. Steudte's property. It crosses behind the back of his property six feet onto the next property. Steudte, it seems, is indeed an outlander. Should never have been elected. And should be prevented from being a candidate in the election of November 2005. The group filed a petition with the State to that effect.

How could this be? How could two reputable surveyors, following a Village boundary, come to make lines that are about twenty five feet apart one from another? In surveying, this is a huge difference.

An investigation I have conducted seems to show evidence favoring the group opposed to Mr. Steudte. First of all, there is the coincidence of the year 1990. He needed to be a resident to run for office. Suddenly, in 1990, a line purportedly on a tax map from 1988 appears to show he is a resident. But he has not paid taxes during these years.

The second piece of evidence comes from the Village Tax assessor's office. An inquiry there shows that from the Village's perspective, there is no record of a purchase date for this piece of land, and there is no recorded date when it was entered on the tax rolls. Daniele Burns, who is the tax assessor, said she was surprised to find that this information did not appear on his tax folder. It is most unusual.

She looked further, into the County records. It has not been recorded as a purchase of Village property there either, although she did say it was possible that the County just hadn't gotten around to entering data that old into the computers.

"Last year, Mr. Steudte paid $13.41," she said. Taxes have almost doubled since he started paying them fifteen years ago, although he hasn't put anything on the parcel. I might note that this is about double the rate of inflation during these fifteen years. One can, I suppose, judge Mr. Steudte about this when vote time comes — if he survives this challenge — because he bears at least part of the responsibility of defending the Village budget.

Another thing that points toward the accuracy of the Young and Young survey is the fact that Mr. Steudte and his wife had been owners of this property for many years before 1990. They purchased the land, and the deed was filed in 1978. This deed describes this parcel of land as being entirely outside the Village of Southampton. If it isn't, why isn't the deed indicated that way? And if it was revised, why is there no revision filed?

One piece of additional information that would be very interesting to know would involve the neighboring municipality, the Town of Southampton, in which the deed still describes the property. If the size of this parcel is still the same as it was before 1990, without this little sliver lopped off when it was "discovered," then Southampton Town still is laying claim to it, and Mr. Steudte has paid taxes to on it. Naturally that was the first table that I had to check out. I said goodbye and good luck to Officer Jack as I marched over to the table with the machine guns. This was pretty neat.

On this table of modern weaponry lay a less-lethal shotgun with a bean bag bullet. "This will only knock somebody out if they are hit with it, it won't kill them," said the officer tending the table. Also at the table were helmets, night vision goggles, mp5 assault rifles and other various assault rifles. This seemed like a lot of dangerous equipment for a town like East Hampton. But I came to learn that this table was displaying a special task force that is made up of police officers from all of the surrounding towns. The task force is for extreme situations only, such as a hostage situation. Thankfully, they haven't been needed, but they are ready should they be.

The kids at the event seemed to enjoy it very much and officers were very welcoming and willing to show and explain to them what they use certain vehicles for. One of the kids at the event was infatuated with the police motorcycles that were on display. There were two monstrous Harley Davidson police motorcycles that were parked right next to each other. Officer Kenneth Brabant was helping kids sit on the motorcycles as he explained to them what kinds of things the motorcycle could do. Kids' faces lit up with joy the second they sat on the motorcycle, as excited parents and family took pictures.

My hat is off to the East Hampton Village Police Department, not only because of their fine work keeping East Hampton a safe and fun place to be but also because of the wonderful demonstration that they held. This demonstration has probably inspired twenty kids to grow up and become police officers one day. It was a great idea for the village to run an event like this.

More People Express Interest in Burning Down their House for $$$

By David Lion Rattiner

When is the Hamptons elite going to stop being such a strange folk? We all know the remarkable story of Christopher White, a Manhattan real estate attorney who purchased the house in front of his for $2.1 million, then donated it to the Montauk Fire Department, only to have it burned to the ground last week in a magnificent ball of flames to train the brave men and women of the volunteer fire department. Why did he want his new, valuable asset burned to the ground? Simple. The house was blocking his water view.

One would think that this kind of activity would only happen at the very most once a year. After all, who in their right mind would want to purchase a house only to have it burned to the ground? Well, you would be surprised to know that Mr. White isn't the only one that is interested in having his house burned to the ground. Another inquiry to set a house on fire has appeared on the table of the East Hampton Town Zoning Board. John Finely, the owner of two houses on one lot on Beach Lane in Wainscott is interested in setting his property ablaze.

Mr. Finely wants to build a bigger and better house where one of his 1,400 square foot houses currently is. Instead of hiring a demolition crew however, he would rather have the Bridgehampton Fire Department do the work.

This isn't the first time that Mr. Finely has set one of his houses on fire. The other, larger house Mr. Finely owns was burned to the ground by the Bridgehampton Fire Department. In replacement of that house, a 6,500 square foot house is currently in the process of being built; it is both bigger and better than the original house that stood there.

One has to wonder why someone would rather burn their house to the ground than have it demolished by a wrecking company. The answer to this question is relatively simple. Money. There is a tax benefit for donating your house to the fire department as well as having the ability to avoid the costs of hiring a bulldozer to destroy the house. Not to mention it is

SUFFOLK COUNTY: LEADING THE NATION IN ....

By David Stoll

Suffolk County's motto could be "Democracy in Action" or even "The County of Firsts." That is because Suffolk County, among the oldest in the nation, often finds itself on the forefront of issues relating to health, safety and the environment, passing laws that would later become common throughout or adopted by the state and even the nation. You don't have to agree with all of the county's actions to appreciate the Framers' wisdom in preserving the ability of States and localities to be "Laboratories of Democracy," as they teach in civics class. Consider some Suffolk County firsts.

In the 1980s, everyone in the Nation washed their clothes with laundry detergents that contained environmentally-dangerous phosphates. Suffolk County government was the first to recognize this hazard and banned the use of phosphates, which caused the removal of all major detergents from the shelves. Consequently, local residents used different detergents that made their clothes turn gray. As a result, many East Enders smuggled banned detergents to the area. This went on for about five or six months as other counties in the country followed suit and banned the detergents as well. In response, the corporations making the detergents changed their formula to make a safer detergent that did not turn one's clothes gray.

Suffolk County was the first county in the nation to ban the sale of mercury thermometers. An Internet search shows that many counties have followed. I remember those thermometers from my childhood — they mercury point always seemed to break off if you really cool to watch a house burn to the ground.

So how come all of the sudden people are interested in burning down or destroying their homes? The answer is the incredible real estate prices in the Hamptons. The cost of land in a house is enormous. If you already own however, it is actually cheaper to tear down and rebuild. Donating to the fire department can lower the costs of demolition because of a tax break. And so, as many people enjoy upgrades in their living situation, they burn it to the ground.

The fire department couldn't be happier about the situation because it gives them the ability to keep up on their blaze battling skills. Fire Chief Charlie Grimes comments, "You can't believe how valuable it is to have someone donate a house so we can train. This kind of training prepares us for the real thing better than anything else. It helps us save lives, including ours during the real thing." However, it is not a win/win situation for all. The smoke from the fires is much more damaging to the air than having a wrecking crew bring down the house.

So what does the future of the Hamptons hold if people continue to want to tear down and rebuild their homes? Imagine sun tanning down at the beach and suddenly watching five or six mansions go up in flames and burn to the ground as you try to burn your skin from the sun. The beach could suddenly become engulfed in black smoke as dozens of people trying to keep up with upgrading their homes by burning their houses to the ground. Will the discovery of this new demolition technique mean that anyone who wants to tear down and rebuild can simply call up the fire department before they light a match in their living room? Will the Hamptons be a pyromaniacs dream come true where arson is actually encouraged in certain parts of the town? Probably not.

The process of having your house approved to be burned to the ground and put out by the fire department is a review by local officials, and will most likely not be allowed to get out of hand. Safety for the volunteers of the fire department as well as for the environment is going to be carefully monitored. Firemen are not going to be so busy putting out deliberate fires that they won't be able to handle real emergencies. This is simply a matter of training firemen to do better.

Suffolk (continued from previous page)

dropped the thermometer. (Perhaps that explains my twisted sense of humor). Suffolk County is also the first to impose laws forcing power plants to reduce the amount of carbon dioxide released into the air.

Suffolk County banned dietary supplements containing Ephedra before the FDA took action. While the legality of the FDA's action is now in question (Ephedra, an herb, might not be within the Food and Drug Administration's jurisdiction), the ban in Suffolk County remains intact. Suffolk County became the first to ban the use of hand-held cell phones while driving. Controversial at the time, such laws are quite commonplace today. Suffolk County also became the first county in the nation to adopt a farmland preservation program. This action, along with similar actions by Suffolk's townships and villages, will help prevent Suffolk County from becoming the suburban sprawl that is Nassau County.

Even when counties in other states have acted on an issue, Suffolk County can often be counted on to act before other counties in New York. Suffolk County was the first county in the state to ban smoking in restaurants. Eventually, the state followed suit. And just this year, Suffolk County became the first county in the State to increase the minimum

The Gun Sounds and They're Off to the Races in Sag Harbor

By Christian McLean

Around ten-thirty last Sunday morning I was dreading a day at the beach. It was raining, just like the past five weekends, but instead of staying inside a warm dry house catching up on some much needed television, later that day I was supposed to watch a few brave souls race sailboats off Haven's Beach, in Sag Harbor. The idea of standing on the wet, wind torn shore haunted me all day, but by the time I headed to the races, which began at three, the rain had stopped. Not only had it stopped, but the sun actually came out.

Whether the sun came out or not, the truth is, the water was still way too cold for me to risk getting my feet wet on a sailboat, so I parked my car and then parked my keister on the beach, camera in hand, waiting for the race. It seemed like nothing was happening. Even by three-thirty, JY15s and single handed boats (sailboats to you and me) were still being carted into the bay. There were already several boats on the water, seemingly going about their afternoon with no real direction. There was even a fourteen-year-old girl guiding her Opti (an even smaller sailboat) around several orange buoys in what, from land, seemed to be no real particular order or course. But once all the boats got into the water, all that apparent aimlessness fell by the wayside, and it was time for racing.

These races have taken place for over ten years and could very well be the best kept secret in the Hamptons. Sag Harbor has played host to sailing ships for centuries, and while many of these vessels have exceeded the 40-foot range and frightened novice sailors off their course, Breakwater Yacht Club, on Bay handed boats (Laser, Sunfish, Opti, and Moth). This new class of single-sail vessels offers a greater opportunity for members of the community who already own these relatively inexpensive boats to get more involved with sailing. To make it even more accessible, the entrance fee for the JY class is $50 for the entire four-month season and for the single handed it is only $25. When factored in that a day at the movies can cost a small fortune, the entrance fees are surprisingly low.

Back at the race . . . I sat next to JY racer Steven Hamilton's mother who, being from California, had never seen Sag Harbor before. She was eager to know what was going on in the water and in the beginning was just as confused as I was. We sat on the beach as the two classes raced around the marked out course. The JYs took off first, but because of the light wind, they never seemed to get very much speed, although I'm sure it seemed a lot faster on the water. It was, nevertheless, intense as boats levied for position and wind. A minute after the JYs took off, a horn sounded and the single handed boats were off. The competition was no less fierce as a few boats began to pull away from the pack. I couldn't keep up with the action as I went back and forth between the two classes. From land it was hard to Street, is looking to change that. With the sponsorship of the American Hotel and Suffolk County National Bank, Breakwater Yacht Club will once again host the Sunday One Design Racing series. Although already in its fourth week, it is still very early in the season, which gives local sailors a chance to get involved.

This year the One Design series has expanded. Traditionally, only JY sailboats were used, but a second class has been added, single determine who was skippering the lead boats, but all the action made me wish I still fit in my Sunfish and wasn't such a wimp when it came to cold water — I mean a fourteen-year-old girl was out there, barefoot, and I was packed in layers watching from the shore.

Around five, when the races had ended and the boats returned to shore, I was able to catch up with Lee Oldak who has been racing in the Sunday One Design for the past four years and is currently in charge of the racing series. He was sad to say that he hadn't won the day's race, and instead came in behind veteran One Design racer, Derrick Galen, who has been competing in the races for over ten years. He was eager to discuss how accessible the races are, that they are open to everyone in the community and not just members of the Breakwater Yacht Club. Although as a member you are granted access to the club's sailboats. The Breakwater Yacht Club, located at 51 Bay Street, was founded under the pretence of creating a non-profit, non-elitist, community-based sailing organization, with the intent to educate and foster the growth of sailing in the Sag Harbor area. Its Wednesday Night Summer Series, which begins later in the season, has become a staple of the summer for many in the area, featuring beautiful sailing vessels and intense competition — all in the name of fun, of course. But for me, Sunday's race was different. It was an introduction to a secret world of sailors who race for the enjoyment of being on the water. With few to no fans cheering from the shore, they haul in their mainsails, tighten their jibs and enjoy this time-honored way to wind down the weekend, cold water and all.

Races are held each Sunday between now and September 25. For more information about joining the Sunday One Design Racing Series or the Breakwater Yacht Club please visit www.breakwateryc.com.

- a copy of the deed and most recent tax bill
- an affidavit signed by each owner and each tenant confirming that they have received copies of Town ordinances concerning seasonal rentals, noise, vehicle parking restrictions on residential lots and refuse disposal, and that they agree to abide by those laws.

The Building Inspector must grant the permit if all of these requirements are satisfied and the $100 application fee is paid. He must deny the permit if any of these requirements is not satisfied. Moreover, only one family may rent a single-family residence, and no tenant who is not specified in the permit application may occupy the house. Also, the maximum number of people who can occupy a house is two per conventional bedroom (if the bedroom is at least 120 square feet), and the selling of shares is prohibited. The maximum number of cars that can be parked in the driveway overnight is the number of bedrooms plus one. Weekly rentals are not permitted.

Fines for violations of the rules range from $1,000 to $8,000 for the first offense (and possibly up to 6 months in jail), and from $3,000 to $15,000 for each additional offense (also with possible jail time). A continuing offense is counted as an additional offense for each week that it is ongoing.

So, if you are renting your home for any part of the summer, you may wish to dot your i's and cross your t's.

Who's Here

By Dan Rattiner

Barbaralee Diamonstein-Spielvogel is one of those amazing New Yorkers who is filled with energy, eager for the day to begin, and eager to get things done all day.

"I wake up in the morning," her husband, Carl Spielvogel, has told me, "and just watch her go. It is remarkable."

Barbaralee is the daughter of a successful businessman and an Englishwoman, both of whom were very interested in the intellectual life. Her mother founded an organization called "The Culture Club," a group that numbered more than a thousand which met in cultural venues in the city to enjoy opera, dance and the like. Barbaralee went to the University of Virginia, and it was while she was there getting her bachelor's degree that she became seriously interested in architecture and design. The school was located in the classic colonial town of Charlottesville and just a dozen or so miles from Williamsburg. How could she not be moved by where she was? After graduation she moved back to New York, and attended graduate school at New York University, where she got her doctorate in history with high honors. After that, she returned to Washington to work for a time as a presidential assistant. Then, in 1972, with her energy and drive apparent to all, she was named by Mayor John Lindsay as the first Cultural Affairs Commissioner of the City of New York.

Over the years, from that time to this, she has served on many cultural, historical and architectural commissions in the city, most notably as the Chair of the New York City Landmarks Preservation Commission, a post she held through numerous mayoralty administrations, both Democrat and Republican, for a total of fifteen years, the longest term of office in that post in its history. She is currently the chair of the Historic Landmarks Preservation Center.

It is fair to say that Barbaralee, as she is called by just about everybody who knows her, has made a considerable impact on the City of New York. As Landmarks Preservation Chairman, she inaugurated a project to put plaques on historic buildings in the city. Currently, there are 172 of these red oval plaques on various buildings, each one a reminder to passers-by, historians, tourists, neighborhood residents and owners that what they have there is precious to this city. They are on the buildings that have served as homes for Andy Warhol, John Steinbeck, Marian Anderson, James Baldwin, Cecil B. DeMille, Woody Guthrie, Jack Kerouac, Vladimir name, which indicates the district. For example, at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Seventieth Street, both of the street signs on Horowitz, Fiorello LaGuardia and Thurgood Marshall, just to name a few.

She also inaugurated a plan to have the location of historic districts marked on street signs. In 83 districts around the city, all the names of the streets are on signs in the same size type as everywhere else — but the signs are actually taller, and they thus accommodate a second though smaller line above the street the poles bear the phrase UPPER EAST SIDE HISTORIC DISTRICT. And just in case you want more, there is, below those signs, a metal sign of a map showing the outlines of that district and a brief description of why that district is historic. All these items, the medallions, the street name signs and the map signs, are in a predominantly maroon color. You understand they are all related. To a great degree, the City of New York today is a walking history lesson thanks to Barbaralee. And now the federal Government is wading in.

I was sitting with her in the living room of her Southampton home. "The Department of the Interior has decided to fund a red medallion project all over the country. I will be doing a considerable amount of traveling to help that department select what should be landmarked in this way in small towns all over the country."

Barbaralee recently completed her nineteenth book, THE LANDMARKS OF NEW YORK, a 650 page opus — she calls it her Magnum Opus — which describes, on an average of three to a page, each and every site and building in the City of New York that has been given landmark status. There are 1,120 of them, and they include the Plaza, the Empire State Building, the Statue of Liberty, the Chrysler Building, 104 interiors, 9 scenic views and 83 historic districts. THE LANDMARKS OF NEW YORK is oversize and must weigh five pounds.

I had some questions for her.

"This book is an enormous undertaking. How long did it take you to write?"

"I've been working on it for four years. It's a million words."

"Did you dictate it?"

She held up an index finger. "I typed it with this," she said.

"What do you think of the design for the Freedom Tower?"

"Because I'm involved with the designers in other commissions, it is inappropriate for me to respond."

"What landmark, of all those in the city, is your favorite?" I asked.

"It's like asking which is my favorite child. They are so diverse."

"Pick one."

"One that has great meaning for me is the Bowne House in Flushing, Queens. When my new book came out last month, PARADE Magazine ran a feature on it and asked me to talk about one particular historic building, and that is the one that I chose. It's a wood frame building, still standing, one of the very oldest in the city, built in 1661 when New York was New Amsterdam.

"It was built by John Bowne. He had married a woman who had become a Quaker, 'an abominable sect' according to Peter Stuyvesant who was in charge of the New Amsterdam colony for the founders of it, the Dutch West India Company.

Bowne allowed his wife to hold services in the house. And because he did not cease and desist, as Stuyvesant asked, he was locked in a dungeon with bread-and-water rations, and then banished back to Holland.

"But Bowne would not give up. He went to court in Amsterdam, and invoked a declaration of religious freedom that had been signed in Flushing by the settlers there three years before. It was known as the 'Flushing Remonstrance,' a document guaranteeing that Dutch settlers in the New World would have freedom of conscience and freedom of religion. It said that a law guaranteeing 'love, peace and liberty' should be extended to all residents, including 'to Jews, Turks and Egyptians.' After 19 months, Bowne was acquitted, and returned home to Flushing. It is believed by many that the 'Flushing Remonstrance' was the precursor of America's Bill of Rights.

"As a result of this story appearing in PARADE, which has 85 million readers, I received a flood of mail from people who wanted to know more about it and from people who are descended from the Bownes — did you know that four mayors of New York and six presidents, including both Presidents Bush — are descendants of Bowne?"

We talked some more about the landmarks of New York. She said there will be a very big deal shortly as we celebrate the 70th anniversary of the Chrysler Building, with the Empire State Building anniversary shortly after that.

She talked about many other landmarks. Did you know that the Chelsea Apartments on West 23rd Street was once home to Dylan Thomas, Mark Twain, Janis Joplin, Bob Dylan and Tennessee Williams? That the Dakota, the famous apartment house on Central Park West, was built in 1884 at a time when that area was the home to squatters and their tin roof shacks, chickens, goats and cows? That the Marine Air Terminal at LaGuardia Airport in Queens was built by the water's edge because it served the Pan American Clippers, which had the world's first air service between New York City and Europe, and were seaplanes?

This Sunday at 5 p.m., Barbaralee Diamonstein-Spielvogel will be talking about her book at Bookhampton in East Hampton.

Barbaralee first came out to the Hamptons forty years ago as a child. In recent years, with her husband, advertising legend Carl Spielvogel, she lived in a large oceanfront mansion reportedly designed by Stanford White on Gin Lane in Southampton. About five years ago, they built a new waterfront house on Lake Agawam. Here, as in their earlier house, they graciously host small and large dinner parties for their many friends. Among those whose work has been celebrated there has been the late artist Roy Lichtenstein, author Tom Wolfe, opera singer Jesse Norman, painter David Hockney, author Russell Shorto (who incidentally wrote the popular "The Island at the Center of the World," about the Dutch colony known as New Amsterdam), and the Clintons.

Three years ago, Carl Spielvogel was named the American Ambassador to Slovakia. He and Barbaralee lived there for the duration of his Ambassadorship. They also have traveled extensively elsewhere.

"He's always taken ME away on trips," she said. "Now I am going to be taking HIM on trips around the country for the Department of the Interior."

As it happened, the book signing for Barbaralee's new book NEW YORK CITY LANDMARKS took place on April 13 at the

Throughout our lives we encounter many people who share similar views and opinions about life, love and "the-art-of-living." However, it's the different views that challenge us to understand and relate to one another in a more productive and proactive way. ABC's "The View," produced by Barbara Walters, is hosted by five very different and intriguing women (Barbara Walters, moderator Meredith Vieira, and hosts Star Jones Reynolds, Elisabeth Hasselback and Joy Behar) from different backgrounds, who share their views and opinions on everything from relationships, family and careers to health and politics.

Comedian Joy Behar has been on board since the show's premiere in August of 1997. Since that time, "The View" has received numerous awards, including the 2003 Daytime Emmy Award for "Outstanding Talk Show." The balance of this unique group is imperative. The discussion of hot topics in the news kicks off the hour-long show each day, taking us from serious matters to light and funny gossip. For many of us, the added sense of humor from Joy Behar's seat is a magical ingredient.

Brooklyn born Behar began her career as an English teacher upon receiving her Master's in English from S.U.N.Y. Stony Brook. After teaching for several years and the break-up of her marriage to Joe Behar with whom she had a daughter with, she decided to head in a different direction. Her gift for making people laugh led her to the New York comedy club scene, center stage at places such like Catch a Rising Star and Caroline's.

Behar would eventually go on to win three MAC awards and a Cable Ace award. Her television credits include "Politically Incorrect with Bill Maher," "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno," "Larry King Live," "Hollywood Squares," ABC's "Spin City," "Who Wants to be a Millionaire," "The Late Show With David Letterman," and "Charlie Rose" as well as her own HBO series, "Baby Boom." In 1991, Behar was named "Personality of the Year" by TV Guide.

Behar has also made her way to film, with appearances in, Cookie with Peter Falk, Manhattan Murder Mystery, directed by Woody Allen, and This Is My Life, directed by Nora Ephron. Added to her long list of credits is a starring role in The Vagina Monologues and a role in the off-Broadway play, The Food

Joy Behar Comedian

Chain. Behar was also the host of a call-in radio show on WABC for three years. And what was the focus of her radio show you ask? Politics laced with a sense of humor. What else? Recently she also was the correspondent for Comedy Central, covering the Democratic Convention.

In 2000, she was the recipient of the Gracie Allen Tribute Award from the Foundation of American Women in Radio and Television and for her special relationship with the gay community, Behar received the New York City Public Special Advocate Award. In addition, she continually contributes various charitable causes and foundations.

Behar's target audience is anyone who will listen, read or watch with an open mind, and she gives advice through other media venues such as a monthly column that she began in October of 2001, "Talk to Me" featured in "Good Housekeeping." Behar wrote a book, titled Joy Shtick: or What Is the Existential Vacuum and Does It Come with Attachments?

Her passionate political views can be witnessed at any of her standup shows as well as on "The View." This past winter, I had the pleasure of experiencing her standup routine at a benefit for Joe Marchese at Guild Hall, in East Hampton. While on stage, Behar demonstrated her talent for making us laugh at the simple things in life as well as more serious topics. President George Bush? Don't even get her started. At this particular show, Behar read off some classic quotes from our President, and the audience was practically rolling in the aisles. Believe me, she doesn't hold anything back and that's what makes her so engaging. Her standup routine is definitely not PG and that's what makes it so real.

Behar spends most of her time in Manhattan where her shows are taped, but on the weekends you can often spot her out and about in the Hamptons.

With Joy, what you see is what you get, and her personality shines through whether you meet her in person or watch her on TV. Its important that women continue to have role models, and Joy Behar, along with her co-hosts on "The View," achieved that when they received the Safe Horizon Champion Award for their continued efforts towards raising awareness of important issues for girls and women, and for being role models dedicated to the obstacles women face with violence and victimization.

This Memorial Day Weekend Joy Behar will be performing at the Westhampton Performing Arts Center in Westhampton Beach on Saturday, May 28th at 8:30 p.m. If you haven't already bought tickets, don't miss the opportunity to catch her show. For more information call 631-288-1500.

"Maybe," she said.

If you know women, you know that is a no. So I called Nick & Toni's. "We have to give up the table," I said.

"No, that's all right," Nick & Toni's said. "We'll continue to hold it for you."

"I'll call you back in five minutes."

To me, the dog looked a great deal less dis-tended than she had looked twenty minutes ago. But I wasn't going to push it.

"Any ideas?" I said.

"Let's order the dinner, pick it up, and bring it home," she said. "If they have anything with scallops, that would be just fine."

"A salad?"

"Garden."

"Drinks?"

"We'll drink here."

I called Nick & Toni's back and ordered scallops with pea shoots and garlic for her and oven roasted chicken crispy with bacon bits for me. And two salads with the dressing on the side.

"How soon should I be there?" I asked.

"Twenty minutes."

Out in the yard, my girlfriend was still marching around with her fat cocker spaniel, not as fat as before but still fat enough to make you think she might not be out of danger.

And so, eating home is what we did. The dog survived. The kid who left the bread out came home later and apologized and said he would never do it again. And we pretended it was Nick & Toni's in our kitchen.

By the way, when I went down to Nick & Toni's to pick up the dinner, they parked me at the bar and fed me a Captain Morgan and Coca Cola which they know I like. These are classy people.

Also, I noticed, among the two rows of A list people, at the very end table in the front — this is the absolute premiere seat at the restaurant — there was sitting an A List male writer who I know to be gay, with a female A List artist who used to be the girlfriend of a rock star. I don't want to name names here, but this is the third time I have seen them together. What is going on?

Diamonstein (continued from page 64)

Urban Center of the Municipal Art Society in Manhattan, and for that event, which attracted so many hundreds of people that they actually ran out of books for Barbaralee to sign, there were on the walls of the reception room of Society an exhibit of 81 photographs of landmark buildings from the book. As a result, the United States Bureau of Cultural Affairs has picked up this photo exhibit of New York City landmarks, and will be taking it to every state in the union and also to 53 foreign countries. The author will be asked to speak at the gallery openings of many of these shows.

Barbaralee has been much honored. She also has an enormously busy schedule. In April she was given the Humanitarian Award of the Jewish Women's Foundation in New York. This past month, on May 10, she moderated a panel at the 92nd Street Y entitled LANDMARKS: A LIVING LEGACY with panelists Robert A. M. Stern, Robert Tierney, James Stewart Polshek and Hugh Hardy. And later in the month, she went to Las Vegas for this years annual meeting of the American Institute of Architects, where, along with Honolulu Mayor Santiago Calatrano, she was awarded a gold medal and made an honorary member of the American Institute of Architects. She is on committees to determine the future of a plan to build a museum/education addition to the Vietnam Veterans Wall in Washington, and for the re-use of the High Line as a public park in New York City. She has also been the interviewer/producer for six television series concerning architecture and the arts for CBS, ABC, A&E, Channel 5 and WNYC-TV, with more to come.

"I wake up in the morning and watch her go," says her husband. Indeed.

Who's Here

By Debbie Tuma

When she is not drilling or filling teeth at her full-time practice in Water Mill, Dr. Beth Rosner is either snowboarding, windsurfing, sailing, jumping her thoroughbred horse over hurdles, riding and fixing race cars, or traveling around the world, lecturing on dental implants.

She recently returned from giving one of these lectures in Bruges, Belgium, and last year she lectured in Croatia, and the year before that in Florence, Italy. Receiving her Fellowship in the International Academy of Dental Facial Aesthetics, three years ago, allowed her to begin lecturing internationally.

But her biggest challenge is combining all this with raising her two children, Regina, 17, and Max, 13, along with her husband, Sag Harbor chiropractor Robert MacBarb.

"When I graduated from New York University Dental School, in 1982, and applied for a hospital residency, I'll never forget that they asked me what was the sense in training me, when I'd just turn around and have kids," said Rosner. "Back then, only ten percent of my graduating class were women, and many people assumed that we would just give up dentistry when we had a family."

But Rosner, an expert multi-tasker, said she always knew that she would do both, plus continue to pursue all her varied interests, which contribute to her well-rounded and happy life.

Rosner has practiced dentistry for over 20 years in the Hamptons. She opened her first office alongside her husband's practice, in the Harborview Professional Building in Sag Harbor, and it was there from 1983-1991. While Dr. MacBarb continues his practice there to this day, Rosner moved to the Wainscott Medical Group from 1991 to 2003. Then, seeking a larger and more personal space, she and her husband bought and renovated an 1870 former Halsey farmhouse on Montauk Highway in Water Mill, where she still maintains a practice on the first floor.

"I've always thought it was important to get my patients to relax, and one of the ways I do this is to provide a more cozy, comfortable office instead of an institutional one," she explained. With this old farmhouse, her patients enter a waiting room with a fireplace, some antique furniture, and lots of framed artwork on the walls. They sit in dental chairs in several converted, brightly painted bedrooms, looking out windows facing scenic farm fields and forsythia. Although Rosner and her family live in East Hampton, they plan to move into this Water

Mill home in the future.

Although her own kids have been raised in the country, Rosner grew up in Queens, in a family of doctors. "My father was a chiropractor, my mother was a nurse, and they had five children," she said. "My older brother, Dr. Louis Rosner, is an ear, nose and throat doctor in Rockville Centre; another brother, Dr. Howard Rosner, is a veterinarian in California; my brother, Dr. Carl Rosner, is a chiropractor in Bay Shore; and my sister, Roberta, who lives near Paris and works for Armani Cosmetics, is married to a physical therapist."

Rosner said when they all get together, they all sit around and talk about "medical stuff."

"Everyone in my family is health-conscious, and I always had a passion for the medical field," she said. "I knew I'd do something in this field, but it was a question on what. I finally chose dentistry, because it combines my interests in biology, mechanics, and art."

Rosner explained that, in addition to her athletic pursuits, she loves to do anything mechanical, working with her hands. "My husband used to support himself during college by fixing foreign cars, and I used to turn the wrench with him," she mused. The two doctors met during their undergraduate schooling at Stony Brook University, while they were skiing at Mount Tremblant, Canada. They married in 1983, and in 2000, they celebrated the new millennium by buying a timeshare at this same mountain, where they vacation with their family.

"We first started coming out to the Hamptons during the late 1970s every weekend to watch Robert's sister, Mary MacBarb, race cars at the old Bridgehampton Race Track. Robert and I built a race car for her, and we also worked as flaggers and with the pit crew. We toured the race circuit with her from Bridgehampton to Lime Rock, CT, to New Hampshire, and the Poconos."

Rosner confesses, "I love speed. Which explains why I love racing of all kinds, including on my horse, on skis and on snowboards and surfboards. It's an adrenaline rush, and also a challenge, which I like."

Rosner and her daughter, Regina, love to ride horses together. Regina, who had her own pony and competed in the Hampton Classic Horse Show, is planning to join the equestrian team at Lehigh College in Pennsylvania, where she will be a freshman. Rosner keeps her horse "Picasso" at the Mecox Bay Farms, and manages to ride and jump him four times a week. She was the "Pre-Adult Hunter's Reserve Champion" on Long Island five years ago.

"I was always into horses growing up, but in the city we never had one," she said. "I never took formal lessons until I was 30, and I have

Albert Einstein's Summer Vacation By Dan Rattiner

On a still, warm morning in June, 1939, a handsome woman walked into Rothman's Department Store on the Main Street of Southold and began looking at items on the shelves.

David Rothman, 42, sucked on his pipe.

There is something about her, he thought. She looks very familiar.

Rothman had been standing by the cash register in the back of the store, listening to a recording of Handel's Water Music, and now he turned the volume down and walked toward the front door.

"May I help you?"

"Yes. I don't suppose you would have such a thing, but I'm looking for a tool that is used to sharpen a sculptor's chisel."

"Hm," Rothman said. He thought for a moment. "As a matter of fact, I think I DO have such a thing. It's been around for a long time. Nobody's bought it, of course. But I'll bet I know just where it is."

Rothman disappeared behind a glass showcase and began to rummage around on a shelf high up on a wall. There were toys, clothes, games, pots and pans, jackets, all the sorts of things you might expect in an old-fashioned general merchandise store.

"Ah, here we are," Rothman said.

He brought the device down.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but you look awfully familiar to me. Have you been in my store before?"

"No. as a matter of fact, we're new in town. My father and I have rented a place for the summer on Nassau Point."

"You're Margot," Rothman said.

"Yes. How did you know?"

"I recognize you from your picture. You're Margot Wibtelar, and your father is Albert Einstein. I've read everything he's ever written. Everything about him. I've seen your picture in magazines."

"My goodness."

"Please take this sharpener with my compliments. And give my regards to your illustrious father."

"Oh, I couldn't."

"Yes, you could. It is a privilege to have Albert Einstein in our town."

* * *

What was relativity all about? How did this incredible discovery, which Rothman had read so avidly about in his department store in Southold, relate the microcosm to the macrocosm? What was the great man working on now? The following morning, as Rothman opened Rothman's Department Store for another day, he hardly dared think that the great Albert Einstein was in their midst for the summer. Perhaps he could arrange some way to get a glimpse of this great man.

And then, at eleven A.M., Albert Einstein appeared at the front door of Rothman's Department Store. He was unmistakable. With a great shock of white hair (Einstein was 60 at the time), a broad midriff and white boxer shorts and sandals, there was never the slightest question that this was he. Rothman's heart was pounding in his chest.

Einstein shuffled in.

I must treat him like any other customer, Rothman thought.

"May I help you?"

"Yes," Einstein said. "My daughter told me one could find anything one wanted in your store. I am looking for sundials."

"Sundials, sundials," Rothman said. "Let me look."

Rothman looked everywhere in the store. Under boxes. On top of shelves. But there were no sundials.

"I thought surely there were some," he finally said. "But you know, I do have one of my own out in the yard out back. Come with me. If you like it you can have it. If not, I can always Top-draw actors, musicians, comedians and dancers will be gracing stages in Sag Harbor, East Hampton, Bridgehampton, Southampton, Westhampton Beach and Montauk over the next several months. Here is a look at who will be here.

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre opens its mainstage season this weekend with the American premiere of Simon Gray's Japes (through June 5). Gray is a prolific playwright, best known in the U.S. for Butley, Otherwise Engaged and Quartermaine's Terms. Japes is about two brothers who share a house and the woman they both love.

Bay Street productions always feature good acting. Sam Robards, Matt McGrath and Francesca Faridany star in Japes. On Monday evening, May 30, when the play is not on, popular television and comedy club funnyman Jeffrey Ross performs in Bay Street's "Comedy Club" series.

The Theatre's mainstage season continues with S.N. Behrman's comedy No Time for Comedy (June 14-July 3) with Daniel Gerroll, Mark Blum and Sharon Lawrence. A revival of Anthony Shaffer's thriller Sleuth plays July 12 through 31, and the musical Pippin will run August 9 through September 4. The "Comedy Club" Monday evening line-up: Robert Klein (June 20), Tony Rock (June 27), Susie Essman (July 18), Paula Poundstone (July 25), Richard Jeni (August 15) and Tony Papa (August 22). Bay Street also has "Kidstreet," children's theater performances during the summer. A program schedule is available at the theater on the corner of Long Wharf and Bay Street. Tickets to all performances can be purchased at the Sag Harbor box office (open from 11 a.m.

Chaka Khan (June 10), comedian Howie Mandel (June 12), Madeleine Peyroux (June 18), Joan Rivers (July 1), Audra McDonald (benefit, July 2), Tony Orlando (July 8), Gary Puckett & Gary Lewis (July 16), Chris Botti (July 30), Emmylou Harris (August 5), Avi Hoffman (August 6), John Pizzarelli (August 12), Ballet Ambassadors (August 26), Dickey Betts (August 27), Bruce Hornsby (August 28), Barbara Cook (Sept. 3) and Los Lobos (Sept. 30).

The Peconic Chamber Orchestra will give several concerts at WHBPAC during the summer and children's theater programs, often with weekday performances, include Stuart Little (July 7), Masked Marvels and Wondertales (July 14), Sleeping Beauty (July 22), Little Red Riding Hood (August 11), and The Frog Prince (August 19).

The entire WHBPAC schedule and ticket ordering can be viewed online at whbpac.org. The box office at the theater, 76 Main St., Westhampton Beach, is now open Wed. through Sun. from noon until 5 p.m. and just before showtime; starting June 22, it will be open from 11 a.m. until 8 p.m. Tickets can also be ordered by telephone at 631-288-1500.

Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center offers a tempting variety of singers, musicians, comedians, dancers, world cinema and children's theater. age for the purchase of cigarettes from 18 to 19, a move designed to help reduce the number of high school kids who smoke. Suffolk County also was the first in the State to pass a so-called "living wage" law, which requires contractors working jobs for the county to pay workers a rate higher than the minimum wage.

So, it was no surprise to learn last week that the Suffolk County legislature may meet soon to consider a bill, proposed by Jay Schneiderman of Montauk and passed out of the Environmental Committee, seeking to ban the use in lawns of certain pesticides currently regulated but not banned by the federal government. Agricultural use would be exempted, as would use required to control health hazards. There is a debate whether such action can be taken, as both the federal and State governments assert that only they, and not the counties, have the power to regulate pesticides. And there is a further debate whether the health benefits of banning substances that are already severely limited by regulation would outweigh the health benefits of controlling the pests targeted by these substances. The purpose here is not to support or oppose the law, but rather to point to the debate as another example of democracy in action in our own locality.

By the way, William Floyd of Suffolk County was one of the people who signed the Declaration of Independence.

shifted from Western riding to English," she said.

Her son, Max, is on the East Hampton rollerblade hockey team, is a surfer, and is studying the saxophone with noted jazz musician Hal McKusick of Sag Harbor. His sister, Regina, also has a flair for the arts, and played the leading role in the play Mame performed at East Hampton High School earlier this year.

Rosner credits her own love of the arts, particularly drawing, for her interest in creating beautiful smiles. "All my life I loved to sketch, and when I was in college I took art and music as a relaxing change from the sciences," she said. "Now my artwork is in the form of cosmetic dentistry, like bonding. In my work I need to know dimensions, color and form, which is sort of like sculpture. I enjoy detailed work."

As if her schedule isn't enough, Rosner is now working on her Masters for the Academy of General Dentistry, which goes beyond the Fellowship she has already received.

"This will enable me to do a lot more cosmetic and surgical procedures, from crown lengthening to periodontal surgery, to complicated extraction and cosmetic surgery," she explained. "I like to expand my education to update myself on the cutting edge technology, in order to have a one-stop dentist shop. But then, I always like a challenge."

Rosner is also lecturing locally to area AARP groups, on the topic of "Dentistry For Seniors."

order for you what you want."

Einstein looked puzzled, but did as he was told and followed David Rothman through the piles of merchandise, past the record player which was issuing forth Mozart's G Minor Symphony, and out the back door into the yard. There stood a beautiful cement sundial, about three feet high.

"No, no," Einstein said. He lifted a leg and touched his foot with his hand. "Sundials. Sundials."

Oh, my God, Rothman thought. He's wearing sandals.

"Them I got!" he shouted. And they went back inside.

* * *

The sandals cost one dollar and fifty cents, and as Rothman was putting them into a bag, he noticed that Albert Einstein was unconsciously conducting the Mozart Symphony with his hands.

"I see you like music," Rothman ventured.

"Oh, yes, I am an amateur violinist."

"Well, that's a coincidence. So am I. My name is David Rothman." Rothman extended his hand.

"Mr. Rothman. I'm Albert Einstein. We must play together then some evening."

"Oh, I don't want to interfere with your vacation,"

Southold Historical Society and Family of Reginald Donahue

Rothman said. "It's up to you."

Einstein took the package and tucked it under his arm.

"Monday night will be a good night," he said as he walked out the door. "Bring some sheet music."

What sort of sheet music does one take to a concert with Albert Einstein? Easy pieces? Hard pieces? Certainly one doesn't want to show up the great man in any way. Perhaps it would be the best thing to take a little of everything.

Rothman took a wide variety of sheet music from his library, his violin and case, and his music stand, said goodbye to his wife Ruth, and walked out the door to his Durant Sedan. Slowly, nervously, he drove it through Southold, down Nassau Point Road, and out toward the Einstein summer house on Old Cove Road. When he arrived, he was greeted at the door by Einstein's personal secretary, Miss Ducas, and led across a porch and into the living room where the scientist was waiting.

"Let me take your things," Einstein said. "Sit down, make yourself comfortable. Did you bring some music? Something easy? Something more difficult?"

The two men chatted for a bit, and then Einstein went through the sheet music and chose Bach's Double Concerto. It was, Rothman knew, one of the very difficult pieces. And in a very short time, perhaps just a few bars, Rothman knew that he was out of his league. Einstein played his half of the piece with ease, while Rothman struggled with his. After a brief fashion, they stopped in the middle.

"Let's put the music down for now," Einstein said. "Let's go out on the porch and talk."

Thus ended, almost as soon as it started, the first musicale between Einstein and Rothman. It was eight o'clock in the evening. What was to follow was beyond Rothman's wildest imaginations.

"Where did you learn to play?" Einstein asked as they settled into wicker chairs on the porch.

"I'm self taught," Rothman said. "But we have a quartet at my house every week, so I try to keep up."

"I'm largely self taught, too," Einstein said. "I learned in Germany."

"You have just come out?"

"I fled the Nazis two years ago. I've just recently come to America. So you'll have to pardon my English."

"I have been reading about almost everything you have done," Rothman said. "And I have so many questions to ask you. What are you working on now?"

"A unified field theory. I am working out a relationship between the macrocosm and the

The architectural gem known as the Pearlroth House, a tiny diamond shape cottage of 600 feet on the ocean in Westhampton Beach, was slated to be moved from its present site to make way for a bigger house. The owner of the house, Jonathan Pearlroth and his wife Holly Posner, agreed to donate it to the Town of Southampton for $1 if they would move it off within a year and save it as a museum on a beachfront site further west. Everyone agreed. But when the Mayor of Hampton Dunes, Gary Vegliante, looked at the project, and noted it would be in the dunes in his little kingdom, he let up a howl that it couldn't go there. The Town now thinks they will move it to one of three other beachfront sites.

On the other hand, there is some information that suggests the Village/Town line DID change. In the mid to late 1980s there was a report of a slight modification in a line separating the Tuckahoe and Southampton School districts. It was said at the time that this affected the location of the line between the Town and Village. But only the State of New York could make such an adjustment, and at the time, only the Village Attorney, a Mr. Gilmartin, said that Mr. Steudte was now, lo and behold, a resident of the village.

In any case, it appears very possible that Harold Steudte's election to the Board of the Village of Southampton is null and void. And whatever votes he cast during the last fifteen years should not count. Go figure that out.

Finally, if all this turns out to be the case, the question arises as to whether this man, either a man without a country or a man with two countries, has done anything wrong. And that would come down to what did he know and when did he know it. And even then I don't know if it's a crime.

And why does he have to be a resident of the Village anyway?

evening from June 2 through September 11. The season opens with a new production of Shakespeare's Hamlet starring Michael Nathanson, directed by Josh Gladstone (through June 19). Gladstone sees Hamlet as a very theatrical mixture of love, madness, envy, hatred, betrayal and murder. The John Drew also has a series of dramatized play readings with well-known actors, co-produced with several groups (Playwrights Kitchen East, WordTheatre, Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton and The Actors Company), starting with A Delicate Arrangement (Dina Merrill and Ted Hartley, June 12), Pushcart Press prize-winning stories read by Andrew McCarthy, Bob Balaban, Marcia Gay Harden and Julianna Margulies (June 25), G.B. Shaw's Don Juan in Hell (Ed Asner, Rene Auberjonois, Harris Yulin, July 17), "Women on Fire" with Judith Ivey (July 29) and Outclause with Wendy Malick (July 30). Anne Jackson and Eli Wallach excerpt their favorite roles on July 22.

Lee Davis and Patricia Watt's popular "American Musical Theater Salutes" returns with Broadway stars singing the music of Charles Strouse (June 26), Cy Coleman (July 10), Irving Berlin (July 31) and Jerry Herman (August 14). Other featured musical performers are Barbara Carroll and Jeff Harnar (June 24), Andrea Marcovicci (July 1 & 2), KT Sullivan and Mark Nadler (July 7-9), Lypsinka (July 15-16), Billie Stritch, Karen Mason and others in "Cast Party" (July 23), cabaret star Wesla Whitfield (July 24), a battle of musical combos (Mike Carney vs. Bob Hardwick, Aug. 5), comedy and music with Angela LaGreca and Cory Kahaney (Aug. 6) and the Paul Winter Consort (Aug. 13). Kidfest, the children's theater series, begins at 5 p.m. on Wednesday, June 29 (Bob from Sesame Street on August 6) and the Landsman/Film Society of Lincoln Center foreign film series, runs Tuesday evenings beginning June 28 spotlighting French filmmakers this summer (Rohmer, Truffaut, Goddard, Malle, etc.).

Journalist Warren Strugatch returns with his outspoken "Out of the Question" celebrity panels taking on Hamptons restaurateurs (July 14), gardens (July 21), literary roundtable (Wolfe, Vonnegut, Pintauro on July 29), and real estate (August 4). There will also be poetry readings and artists' talks, and the summer season concludes with Tony Walton directing an all-star ensemble in Orson Welles' Moby Dick Rehearsed (Aug. 27-Sept. 11). Tickets to Guild Hall performances are available at the box office, 158 Main St., East Hampton (631-324-4050, open Thurs.-Sun., 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., open daily starting June 27, and just before showtime), or online at guildhall.org.

The Music Festival of the Hamptons, under the artistic direction of Lukas Foss, is scheduled July 8 to 24 at The Morriss Center grounds 739 Butter Lane, Bridgehampton — if the Festival gets the permits from Southampton Town. (Because wine and liquor are occasionally offered at Festival events, Town laws prohibit gatherings on Town land when alcoholic beverages are served, so the Festival could not use Sayre Park behind the Bridgehampton Commons shopping center.) The season opens with 11-year-old piano prodigy Drew Peterson and the Hampton Chamber Orchestra. Other highlights of the season

book review: amagansett by mark mills

By Eunice Miller

If you want to learn to fish, buy this book. If you want to learn to seduce, buy Anais Nin.

In fact, however, Amagansett is neither about fishing nor loving, although the author, Mark Mills, an Englishman, writes about both. This book is about good guys and bad guys. Mills has an opinion about what creates them, and he shares his conclusions.

Mills takes us to Amagansett following World War II and transfers the conflicts in wartime to the conflicts in a changing society. He creates a constantly unfolding drama regarding the mystery of the death of two seemingly unconnected "girls," Lillian and Lizzie. He uses the sea as a metaphor for the struggles of the society that populate his Amagansett.

"The surface of the ocean was churning with life. And death. Gannets and gulls swooped and slammed onto the water from above, snapping up baitfish, while hundreds of frenzied tuna flashed to and fro.....Every now and then one would break clear of the water in eagerness to kill, jaws snapping at the silver mist of baitfish leaping before it."

In Amagansett, the baitfish are the early settlers: the Native Americans, followed by the English and Europeans, who became the whalers, the farmers and the fishermen. The gannets, gulls and tuna are the latest arrivals that Mills calls the "City People." Lillian Wallace is one of these city people and she pops to our attention when the Basque fisherman, Conrad Labarde, fishes her body out of the water. She had been the daughter of an influential New York family. Their summer home was ringed with a high yew hedge inclosing a swimming pool. In contrast, Conrad's father, a fisherman, had been a transporter of "booze." Conrad lives in a shack, decorated with upturned fish crates and empty bottles of "cheap imperial whiskey."

We are shocked to learn that this unlikely pair had been lovers. Mills has recreated a new Romeo and Juliet. The intermixing of the Labarde and Wallace families was as taboo as the joining of the Montagues and the Capulets. Shakespeare, however, was more adept at stirring up our norepinephrine and dopamine, the love-stimulating brain chemicals. Try this, in Mill's words: He leaned across to meet her lips, and she drew him down on the ground. Later when it was over.....she pressed her face to his neck and inhaled.

"You have a particular smell."

"It goes with the job."

"I like it..Eau de Fish."

The author does better with developing the relationship of Deputy Chief, Tom Hollis, with Mary Calder. Tom moves from observer to participant.

"For a moment, he felt ridiculous, detached as if observing himself from on high.....then her tongue forced its way between his lips, and he dropped back into himself."

Hollis is needed for other purposes. He must solve the mysterious deaths of Lillian and Lizzie Jencks, killed by a hit and run driver. Her life has been like the baitfish, dependent on the mercy of the more powerful. Lillian had been putting flowers on her grave.

There are characters that are the bad guys, the "City People." They are Lillian's brother, Manfred, his advisor, Weakly and an ex-fiancée, Justin Penrose, and, by implication, unnamed members of the country clubs where these people breed. If this were a movie (Mills is a screen writer) there could be a Greek chorus chanting boos.

Mills, who ironically learned to love Amagansett as a summer visitor, leaves you to contemplate the pecking order in this society. In the meantime, you can sit back on the beach and enjoy this exceptionally well-written, well-researched book. It is a good mystery sprinkled with a salty dash of romance.

For Conrad, when the mystery is solved, he goes back to his life as "the fisherman."

Mills expresses his sentimentality towards keeping to the old ways. "Fishing don't teach you much," but "it do teach you you don't need much."

Amagansett by Mark Mills, published 2004 by Penguin Press, is available at Borders Books.

20 Years Ago In Dan's Papers May 24th, 1985

Big Race Scheduled for Sunday

By Dan Rattiner

This Sunday, May 26th, the starting gun for the eighth annual Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon will go off. The ten kilometer race will begin at the Bridgehampton Community House at 9:30 a.m., pass down Main Street in Bridgehampton, and wind through the beautiful back roads of Bridgehampton and Sagaponack.

Last year, nearly six hundred runners from all over the country competed in the minithon which helps raise money for Southampton Hospital. It was estimated that over a thousand people watched and cheered as the athletes ran for a worthwhile cause. On Sunday, the runners will try to break last year's record-breaking time of 30:46:09 set by Charles Miers.

Trophies and prizes will be awarded immediately after the race. Then, at 5:00 p.m., a big post-race party will commence at the Bay Street Nightclub on the Long Wharf in Sag Harbor. Winners of the race will be announced again and all the runners will receive one complimentary drink ticket entitling them to a glass of tropical rum punch prepared by Preston Powell of Bay Street. The reggae band Moja-Nya will perform, christening the new "Live at Five" celebrations to be held every Sunday afternoon in the summer at Bay Street, featuring reggae music and complimentary admission.

Prizes have been donated by the many local businesses that support the minithon. These include the Omni Health and Racquet Club, Fay Teller, Bay Street Nightclub, The Clown Store, Second Nature, LaCarrubba's, Ming's HSE, John Duck, Jr., Southampton Outdoor Store, Kidstuff, and the Hampton Videotaping Service. Plaza Sports is donating the racing numbers and Water Works in Bridgehampton is supplying the water for the race.

There is still time to enter the minithon, a competition that has achieved the status of an institution in the area. To enter, fill out the coupon in this issue and mail it to Dan's Papers along with a $3 entry fee. Or just come to Dan's Papers in Bridgehampton and register. Either way, registered runners should arrive at the Bridgehampton Community House at least one hour before the starting time. Unregistered runners must arrive two hours in advance.

We still need more sponsors who can donate prizes for the race, as well as volunteers to help it run without a hitch. If you can donate a prize, lend a hand, or even if you have a question, call Lynann at Dan's Papers, 537-0500.

NOTE: The race in 2005 takes place on Saturday June 4 at 9:30 AM in Bridgehampton. Registration is at the Bridgehampton Presbyterian Church at 8:00 AM.

20 Years Ago In Dan's Papers May 24th, 1985

How Important are Numbers Anyway?

By Dan Rattiner

The great achievements of western man have been attributed to many things. It is said it all began when man controlled fire, or when he invented the wheel, or when he learned how to harness animals. Some credit man's success to his oversize brain, or even to his unique, lateral working thumb. Hardly anything is ever said about the discovery of numbers, however. Yet, until man learned the meaning of numbers and how to use them, all his brains, wheels, fires, and thumbs meant exactly zero. Which was the first number.

Consider life without numbers. A man stands on the street corner, annoyed, standing on one foot, then the other. Finally a woman shows up.

"You're late," the man says. "I told you to meet me when the sun got over HERE."

"Oh, I'm sorry," says the woman. "I thought you meant when the sun got over THERE."

Of course there would be no wristwatches because there would be no way of telling time. Thus there would be no shattering alarm clocks, or news every hour on the hour. TV commercials would just go on for as long as they took rather than for 20 seconds, 30 seconds or one minute.

A more important aspect of living without numbers would be the difficulty or holding organized meetings. People would be showing up at different times (so to speak) and events would just have to wait until everyone was assembled. As a result, people would get more used to waiting around, become more relaxed and have fewer ulcers. Life would be more peaceful.

Perhaps a most fascinating scene might take place down at Cape Kennedy, where the space officials would be trying to launch the space Shuttle for orbit around earth. No 5-4-3-2-1 countdown here. It would go like this:

"READY?"

"Ok. Everybody move back. We're going to light the rocket."

"Ready in the control tower?"

"Ready."

"Ok; ready in the Shuttle?"

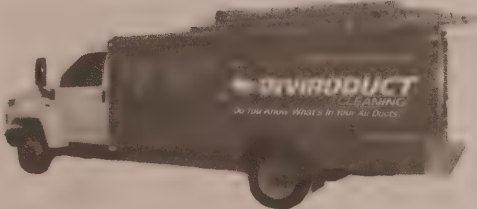

"Roger."

"Ok. Almost ready. We'll be ready anytime now. Ready to cut the ship free?"

"Righto."

"Ok, everybody set, ready, here we go when I say go. Ready, Set, Go. NOW. No, no, no."

But all this will never happen. I only have to go a few inches to see how numbers have completely dominated existence. On my desk at this moment is a spray called "6-12 Insect Repellent" and a squeeze can called "3 In 1 Household Oil," which I use to oil my typewriter. There is a roll of scotch tape made by the "3M Company" which says "1/2 x 700 inches, Catalogue number 119, $.59 plus tax." And I myself am number 143-30-2107 to the Social Security people, and worse, to the State of New York Department of Motor Vehicles, I am number RO1734-2926-695341.

By Alan-Michael Braveman

The glorious 42 year dream that was Southampton College ended under clear azure skies this past Sunday, May 22nd saw the last formal graduation ceremonies on the scruffy campus that has been home to more than 9000 students. Under a heavy downpour and a sky filled with foreboding and ominous clouds the nervous but giddy graduates assembled in their caps and gowns to walk the last quarter mile to patiently listen to commencement speakers, Steve Kroft from CBS, Congressman Tim Bishop and their Chancellor RFX Sillerman. The sky had crackled ominously all morning until Chancellor Bob Sillerman approached the microphone, then the Sillerman magic caused the clouds to give way to bright sunshine. Chancellor Sillerman pledged that the "Best College Library on any campus in America, under construction but now left unfinished, would be completed, that all graduates would always have a home on this campus even though it might have another name and that any employee of Southampton College that was in need of money or assistance could always call on him" was greeted with a momentous, heartfelt cheer. His upbeat speech set the tone for the rest of the ceremony.

Steve Kroft spoke of his experiences at college and how they did and did not prepare him for life. Congressman Tim Bishop spoke of the "Little College that could" and all its magnificent accomplishments in the fields of academics and sports. He reminded all the graduates that they had much to be proud of including surviving 9/11, consistently beating teams from much bigger and better financed schools, including sister school CW Post, and, against all odds, 38 Fulbright Scholars including one in that very class who was graduating that day; a major accomplishment in view of the preceding year's announcement that this would be the last graduating class from Southampton College.

The parallels with the very first graduating class, 1967, are indeed amazing. The first Commencement speaker back then was Congressman Otis Pike who was popular on both sides of the aisle in Congress and he spoke to the graduates of the bright future that awaited them and to be proud of what they had accomplished. The very last Commencement speaker at Southampton College was Congressman Tim Bishop who is also popular on both sides of the aisle and he too spoke of the pride that all the students should feel on that day. His speech was tinged with a note of sadness as he spoke of this as the last commencement.

It is interesting to note that in 1967 the President of the United States was also from Texas, the country was embroiled in an unpopular but protracted war and that the economy was in such foment that the future was difficult to discern. In 1967 Long Island University was hard at work trying to sell one of its campuses as it was deemed unprofitable by the LIU Board of Trustees.

Next the specter of protests from the student body was confined to a closed assembly for seniors who performed a funny song with bawdy lyrics written especially for the occasion. Many of the students were secretly pleased that the rumors of potential demonstrations and unrest such as 60's style streamers, burning windmills, water balloons falling from roofs and mass sneezing were unfounded but caused LIU to hire countless additional security personnel who strode purposefully around the campus with nothing to do but look out of place and help but one poor woman who was in need of water and a chair to sit on.

The only other outward signs of demonstration and displeasure with Long Island University's closing of the campus and lack of faith in its leadership were the robed and tasseled faculty sitting off stage, under a tent. They had earlier expressed their displeasure by approving a vote of no confidence in the President of the University and their desire to take no part in the ceremonies other than joining the student parade.

The Alumni Association asked for assur-

BUT IT DIDN'T HAVE TO BE THE LAST ONE

A Dark View

By Corey Dolgon

Today Southampton College [SC] students will participate in commencement for the last time. SC's parent institution, Long Island University [LIU], decided to close the campus after too many semesters of too much debt, too small an endowment and too much bad management. But unlike past graduations, faculty will not sit with administrators. A few months ago, they gave LIU President David Steinberg a vote of "no confidence" and called for his resignation. Today, faculty will boycott the ceremonial stage and sit off to the side where they can see their students but avoid their bosses.

Bad management and poor labor relations plagued SC for many years, but they intensified when administrators tried to mimic national trends towards corporatizing the academy. They became obsessed with fundraising and cost cutting. To increase revenues, former provost (now U.S. Congressman) Tim Bishop actually broke zoning ordinances to host factory outlet sales in the gym. When locals complained that competition hurt mom-and-pop shops, Bishop explained, "we are an enormously powerful economic force..... [and] are decidedly pro-business." So much so, that he initiated breakfast meetings with regional CEOs so that SC's curriculum could meet the "educational and training needs of businesses."

Nothing symbolized SC's corporate takeover better than bringing in Robert F.X. Sillerman as Chancellor. Sillerman, an icon of the new economy, made his fortune off media mergers and acquisitions. His SFX Broadcasting gobbled up small radio stations around the country, then bought concert venues, promotion companies, and celebrity management firms. Thus, SFX could sign artists, promote tours, and control concert venues and ticket sales. In 1997, he sold radio holdings for $2.1 billion and later unloaded the rest of SFX to Clear Channel Communications for $3 billion.

On the cost cutting side, the worst act of corporate banditry came in 1997 when SC outsourced its custodial unit to LARO Service Systems, a company specializing in exploiting immigrant labor to bust unions and lower wages. Veteran workers lost tenure, job autonomy, tuition remission, and vacation days. But they also lost a sense of dignity and identity, complaining they felt, "like dogs kicked onto the sidewalk."

When a group of faculty, students, community residents, and custodians formed the Coalition For Justice [CFJ] to fight the outsourcing, I explained to a meeting how corporatization and globalization created conditions ripe for outsourcing. But the custodians explained that local economic and racial dynamics also inspired the move. Historically, their unit was primarily African and Native American, and not one of them had ever been promoted. Custodians believed that recent pressure to create a promotional pipeline caused SC to, in the words of one administrator, "wash my hands of you."

Such dynamics left much of the campus dissatisfied. On the academic side, a curriculum hijacked by private interests and assessed by economic standards left faculty badly demoralized. A parade of academic vice-presidents and a lack of educational or intellectual vision from Bishop or Sillerman only reinforced faculty contempt. On the staff side, the custodian outsourcing left all levels of employees paranoid about their jobs and feeling betrayed.

The level of derision and alienation is evident in the latest campus joke. After losing his interest in Southampton College, Sillerman announced his purchase of a controlling interest in Elvis Presley Enterprises, which runs the business activities of Graceland as well as Elvis' music publishing assets and trademarks. The joke: it appears that Elvis is worth more dead than Southampton College was only half-dead.

Unfortunately, it seems that no amount of money really could have saved Southampton College. The institution had succumbed to the kind of moral numbness that allowed it to, in Barbara Ehrenreich's words, "teach the humanities while ignoring the humanity of its own employees." After the custodians' outsourcing, CFJ argued that the College was failing to live up to its own mission statement of providing a

"OnFork, May I help you?"

There's a lot of mention in the media about the Global Positioning System (GPS). It's how OnStar knows where you are.

I'm looking for investors to launch a small satellite above the East End. I'm calling it the Greater Peconic System. It will triangulate where you are between Montauk, Riverhead and Greenport. And when you subscribe to my service, OnFork, you will be told not only where you are, which is all OnStar can do, but you will be told the secrets and shortcuts that only the locals know.

"OnFork, may I help you?"

"Yeah. I need fresh sweet corn for a picnic. I'm on a budget, can you help me?"

"Cheapest sweet corn today is the Wade Rd veggie stand off 25."

"How do you know?"

"Police scanner said their farm truck full of corn and squash hit a pole in front of the stand. They can't sell the produce fast enough!"

"OnFork, may I help you?"

"Hi, I'm in Queens right now, how's the traffic into the Hamptons?"

"It's 5 p.m. on Friday and you're asking me about the line to the Hamptons? Well, since this is your first trip to the Hamptons, I'll tell you."

"How'd you know this was my first trip?"

"Cause if you ever tried to get into the Hamptons before on a Friday, you'd know you better pass Sayville by Tuesday."

"OnFork, may I help you?"

"Hello. I want to take my kids fishing and maybe clamming this weekend. Can you tell me where the good spots are?"

"I'm sorry, that information is classified. I could tell you but then I'd have to use the laser beam from our satellite to blow you up."

"Oh....okay..."

"OnFork, may I help you?"

"Help! I'm at the beach with three kids who are driving me crazy! I'm hot, I'm tired....help me!"

"Okay, stay calm, we're trained for these emergencies. I show the ice cream truck is 7 minutes away from your parking lot. In your OnFork Emergency Kit under our console, you'll find a batch of singles."

"Got 'em!"

"All right, you're doing great. Give each child a dollar as soon as you hear the ice cream bells. A dollar won't be enough for an ice cream. They'll fight over the money while they stand in line at the truck, that should buy you about five minutes to make your escape. I show two bars you can reach within three minutes. We'll report your children as street urchins and you can pick them up from the Police Station later."

"Oh... I love you guys."

Just doing our job, ma'am."

"OnFork, may I help you?"

"I'm stuck behind an injury accident and I'm missing my soap!"

"No problem, what do you need? AMC? OLTL? GH? What?"

"All My Children."

"Okay... Erica's tenth wedding as you know, this time to Jack again...."

"OnFork, may I help you?"

"Hi, I'm new to Long Island. What is this place The End? Where is it?"

"I see you're on the South Fork now going through Southampton. Keep going till you see the Atlantic on three sides. When you reach the end, that's where you'll be."

"The End is at the end of Long Island? I thought Montauk was at the end."

"Yes, Montauk is affectionately referred to as The End."

"So what's after Montauk?"

"After Montauk? Ah...Madrid."

"Don't you mean London, smart aleck?"

"Nope, Madrid is on our latitude."

"No, it's not."

"Hey Mac, you called me and I got the satellite...."

"Hey nothin'! I'm the customer, why are you giving me attitude?"

"Comes free with the service, welcome to New York."

"OnFork, may I help you?"

ances from its many members that no overt demonstrations be mounted since they did not want the day to be marred for the graduates. The "Save the College group" and the "Orphans of LIU" also concurred and there were no outward signs of displeasure other than a few students who hesitated before shaking President Steinberg's hand as they received their diplomas.

It has been a wonderful 42 year experiment in education that did not fail. Over the years there were numerous attempts to close the college. Until this year none succeeded. As Chancellor Sillerman said "had not the board of Trustees lost their courage this closing would not be happening."

Southampton College succeeded beyond anyone's wildest dreams, as demonstrated by the more than 9000 graduates who will always be proud to call Southampton College their alma mater. The production of more than 38 Fulbright Scholars in 42 years from a school this small is nothing short of miraculous and a credit to the wonderful faculty and undeniable spirit of Southampton College graduates. The more than 9000 teachers, marine scientists, doctors, lawyers, musicians, writers, poets, painters, photographers, corporate executives and housewives who have left their mark on society are all proud of their participation in this glorious experiment called Southampton College. They are living proof that it was not a failure but rather an overwhelming success.

"small, caring community with rich cultural and natural resources." Some faculty claimed that the custodians themselves had become the best teachers of social responsibility and human dignity on campus.

As the College closes most of its doors this weekend, I am sad that so many of my friends and former colleagues have lost jobs. But SC never escaped the kind of plantation-style racism that plagued the rest of the Hamptons, nor could it escape the corporate mentality that continues to debase much of higher education today. When places that might inspire dreams of truth and justice are conquered by those beholden to bureaucratic bottom.

"That seems fairly simple," Rothman said. "The planets revolve around the sun. The electrons revolve around the nucleus. Clearly there is a relationship."

Einstein lit a pipe. "It's actually rather difficult," he said. "I'm not interested so much in the particles as I am the spaces between them."

"Oh."

"And when I get it done, I'm not sure I'll be able to prove the theory. Tell me. You seem so curious about everything, Mr. Rothman, and here you are a dry goods merchant. Are you an educated man?"

"I am self educated," Rothman said. "I was never very interested in school and the current events they teach. So I studied myself. Plato. Newton. Bacon."

"I wasn't much interested in school either," Einstein said.

The two men sat on that porch that evening talking for four more hours, about every subject, about every great book. Somehow, in that single evening, a rapport was established between the great scientist and the dry goods merchant.

At midnight, Miss Ducas appeared in the doorway in her nightgown.

"You are keeping the doctor up so late," she said.

"But I am keeping Mr. Rothman up late," Einstein said.

Einstein asked if he could join the quartet that Rothman had mentioned earlier in the evening, and Rothman replied that surely he could. They would be having a musicale just a few days later in the week.

Miss Ducas gathered up Rothman's things and ushered him to the door. As she and Einstein said goodbye, she leaned forward and whispered, "This quartet, Mr. Rothman, it must not be jazz players."

And then Rothman was out the door.

Thus began a strong and close friendship between Albert Einstein and David Rothman. In the days that followed, Rothman and Einstein took hikes together, went on outings together. Einstein had a tiny sailboat, not much larger than a rowboat — he called it "Tinif," which is Yiddish for "Junk" — and he sailed this little boat on Peconic Bay wearing an undershirt, baggy shorts and a folded-up newspaper hat on his head to keep his white hair from blowing.

Einstein also asked his neighbor if he couldn't have permission to use a path alongside the neighbor's yard as a shortcut to the beach. But the neighbor refused.

"We are here for our privacy, just as you, Mr. Einstein," the neighbor said.

Twice a week, Einstein would come to the Rothman household to play in the evening quartets there. Attending these quartets were Rothman's brother-in-law, Milton Samuel, a viola player; Howard Cook, a cellist; and Robert Lyon, also a cellist. Oddly, at this time, Rothman had taken in for the summer a melancholy, 26-year-old composer named Benjamin Britten. Occasionally, Britten would play in the quartets, but for the most part Britten spent his time upstairs building model airplanes with Rothman's son. Britten made almost no contact with Einstein, though he was to go on to be the most famous contemporary composer of

GELFAND AT 80

Gloria Gelfand, who I met early in my career, had her 80th birthday last week. Many years ago, she offered me a job and I took too long to respond to her and when I did she said – "Sorry it is too late!" I learned a valuable lesson as had many people who knew or know her in her decades of her illustrious career in design and fashion. Of the more than 400 guests, many style and retailing luminaries, showed up for the big day at Studio 450 in Manhattan. "Gelfand" as she is known is still working and a long time primary resident of Southampton.

the age. At that time he was simply a confused young man, a British subject who refused to join the war, who had fled London and found himself on eastern Long Island.

In fact, one day Britten asked if he couldn't take a job as a clerk in the Rothman Department Store. Perhaps this was his calling. Rothman refused and told him to stick to composing.

Einstein and Rothman often walked on the beach together. Once they went out at night by flashlight.

"If I take this flashlight beam and shine it up," Rothman said, "then it would travel forever. Is that true?"

"If it gets through the atmosphere."

"Do you believe in God?" Rothman asked.

There was a long silence.

"I do not believe in an anthropomorphic God," Einstein said. "You know this word 'anthropomorphic'?"

"Yes."

"For me, religion takes the form of a rapturous amazement at the harmony and beauty and mathematical preciseness that obtains in the Universe. It reveals an intelligence of such superiority that human intelligence is totally insignificant before it. I'm filled with wonder, awe and humbleness."

Rothman memorized this, almost word for word. Later, he was talking alone to Einstein's secretary, Miss Ducas.

"Miss Ducas, you should be taking notes,"

Rothman said. "If we only had notes about Newton, about Gallileo, it would be so wonderful to read them now."

"Don't worry," Miss Ducas said. I'm taking them."

A week later, Rothman thought to take Einstein on an outing to the Riverhead Telegraph Receiving Station. This was major station that could receive messages from all over Europe, and Rothman had a lot of friends at the station. He thought Einstein would enjoy meeting them and seeing the place.

The two of them started out, driving slowly in Rothman's sedan and they had gotten as far as Peconic when another car cut them off and pulled them over. Rothman recognized the driver who was getting out of his car as a salesman from the Allen Card Company.

"Hi, Mr. Rothman. Gee, is that EinSTEEN?"

"Yes, it is, Andy."

"Sorry to pull you over like this. But I stopped in your store and they told me you had just left and if I hurried I could catch you. I won't be back out this way for another two weeks. You need anything?"

"Andy, I don't need a thing. Stop and see me next time."

"Okay, Mr. Rothman. And sorry again."

And the young salesman drove off.

"Gee," Rothman said to Einstein. "I hope this didn't frighten you, his pulling us off the road like that."

"No," Einstein said. "In Germany maybe this would have frightened me, but not here."

"You must have had a real tough time in Germany."

"Well, the Storm Troopers came to my house one night and they took my wife and me outside into the yard. They had to search my house for weapons they said, and so they went inside and out they came with my carving knives. 'See, we have found weapons,' they said. And they smashed my sailboat. I said to my wife, 'Look good on this place for you shall not see it again.' And that night my friends, they took us off to Holland and then to England." Einstein turned to Rothman. "And you know," he said, "if they had caught me, they would have killed me. Of that I am sure."

At this time, the Riverside Church in Manhattan had sent out letters to fifty scientists across the country. Their plan, they said, was to erect statues at the church to the eight most famous scientists that ever lived. Could the fifty scientists send in their lists of eight? They would like to know of whom these statues should be made.

The lists came in. And on every list there was only one name of a scientist still alive at the time: Albert Einstein. The statues were erected.

"How does it feel to have your statue there among Moses, Newton, Christ?" Rothman wanted to know.

"From now on," Einstein said, "and for the rest of my life, I must be very careful not to commit a scandal."

Einstein would often show up at Rothman's house unannounced. He would come in the back door, play with Rothman's children, lie down on the couch and take a snooze.

"Where is Ruth?" Einstein asked one day.

"My wife is in the hospital. She is quite sick and I've just come back."

"She'll be all right?"

"I think so. She is such a wonderful woman. I am so in love with her. I don't know what I would do without her."

"You know, I've had two wives," Einstein said, "but I have never experienced the love that you have. My wives have been good women who've looked after me."

In a few weeks, Ruth Rothman had fully recovered.

"Rothman. You want me to teach you the theory of relativity?"

"What? Are you kidding? With my eighth grade education?"

"If you had a college education, I'd be suspicious. With an eighth grade education, I think I can do it."

"What do you want me to do?"

"I need you to do a few things. Promise me you'll give me three full hours of your time. And promise me, if you get lost with what I say, you'll tell me. That way I could clarify things and we won't get all tangled up. Okay?"

"I need a promise from you."

"What's that?"

"That you won't use any mathematics. You've got to do the whole explanation without mathematics."

"Agreed."

Einstein took out a pad and a pencil.

"I said no mathematics," Rothman said.

"I'm just going to take notes while I talk. You don't mind if I do that."

"No, of course not."

Einstein began his discourse, talking about how a metal rod contracts in the direction of its spin. As he talked, Einstein wrote numbers and formulas on the paper he had in front of him. And then, forgetting himself, he lapsed into a complicated mathematical formula.

"We said no mathematics," Rothman said.

"But this was so TRIVIAL!" Einstein said. And so, they gave up the effort. Rothman did, however, ask if he could keep the piece of paper on which Einstein was scribbling, which Einstein gladly gave him.

* * *

On one occasion, Einstein, wearing his newspaper hat, undershirt and baggy shorts, was hauling his anchor in the middle of Peconic Bay when his boat capsized. Einstein was thrown into the water, and since he could not swim, began thrashing around yelling for help. A 15-year-old boy who was swimming near by and who never identified himself, saved Einstein.

"I made a triple error," Einstein later told Rothman in his broken English.

On another occasion, Rothman got a phone call from Miss Ducas to inform him that Albert Einstein had decided to sail his little boat from Nassau Point to Rothman's house in Southold.

"He left at six a.m.," Miss Ducas said. "So he should be there soon."

But Einstein did not arrive. After the sun set, Rothman became hysterical that his friend had been lost. But then the phone rang. On the other end was a friend of Rothman's, a vacationing New York cop who lived at the Southold beach.

"Rothman. There's a weird looking guy who needs a haircut—some helluva looking looney—down here on the beach wanting to know where you live."

Rothman sighed and went to the rescue.

"Hello, Mr. Rothman? This is the minister from the Southold church, and the reason that I'm calling is that I understand you're a good friend of Einstein. Next week, I'm moderating a meeting at the Firehouse about getting refugees out of Nazi Germany. I know Mr. Einstein has been active in getting Jewish refugees out. We're going to try to get some of the Christian refugees out. What I wondered was, could you ask Mr. Einstein to attend? Just his presence there would be a big boost to us. You come too."

"Well, I'll ask him, and he'll probably say yes. But let me just warn you to please treat him like an ordinary person. Don't ask him to speak or anything. You might just mention that he's in the audience."

"Of course."

The following week, Rothman, wearing a suit and a tie, drove over to pick up Einstein on Nassau Point. Einstein came down to meet him wearing an undershirt, baggy pants, tied up with a rope and sandals.

"My. You are looking elegant," Einstein said, looking over Rothman's suit. And he disappeared back upstairs. Ten minutes later he was back, dressed in more proper attire.

The meeting was attended by perhaps two hundred residents of Southold who all sat on folding chairs facing a dais. Einstein and Rothman were about halfway back.

"And we have with us," the minister said, "the famous scientist Albert Einstein. Mr. Einstein, come up to the dais and join us and give a little speech."

Einstein gave Rothman a funny look, then went up and sat. One speech followed another, and finally Einstein was asked to say something.

"You must organize just as we Jews have organized," he said. "Otherwise you will have a big problem." Then he sat down. There was silence. That was it? Everyone applauded.

After the meeting broke up, literally dozens of people crowded around Rothman and Einstein trying to say a few words to them.

"Mr. Einstein," one woman said. "I'm from Europe. I understand you've come from Europe too?"

"Yes, Europe, a fine place," Einstein said. Then he turned to Rothman and cupped a hand over his mouth. "Get me out of here," he whispered.

Rothman led Einstein through the crowd and out onto the street where they began to walk toward Rothman's car. From behind a tree there jumped an older man who identified himself as a famous physicist from Johns Hopkins University. He just wanted to meet Albert Einstein he said, and so they shook hands and exchanged a few pleasantries.

A week later, this Johns Hopkins' physicist was at the counter in the Rothman Department Store.

"Mr. Rothman, you've got to lend me a hundred dollars."

"A hundred dollars? Why?"

"I've just been at the carnival down at the corner and there's a fellow running a cups and shells game and I've lost all my money. If you lend me a hundred dollars I'll win it back."

Rothman refused and, instead, called the police who took care of the matter. Later, he related this story to Einstein, reminding him that he'd met this professor outside the fire hall.

"We scientists are not good businessmen," Einstein said. "If we are good businessmen, we are not good scientists."

* * *

On the morning of July 30, 1939, an old Plymouth arrived at Einstein's vacation house bearing two scientists from Princeton University. Rothman was there at the time, and Einstein introduced them as Leo Szilard and Eugene P. Wigner. Rothman, seeing that they were there on serious business, excused himself and went back to Southold. He never did learn that Szilard and Wigner, together with Einstein who had greeted them in undershirt, rolled up pants and sandals, would proceed to draft one of the most famous letters of the Second World War. Addressed and sent to Franklin D. Roosevelt, it outlined the discoveries made by the Germans in developing an Atomic Bomb, and a plea for the creation of a program to create an atomic weapon that could alter the course of the war.

"A single bomb of this type," the letter said, "might very well destroy a whole port together with some of the surrounding territory."

Szilard and Wigner helped Einstein in drafting this letter but only Einstein signed it. Szilard and Wigner believed, correctly, that only a scientist of Einstein's stature could carry the weight necessary to see to it that the letter arrived on the President's desk.

The letter was mailed from Nassau Point on August 2, 1939 and reached the President on October 11. President Roosevelt ordered the creation of an atomic bomb study group as a result.

Einstein left Nassau Point in the autumn of 1939 to take up his position once again in Princeton, New Jersey. He did not return to Nassau Point the following summer, but instead wrote to Rothman and asked if his sailboat could be trucked to Saranac Lake in the Mountains. For family health reasons, he wrote, he would not be able to return to the beach, for which he was deeply grieved.

A lively correspondence was kept up between Einstein and Rothman over the next five years. When the government was trying to raise money for the war effort, they asked Einstein, now in Princeton, if he would write down, in his own hand, his theory of relativity, so they could raffle it off. This Einstein did, and in the raffle, a total of $6,000,000 was raised. Rothman wrote Einstein and reminded him of the piece of paper that he, Rothman, still had.

"And what became of your original manuscript on relativity?" Rothman wrote. "Did the Nazis get it?"

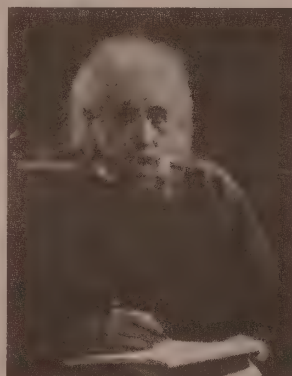

"My first manuscript was not burned by the Nazis," Einstein replied. "I myself threw it into the wastebasket after it was printed, judging it good for nothing."

A year later, the Einstein Unified Theory was published. It appeared as a front page story in the New York Times, and the Times quoted scientists who said that it was unlikely that this theory could either be proven or disproven in this generation.

Every year, Rothman sent Einstein a new pair of sandals.

"I miss the nights with your quartet group," Einstein wrote back. And then, in a later letter, he wrote, "I am thinking often of the beautiful hours we spent together in the last years..."

In 1946, Einstein and Rothman met for the last time. They embraced, and Einstein said, "I have had the most wonderful summers of my entire life and this I owe to your initiative." •

GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S. and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed - a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is genuinely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling -- and their parents, too!

PINOT NOIR VERTICAL TASTING AT CASTELLO DI BORGHESE

MAY 22, CUTCHOGUE

The Castello di Borghese vineyard and winery in Cutchogue is Long Island's "founding" estate vineyard (formerly Hargrave), celebrating over 30 years of winemaking here on the East End. Last Sunday the estate held a wine tasting party, hosted by owners Marco Borghese and his lovely wife Ann Marie.

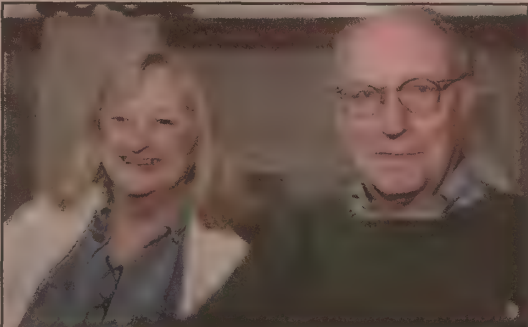

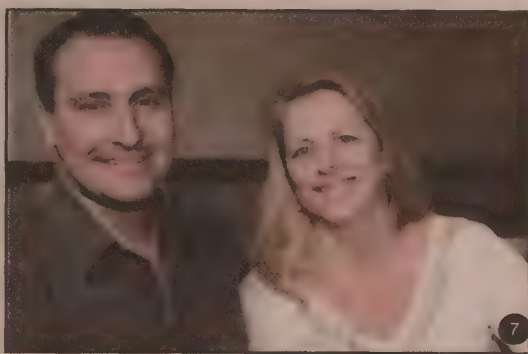

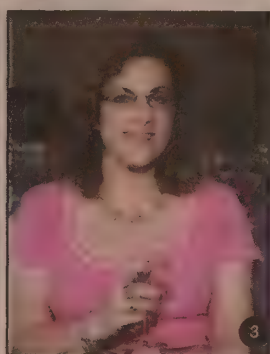

The winery presented a Pinot Noir Vertical Tasting, which means guests sampled Pinot Noir from different years in succession to taste how the weather and other factors affected each vintage. Winemaker Stan Schumacher presented the following for tasting: Pinot Noir 2002 Reserve, Le Noirien Pinot Noir Hargrave, Hargrave unfiltered barrel Sample 1988, and 04PN Barrel. Schumacher described the wines, in turn, as "figgy," "orangey," "vinegary," even "broccoli" and "asparagus," to name just a few.

The winery also offers other sophisticated, elegant and critically acclaimed wines, such as the 2000 Borghese Meritage, a blend of Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Cabernet Franc, and two more powerful wines, the Cabernet Sauvignon 2001 Reserve and a Borghese 2001 Private Reserve. Also on the wine list is a Riesling 2003 and a Late Harvest Riesling Ice Wine 2003.

All good things in life start with wine! So come and try these wines as well as others in a newly redesigned tasting room and experience the enjoyment of life at Castello di Borghese.

Dinner With Stan, Anita's Back, and Bottoms Up

Those of you who read my farewell letter in last week's Dan's Papers are aware that Dan's son, David Rattiner, has assumed the position of North Fork editor. I will continue to write for the paper, however, and in addition will still edit the six annual Dan's Wine Guides, the first of which is before you.

First I'd like to say that I hope you are enjoying Lenn Thompson's column Over The Barrel, which will continue to be a weekly part of Dan's North Fork. He's done a wonderful job of covering new releases and industry news, and he also has two stories in this supplement: Taking the Heat and Family-Friendly Wineries. Look for more in the future.

As for me, I'm looking forward to taking it easy this summer and enjoying more dinners like the one at Antares Café last Friday evening with Stan Schumacher, the winemaker at Castello di Borghese. Co-owner/chef Matt Murphy fed us a feast as David, Stan and I tasted some recent Borghese vintages.

We began with the non-vintage house wines, produced under the clever label CdB. The white was a stand-out, blended by Stan from barrels of white produced by former Borghese winemaker Mark Terry. At $12 a magnum, this has to be one of the best deals on the North Fork. This is a simple wine that's perfect for large summer gatherings on the patio or at the beach. "Pool juice," remarked Stan. "Pour it by the tumblerful." The non-vin-

Winter Winery News In Case You Missed It

This weekend marks the beginning of the East End summer season. Crowds (and traffic) will be on the rise and so will the readers of my column (I hope!).

Even in the cooler months, there's always a lot going on in the Long Island wine world. This off season was filled with delicious wine releases, important wine-maker hirings and other interesting tidbits that you may have missed.

Construction underway at Bedell Cellars in Cutchogue

To get you caught up and ready for the summer, I've compiled a few of the highlights.

After months with an "Opening Soon" sign posted on Sound Avenue, Roanoke Vineyards finally opened in November, pouring a rich, complex Merlot as well as offerings from Wolffer Estate (Roanoke owner Rich Pisacano is vineyard manager there) and Atwater Vineyards in the Finger Lakes.

The Stony Brook Center for Food, Wine and Culture, which has been offering classes at its Manhattan branch for a while now, started doing so at the main campus in Stony Brook. If you're interested in learning more about wine and meeting local wine whizzes, without spending a fortune, the classes are well worth the trip.

In late February, Les Howard, formerly an assistant at Pindar Vineyards, Wolffer Estate and Bedell Cellars was named head winemaker at Jamesport Vineyards.

Bedell Cellars' public relations team was perhaps the busiest of all. First, they hired Pascal Marty, formerly of Chateau Mouton Rothschild, as consulting oenologist, and John Irving Levenberg, most recently at Paul Hobbs Winery in Napa Valley, as associate winemaker. They join "Mr. Merlot," Kip Bedell, to form a formidable winemaking team.

Bedell Cellars also released 455 numbered magnums of its 2001 Merlot Reserve, which feature labels designed by noted artist and Sag Harbor resident Eric Fischl. The magnums are $200, but the wine is available for $30 in non-Fischl-labeled 750ml bottles.

Lastly, Bedell is adding a 10,000 square foot addition to create a covered terrace and deck overlooking the vineyard and new barrel and tank rooms, which will minimize the handling the grapes undergo before being placed in the tanks.

I'd also like to announce something new here in Over the Barrel. If you have any questions about Long Island wines, wine country or wineries (or anything else wine related), send an email to me at LIWineGuy@gmail.com. Once a month, I'll devote a column to answering your questions.

Grapes And Grilling: Invite Long Island Wines To Your Next Barbeque

Beer. Lager. Ale. It's what most Americans serve with grilled fare at their weekend BBQ's, and with good reason. It's cold, refreshing and a great thirst quencher on a steamy summer day. Beyond beer, you might serve margaritas or maybe even sangria, but wine in its pure state doesn't make much of an appearance when we fire up our grills.

Maybe the outdoor setting, the primitive pleasure of open fire cooking, and the macho image of grilling pushes wine into the background. But why not serve it? Wine isn't a snobby, pretentious luxury item, and wine can be the perfect match for grilled food. Plus, it's not as filling as beer, or as potent as a margarita.

So now that you've decided to serve wine at your next barbeque, which ones do you choose? Like any other meal, it really depends on what you're grilling. Generally though, you shouldn't serve delicately nuanced wines with foods from the grill. The wine needs to stand up to the bold, fresh flavors found in most rubs and marinades and the charred flavor of grilled meat can overpower a wine's complexities. Most of the time, it's best to stick with flavorful, aromatic wines that are fruit forward and generally not heavy on the tannins.

First let's start with the basics - hamburgers and hotdogs. There's no reason to spend a lot on wines to pair with these simple, but delicious, foods. Macari Vineyards Collina 48 Merlot ($10) is a juicy, light-bodied red that begs for a burger. Made 100 percent in steel, it is extremely fruity up front with red cherries, raspberries and almost no tannins. Channing Daughters Winery's 2004 Fresh Red Merlot ($14) is another soft, fruity red that would work well.

If you don't like red wine, try a dry Ros . Wolff

Estate Vineyards 2004 Ros  ($13) is an excellent example of what Ros  can be. It's crisp, refreshing and interesting on the palate with flavors of strawberries, cherries, apricots and a little grapefruit. Dry but a little creamy at the end because of the addition of a little Chardonnay, it's well balanced and anything but white Zinfandel.

Serving grilled pork or chicken? Try Jamesport Vineyards' 2002 Cabernet Franc ($24). Not as complex as their award-winning 2001 Cab Franc, it's filled with berry aromas and flavors accented with cedar and spice with super smooth tannins that are great with smoky-spicy grilled foods. Broadfields Wine Cellars, Lieb Family Cellars and Peconic Bay Winery also make tasty, grill-worthy Cab Franc.

Steak is considered by many the ultimate in grilled meat, and while you could drink the aforementioned Cabernet Francs with it, Macari

Vineyards 2001 Bergen Road ($40) a blend of Merlot, Cabernet Sauvignon and Malbec, deep and rich with berry and chocolate flavors has more noticeable tannins that stand up well to charred beef. While many Long Island Cabernet Sauvignons tend to be light, everyday reds, the Lenz 2000 Cabernet Sauvignon ($30) is an exquisite exception. It's ripe, full-bodied and overflowing with blackberry, raspberry and toasty oak flavors. It would be great with grilled lamb or venison.

Here on the Island, we're lucky to have ready access to ultra-fresh, just-from-the-water shellfish and it's wonderful on the grill with light sauces or marinades. Lieb Family Cellars 2003 Pinot Blanc Reserve ($17) offers a floral nose with peaches, pear and citrus on the palate and is great with grilled lobster or shrimp. Channing Daughters Winery's 2004 Pinot Grigio ($18) is practically made for scallops with its pear, lemon and lime flavors with mineral notes and fresh crispness. If you think you don't like Pinot Grigio, think again. This is nothing like the bland, lemon-water Pinot Grigio you've had in the past.

Finally, if you're serving light fish like halibut or flounder, a zesty, ultra-aromatic white is what you want. Macari Vineyards 2003 "Katherine's Vineyard" Sauvignon Blanc ($16) fits the bill perfectly with a fresh, clean nose of lime and lemon-grass and lively acidity on the palate with lime and kiwi flavors. Other producers of top-flight Long Island Sauvignon Blanc include Raphael, Channing Daughters and Shinn Estate Vineyards.

Keep in mind that any wine, regardless of quality, is going to lose aroma and character if you leave it out in the sun all day. Always keep white wines on ice and red wines in the shade.

Hugh Johnson's 2004 Pocket Wine Book

VINEYARDS

THE NEW YORK TIMES, November 9, 2003: "Mr. Johnson's highest across-the-board praise goes to Pellegrini. It is, he says, one of the Island's 'most enchantingly designed wineries.' IT OFFERS 'OPULENT MERLOT, STYLISH CHARDONNAY, BORDEAUX-LIKE CABERNET.' 'Inspired winemaking' and 'exceptionally flavorful' wines are found there."

THE ROSENGARTEN REPORT, Issue 15: "The 2000 Cabernet Franc, a lovely, rich purple, is a gorgeous marriage of Cabernet Franc varietal fruit and serious oak. It was, perhaps, THE MOST BORDEAUX-LIKE WINE IN MY TASTING; medium body, well-knit, fruit, chalk, rose and lead-pencil flavors."

tage semi-dry Rosé, Fleurette, was also fruity and pleasing. Stan suggested pairing it with fried chicken, and though we were eagerly dipping into colossal crab cocktails, this is an excellent suggestion.

The 2002 Barrel Fermented Chardonnay, a rich, oaky wine, was well-paired by Murphy with seared foie gras accompanied by caramelized pears and assorted fruit jellies. But I personally preferred the 2003 Chardonnay for its crispness and acidity. It was delicious with duck confit with pear-mango chutney and date molasses.

We cleansed our palates with a 2004 Sauvignon Blanc, a slightly grassy white with notes of citrus. It proved a welcome stand-in for the standard sorbet course.

Murphy does justice to braised meats, and his lamb shanks with parsnip puree and spinach were just the thing with one of the stars of the evening, a bottle sample of Stan's 2004 Pinot Noir. In a mini vertical tasting, we sampled the '02 through '04 and the difference was remarkable. This wine is, of course, nowhere near release, but the promise is there. Saving the best for last, we drank the 2000 Meritage, a blend of Cab Sauvignon, Merlot and Cab Franc, and were wowed. (I personally think red blends will become a hallmark of our region.). Having been a little less than enthusiastic about Borghese reds in the past, preferring the Riesling and fabulous Allegra dessert wine (a French restaurateur friend of ours in Manhattan gave this wine high praise, something he rarely does regarding Long Island wines), this meritage was a very nice surprise. Murphy's grilled rib eye with crispy shallots and red wine sauce made a heavenly match, the complexity of the wine, with its dark fruit and soft tannins, holding its own with the hearty dish.

Look for an in-depth interview with Stan, who joined the winery just last summer, in our next wine guide in the July 1 issue of Dan's. If what we tasted is any indication, expect future excellence at Borghese.

LeGault most recently spent six months with Restaurant Associates at the Metropolitan Opera in Manhattan as catering director, but is excited about joining Lenz.

"I have always held Lenz wines and the operation in very high regard," said LeGault. "Peter Carroll, Eric Fry, Sam McCullough and Tom Morgan have excelled at establishing Lenz as a leading producer of world-class wines. I am thrilled and honored to have the opportunity to continue to move the brands forward and further develop the retail market."

Best of luck, Anita. Great to have you back.

While you're hopefully enjoying this Memorial Day weekend, which as we go to press tonight, Tuesday, does not look promising weatherwise, stop in at Lieb Family Cellars' tasting room on Cox Neck Lane in Mattituck for a refreshing taste of summer days to come. The winery is releasing its first-ever Rosé, made from Cab Franc with a touch of Pinot Blanc. According to Lieb general manager Gary Madden, the new Bridge Lane Rosé "is crisp with aromas of strawberries and melon. Perfect for summer."

So we've got our wine. Now all we need is sunshine and warm days. My advice? Drink it and they will come... Cheers.

Family-Friendly Wineries: Entertaining The "Wine Drinkers Of Tomorrow"

By Lenn Thompson

Some teetotalers might disagree, but to many, Long Island wine country is the perfect destination for any sunny afternoon – whether you're single, a couple, or a family. But with so many events and happenings planned all summer, some wineries are much more family friendly than others.

What makes a winery family friendly? Donovan Hall of Rocky Point says, "the key for a successful winery visit with our two-year-old son, Trevor, is wide open spaces and plenty of verjus (unfermented grape juice) and cheese," when talking about his family's favorite destination, Jamesport Vineyards. "Trevor had something like four glasses of verjus while we were tasting (wines). We stayed at Jamesport for almost two hours, talking with people and playing with Trevor. The atmosphere there was very friendly. They even turned up the tunes and we started dancing, something Trevor loved."

Jamesport Vineyard's owner, Ron Goerler, takes pride in his winery's family-friendly approach. "We have a big back yard where families can bring picnic baskets and Frisbees and hang out amongst the vines. We also have live music on the weekends, which families love."

Bob Palmer, owner of Palmer Vineyards and president of the Long Island Wine Council, considers his winery one of the most family friendly because, "we have a number of events designed to attract families, with free hot dogs with a $1 soft drink purchase at our 4th of July and Labor Day celebrations." Palmer Vineyards also offers hayrides through the vineyard in the fall and Palmer, like Goerler, encourages picnics on the lawn all year long.

When asked why welcoming families and children is important, Palmer answered thoughtfully. "These are important events because the children of today are the wine drinkers of tomorrow. And, it helps show children that there is nothing wrong with moderate wine consumption."

As the winery with the most active events calendar, it's no surprise that Martha Clara Vineyards has a lot to offer families too. In addition to kid-friendly features, like a petting zoo and horse-drawn carriage rides, events like this weekend's, "Make Peace With Animals," which features retired racing greyhounds, are great draws for kids of all ages.

Chris O'Reilly of New Hyde Park thinks that events are key to a good trip out east with his two kids. "The special events are ideal so that there are other distractions for the wee ones. Regular wine tasting is an invite for trouble with bored kids. But, I have to commend most of the wineries for welcoming our family and making our daughter, Corinne, feel welcome."

O'Reilly also cautions parents about going to the busiest tasting rooms on summer weekends. "(We usually avoid) the ones that are (crazy busy) in the tasting room. The off season and any day when you're not shadowing a tour bus are our ideal trip times. It also helps to know what your kids' limits are and how they interact with a roomful of strangers."

Laurel Lakes Vineyard is another Long Island winery that keeps families in mind, offering free soft drinks for those under 21. The building and grounds are big and easily navigated by strollers and young children. Children are also welcome to join their parents on vineyard tours, where they can even participate in grape clipping and other vineyard activities.

Some wineries do shy away from encouraging kids to visit their tasting rooms, however. One winery spokesman commented, "they (the winery owners) are sensitive to the idea of mixing children and alcohol. They do not feel comfortable encouraging children to visit when the focus is on alcohol. They prefer to market their winery as a place for mature visitors to enjoy their tastings, occasional live music and picnic area."

In the end, the best way to find out if a winery is family friendly is to call and ask. Most seem to be open to it, while others actively encourage it. After all, many of Long Island's 30-plus wineries are family owned and operated. Family is important to them as well.

LI BLUES SOCIETY ROCKS PAINTERS

The Long Island Blues Society presented a kicking blues show at Painter's in Shirley, Sunday May 22nd, with the musical sounds of Mark Hummel and The Blues Survivors. They played with The Dog House Blues Band with special guest appearances by Ken "The Rocket" Korbet and Bob "Hoochie Coochie" Paolucci and bass guitarist Corey.

The Dog House Blues Band, a local band hailing from the Dix Hills area, performed some solid blues music. With the honky tonk vocal sounds of their lead singer John "Rattlesnake" Hensler as the band performed "Big Man", "5 Long Years", "Squeeze Me", "Here in the Dark", "6 O'clock Blues", "Early in the Morning" and others. The band evoked good times from those in the crowd as well as fun between the band members.

The guys in the Dog House set the stage for Mark Hummel and the Blues Survivors. West coast met East coast as Mark Hummel and the Blues Survivors took the stage to show Long Island what West coast blues is all about. Mark Hummel, a protégé of George "Harmonica" Smith, and who has performed with such greats as Willie "Big Eyes" Smith, Jr. Watson, Charles Brown, Charlie Musselwhite, and others rocked the stage at Painter's with his animated and lively persona. The crowd was entertained with his style of jumpin' swing blues music as well as the sound from the rhythm section as they performed "7 Nights To Rock", "I Got Eyes", "Honey Do Woman", "The Blues is Here to Stay", "You Got to Reap What You Sew", some instrumentals including "Roller Coaster" and "Humpelbug", which highlighted the guitar picking of Charles Whael as well as some sing alongs including "Way Up/ My Little Baby" and "I'm Gonna Boogie", before bringing up two of Long Island's own talented harmonica players Ken "The Rocket" Korbet and Bob "Hoochie Coochie" Paolucci and bass guitarist Corey to join him and the band on stage for an exceptional Harmonica Blow Out.

Chasing Hillary

Hillary Clinton Tours a Hospital, Gives a Speech, Throws a Party, and Tires a Reporter

By David Lion Rattiner

Senator Hillary Clinton was a busy bee last weekend on the North Fork, and this reporter was just as busy following her around. The North Fork adventure started off at Central Suffolk Hospital, in Riverhead, last Sunday, where the word around town was that Mrs. Clinton and her entourage were going to tour the hospital. As I pulled into the hospital around 12:30 p.m. in my Honda Civic, which I recently got from the wonderful people at Apple Honda in Riverhead, grabbed my camera and rushed inside the hospital to see if I could get a photograph of the senator. Inside the hospital I was met by the front desk.

"Hi, my name is David Rattiner and I am doing a report for Dan's Papers, is Hillary Clinton touring the hospital today?"

"Oh I'm sorry dear, you just missed her, she left about 15 minutes ago or so," the front desk lady said.

"Do you know where she went?"

"I believe she went down to Paumanok Vineyards to do a press conference there."

"Where is that?"

"It's off Soundview, you can't miss it." And so I was off to Paumanok to listen to Hillary "give'em hill," as her bumper sticker says.

The Paumanok press conference was exciting. There were bodyguards everywhere and a bunch of various supporters. Everyone was talking about the interstate direct shipment of wine issue. If you don't already know, New York State does not allow direct shipment of wine out of state. Direct shipment of wine makes up the majority of the wine industry, so the approval of out of state direct shipment would be a positive thing for North Fork winemakers. Naturally, Hillary Clinton supports out of state direct shipment of wine and is happy that the Supreme Court has declared the ban on out of state direct shipment anti-competitive.

Hillary also mentioned her opinion on the Broadwater issue, an issue that has many community members very angry. Broadwater is a company proposing to build a giant re-gasification plant and is applying for approval to build it in the middle of Long Island Sound. Nearly every elected member of the community is against the construction of this plant. This reporter is also against its construction. The plant, proposed to be the size of the ship the Queen Mary, would make for an eyesore, would signal the industrialization of the Long Island Sound, would be a perfect terrorist target, and would only invite other such types of industry to enter the Sound. Hillary, thankfully, is also against Broadwater entering Long Island Sound stating this at the conference,

"I am deeply concerned about the project and I just wrote a long letter to FERC, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, raising a number of questions and asking for answers about the whole idea of this platform in the Long Island Sound. So I am pushing for more information and expressing my deep concerns, because I think it is something that has a lot of potential problems with it."

After the press conference at Paumanok, I hit the road once again, this time to the gorgeous Entenmann's Estate. A happy guard dressed in a naval-like uniform greeted me then directed me where to park. I was then led to an electric vehicle where I was brought directly in front of the estate. I passed by peacocks and chickens as we made our way up to the front door. There were more bodyguards and people with Blackberry phones all bumbling about. It was at the front door where a pleasant young guy in a suit unfortunately stopped me. "Sorry, press is not allowed at this event," he said.

I tried to reason with the guy, explaining to him that I was from Dan's Papers and that I wouldn't bother anyone, but he held strong and wouldn't let me through. I've got to be honest, I was a little disappointed. It was the same feeling that I occasionally get when I can't get into a nightclub. Defeated, I headed back to my car, ashamed of not being a somebody.

This gave me a head start on Hillary, however. The word was that she was heading to Westhampton High School to speak about the military base closing around the country and to also to congratulate local officials for dodging the closing of the air base in Westhampton. Base closings plagued the entire country two weeks ago, putting people out of work because the Pentagon needed to save some money.

Thankfully, I beat Hillary to Westhampton Beach, but was exhausted from all of the chasing around. After the speech at Westhampton, I simply left. I could not keep up with this woman. She was too much for me. This relationship was going to end at Westhampton beach. My Hillary chase was going to come to a close even if she was planning on speaking at my house next. I don't know if she was going to do something else, but I simply no longer had the energy, or the gas money for that matter, to continue chasing her around all over Long Island. If there is one thing you can say about Hillary Clinton, it is that she is one hard-working senator.

Dan's North Fork

The Same. And Different.

By Susan Whitney Simm

Soon after Manhattan restaurateur Steven Goebel started coming out to the North Fork four years ago, for weekends, he started plotting ways to stay out here year-round. One of Steven's stops on his way out east was the Rotisserie and Smokehouse, opened by John Ross – the pioneering chef renowned for his cuisine starring local ingredients at his venerable Ross' North Fork restaurant – a few years back.

It turns out Steven was doing more than picking up food for the weekend; he was actually finding his future here on the North Fork. When John announced his decision to retire last year, Steven finally realized his dream. He sold his city restaurants, left Manhattan for East Marion and bought the Rotisserie from John.

Today, the basic menu is much the same, as Steven didn't want to tamper too much with what he knew was Ross' winning formula. But there are subtle, and welcome, changes.

Steven's Manhattan restaurants, both located downtown near Ground Zero, included a Mexican-style eatery. Jose, Arturo, Saul, and Mario (all of whom worked for Steven in Manhattan since 1989) comprise Steven's staff and they have introduced some excellent Mexican dishes. Traditional quesadillas, which look a little like pizzas with cheese inside instead of on top, are available with just cheese (my favorite), steak, chicken or vegetables ($7.99). Taco choices include chicken, steak or shrimp and come with generous sprinklings of cilantro ($7.99). The vegetarian burrito is fabulous, but it is also available stuffed with chicken, steak or shrimp (all $8.99 each), accompanied by a delightful side salad of local greens topped with slices of ripe tomato.

The homemade fresh salsa and guacamole, made fresh daily, are both delicious. And the newly introduced fresh tortilla chips are sinfully hot and crispy. A bowl of these and a few Coronas would be perfect with one of our legendary summer sunsets.

Menu stalwarts, such as rotisserie chicken ($11.49) and smoked ribs ($9.99 half rack) are ever so slightly different, but even more flavorful than before. Steven has added lemon and pepper to the chickens and cooks them a bit longer, and the ribs are now rubbed with a different blend of spices. Steven has also added Bell and Evans chickens, which are a little larger and meatier than the standard Perdue birds. I admit to being partial to the Bell and Evans, but unless you are feeding more than two, the Perdues still suit just fine.

Rotisserie duck (from Crescent Duck Farms in Aquebogue), which John did to perfection, is unchanged. Order in advance for a company-worthy dinner. Honey-glazed duck legs ($2.79) remain on the menu, though Steven has altered the marinade and cooks these a little longer, resulting in very crisp skin and less fat. These are great to include if you are feeding a crowd, along with rotisserie chicken, fried chicken ($13.49/8-piece bucket) and ribs.

Side dishes include many of the familiar, including mashed potatoes, creamed spinach (Steven's recipe, which is very good), steamed vegetables (I take these home for a quick sauté with a bit of butter and fresh herbs), cole slaw, rotisserie potatoes, mashed yams, cornbread stuffing, macaroni and cheese and fresh mixed salads from Cutchogue's Satur Farms.

Seafood lovers are not left out here, with the traditional fish and chips ($7.49, chips are now thinner and crisper), batter-dipped shrimp ($8.99) and, occasionally, lovely fried local oysters (eat these in as they are really at their best fresh from the fryer).

Holidays were always a busy time for John, and Steven finds it the same. Check with him in advance for holiday menus. One thing I haven't tried, but is on my list this Thanksgiving is a whole rotisserie turkey. These are prepared beginning at two in the morning and continuing throughout Thanksgiving Day, so the bird is hot and fresh when your guests arrive. Steven also hopes to add whole rotisserie turkey breast this summer—as well as mole, a Mexican dish that incorporates chocolate.

Hours have been expanded: 11 a.m. till 9 p.m. Sunday-Thursday, 'til 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday. And those tiny, uncomfortable bench seats are thankfully gone. When Steven told John he tossed them because they were so small, John said that he hadn't done that because it was a take-out restaurant.

"I like John a lot, don't get me wrong, but I told him it was only a take-out restaurant because people couldn't sit down. It's really a sit-down restaurant that you couldn't sit down in!" Now spacious round metal-topped tables dot the eating area, which is much more inviting as a result. Not changed is the delightful BYOWine (or beer) house policy, so pick up a bottle of local color and prepare to feast..... in comfort.

Rotisserie is open Mon-Thurs, 11:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. and Sat-Sun 11:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m.

Pepi's

Old Main Road
Southold, NY
631-765-6373

The quaintly named 'Port of Egypt' marina in Southold commands one of the most spectacular views over Peconic Bay. Within the marina area sits Pepi's restaurant, where diners can really experience that view to the full. Pepi and Nick have owned the restaurant now for seven years and are open for lunch and dinner seven days a week.

When you see a restaurant filling up with patrons in mid-week, out of season, you know that they must be doing something right. The dining room is attractive and the tables well laid. The basket of delicious bread (delivered daily from Tom Cat Bakery in Astoria) and delicate dipping oil together with a glass of an excellent Organic Chardonnay from Banterra Vineyards, in California, was the perfect opening, as we looked through the interesting menu. Incidentally, Pepi told us that they are making a determined effort to feature more organic food and wines on their menu. They pride themselves on using only the freshest ingredients and believe that organic produce is the next logical step forward. Pepi also told us that, in addition to organic wines from Chile, France, Spain, Italy and California, they also offer organic vodka and beer.

We started with an assortment from the tantalizing list of appetizers. Clams and mussels came in a beautifully balanced white wine sauce that proved a great partner to the bread. Calamari simply sautéed and served with a pungent marinara sauce was good, as were the plump stuffed mushrooms. For us the star appetizers were the dish of roasted red peppers and anchovies. I know that anchovies are not high on a lot of people's wish lists but these were not the thin, over salty, strong tasting anchovies often encountered. The combination really works well and is highly recommended. Talking of likes and dislikes, I freely admit that broccoli bats zero with me and as for broccoli rabe, "Forget about it!" But one lives and learns. My wife loves broccoli rabe so we had a side order and, in the course of duty, I tasted it and was amazed. This broccoli rabe was really delicious, delicate and perfectly seasoned.

Warm spinach salad with fresh mushrooms and bacon looked good and tasted even better, particularly because the bacon did not overwhelm the more delicate spinach.

The entrée list is extensive and includes pasta, seafood, vegetarian and meat dishes, plus a number of daily specials. Cod Marechiare consisted of a large piece of fresh cod baked with onions, fresh basil, garlic, shrimp, clams and mussels in a rich tomato sauce accompanied by bowl of pasta with more shrimp and mussels. I doubt that anyone ever leaves Pepi's feeling that they were served small portions! Another interesting dish was the Veal Valdostana, a substantial cutlet of veal topped with sautéed spinach and melted fontina cheese, which produced another wonderful combination of tastes. With the veal, we drank another organic wine, a Spanish Tempranillo that was a great match for the food.

Pepi's offers a wide range of wonderful looking desserts with the Tiramisu being outstanding, especially with a cup of excellent espresso coffee to finish the meal.

Nick is responsible for the kitchen along with Alexandro, his chef. They and their team can serve around 300 customers a day on a summer weekend. Hence, at peak periods, diners should be prepared to wait and enjoy the view. Reservations are not taken except for large groups. Pepi's serves well thought-out dishes based on Northern Italian cuisine, prepared from fresh, mainly local ingredients and its popularity is well deserved. Prices are very reasonable with appetizers ranging from $8 to $12 and entrées mainly in the $16 to $20 range. The wine list offers a good selection of local and other wines from $24 upwards for a bottle or for $6 for a good sized glass.

Pepi's is a great place to eat at because you will always find something on the menu to tempt your taste buds and the food is extremely well prepared and presented, and of course the wonderful water views really complete the whole picture.

Pepi's Restaurant is open 12 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. seven days a week

North Fork Dining: Dan's Papers Critics' Choices

Bayview Inn & Restaurant—Culinary fireworks from a new sparkler facing Peconic Bay. The historic Bayview has undergone many identity changes since its inception as an 1860's boutique hotel. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell have restored its original spirit with seven guestrooms and the North Fork's most exciting new dining room. Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03).

The Clubhouse at Indian Island—Along the pretty Peconic River, at Indian Island Golf Course, this restaurant offers quality cooking at realistic prices convenient to diners from both Forks. New proprietor Russ Moran transformed a drab dining room to one of warmth and comfort, with soft lighting and smartly laid tables. His eclectic menu features the gently pan-fried oysters and clams on the half shell, which you'd swear were just plucked from the bay. French onion soup is deep in flavor. L.I. duck in a pepper cherry sauce and calves liver with bacon & onions were tasty and will leave no one hungry. Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. Entrees, $11.95-$16.95. (Bradbrook, 4/16/04).

Cooperage Inn—With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame-crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Off-premises catering a specialty. Entrées $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03).

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind—The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulée was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A. Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03).

La Plage—A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef/proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance try the lightly seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime / sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla creme brulée.). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 2/04).

Modern Snack Bar—Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage; very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crab cakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrées, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02).

Pepi's—Dazzling panoramic views of Peconic Bay and sumptuous Northern Italian cooking combine for a sensuous dining experience. Appetizers include a highly flavorful vegetable antipasto and a fresh tri-color salad of arugula, radicchio, and endive. Penne ala Vodka, often predictable, is anything but. The penne is served perfectly al dente and the sauce is both smooth and smoky. Also delicious is chicken Sorrentino, with eggplant, prosciutto, and fresh mozzarella. Come dessert, do not miss the tiramisu, co-owner Nikolov's specialty, an all-time keeper. Entrees $16-$25. Port of Egypt Marine, Southold. 765-6373.

Red Door—A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef/owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry creme brulée and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrées - $16-$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03).

Scrimshaw—Chef/co-owner Rosa Ross, whose culinary credentials are carved in many a menu from Hong Kong to Italy to Manhattan, brings her latest invention to Greenport. Nestled at the end of Preston's Dock, there are dazzling views of Shelter Island. The slightly crammed dining room is made intimate and warm by sophisticated lighting and subdued music. The menu is full of interesting tastes, starting with excellent duck confit-stuffed spring rolls and hearty fish chowder. Especially good among the eclectic entrées are tamarind lamb shanks with lemon risotto and the supremely comforting seafood in a sweet, tangy kaffir lime coconut broth. Interesting wine list. Preston's Dock (at end of Main Street), Greenport. 477-8882. (Simm, 06/04).

Stonewall's—Hauté cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck à l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout, as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers, and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrees $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03).

Tuscan House—Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a purée of beans dressed with soppressata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01).

Tweed's—Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The decor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London.

Entrées $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03).

Soundview Inn—Picture windows overlook the Sound from every table. On the elevated outdoor deck, however, the tables actually hang over the Sound! Rachel Levin Murphy's restaurant takes in some of the best sunsets on the East Coast and also serves tasty fare in a relaxing environment. Plump and succulent steamers make a great starter as does chicken liver crostini for more adventurous tastes. Chef Kevin Rushkoski's leg of lamb in a rosemary reduction came up tender and flavorful, without a trace of gaminess, accompanied by expertly wilted spinach. Desserts are collectively incredible. The somewhat abbreviated wine list is well selected and agreeably priced. Entrées $19.50-$27.50. North Road, Greenport. 477-0666. (Bradbrook 5/20/05).

Mirth: Good and Evil Dance and Sing in Wonderful Comedy

Last weekend's offering at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall was Mirth, a musical comedy written by Carolyn Feldschuh and Joe Martinsen that features a cast of local performers. A good time was had by all on opening night last Friday.

Mirth is an integrated musical, in which the songs are woven into a continuing story line, rather than a revue, in which the songs are part of a series of sketches loosely tied to a general theme. The story takes place in the kingdom of Mirth, which is in turmoil. The Queen, a good influence on the King and a benevolent presence in the kingdom, has died, putting the King in a dark mood.

In addition, the King must contend with some international intrigue. Spain has developed a plot against Mirth. Mirth is home to a secret process for refining wheat. It enables the Mirthians to create their national confection, the irresistible twink (yes, it does look just like a twinkie). The Spanish, meanwhile, happen to grow a variety of wheat which is superior to Mirthian wheat. If they can learn the secret Mirthian process for refining wheat, they can dominate the twink trade. The plot is set in motion when the Mirthian Princess falls in love with the Spanish Knight.

Besides the stern father (the King), and the rebellious daughter (the Princess) and the dashing Knight, the kingdom is populated with many other stock characters, including an evil Witch, a pompous Priest, and various servants, including two torturers. The ghost of the dead Queen also returns several times as a sort of "good" witch. Finally, there is an ingenue who falls in love with one of the torturers. She sees the good in him.

This play, as you may guess, is a dualistic world in which good and evil constantly battle for the upper hand. In the end, tolerance is triumphant and love conquers all. The juxtaposition of good and evil occurs a bit too frequently on stage, I think, but more about that later. Let's get to the good stuff.

The humorous numbers move along nicely, and the ballads have strong, emotive moments. The songs do not seem at all repetitive, but remain distinct. There was no feeling of being trapped in one's seat and listening to the same song all night long. The solos, duets, trios, and chorus numbers are all well constructed.

The performers did a good job of portraying their broadly drawn characters, especially Sue Goldstein as the Witch, Stephen Scheck as the Priest, and Mike Horn as the head torturer, Gorin. Jessica Raven, as Gwendolyn, made a very convincing ingenue. There were half a dozen children in the cast and they did a good job as well—especially Jennifer Lengyel, who had a lot of lines to deliver as Squirrel, a royal messenger; and Tyler Nappe, who had some comic moments as a boy sent to the dungeon for stealing a twink.

As singers, the cast was more than adequate, except when a particular melody exposed a weakness in someone's voice. Judging by this show only (perhaps not fair to some) I'll single out Nelson Donald as a singer with a very good voice, clear and expressive, even at low volume. He sang a nice ballad titled "In This Dark Place."

The most moving song, though, was a duet sung by Rebekah White as the Princess and Jessica Raven as Gwendolyn. This song is titled "I've Found A Man." It is a plea for tolerance and understanding, and it provided the most emotive moment in the play. The audience was quite affected by it. Which brings me back to those juxtapositions of good and evil.

Immediately after "I've Found A Man" a conflict arises between the Princess and Gwendolyn. This spoils the effect the song produces, which should be left alone for a moment or two. Evil will take its turn soon enough.

Many humorous bits of stage business were incorporated into the performance, but one stands out the most. At one point the Spanish Knight, Roberto Gonzales (played by Scott Kennedy) and his manservant, Pip (played by Ken Rowland) approach a tower of the castle in a primitive "flying machine" so that Gonzales, who is not allowed in the castle, can have a conversation with the Princess. Rowland was piloting this contraption, and he made the most of not being able to make it "hover" in one spot. He wandered unpredictably all over the stage, turning every which way as Kennedy tried to remain facing the Princess and speak so that the audience can hear him. Rowland, sporting an impish grin, showed no mercy, and this bit was hilarious. Kudos to Kennedy for staying with it.

The stage crew kept everything moving along. Scene changes went smoothly, costumes and lighting were in order, and there was only one prop malfunction that I noticed. The Boneyard Band never missed a beat. It was quite a show.

North Fork Crops In Spring Go Way Beyond Garden Variety

By Susan Whitney Simm

You know it's really spring here on the North Fork when farmers put tractor-driven carts of self-serve asparagus on the roadside and vibrant flats of pansies appear at nurseries. Although this May has been colder than many in recent memory, the nights will slowly turn warmer and the dark green heads of potato plants will finally emerge from the fields, signaling summer's arrival. We just have to be a little more patient than usual this year.

To most of us, Memorial Day weekend means the start of the summer season out here on the East End. Technically, however, summer doesn't come 'til June 21—a long way off indeed. But even if the forecast is for cool, rainy weather, there are still many plans to make to brighten this long-anticipated holiday weekend. So get out your planting gear and get ready to toss some local greens. Farmstands are open and annual flowers and herbs beckon.

Not all farmstands and nurseries are created equal, of course, so here is a guide to the best and brightest the North Fork has to offer. Some are veterans and others more recently sown, but all have traits to recommend them for a variety of reasons. It all depends on what you want.

The Sepnoski Family has farmed on the North Fork since the turn of the last century. The farmstand, on the Main Road in East Marion, is now offering radishes, arugula, spinach, rhubarb, asparagus and annuals.

Bay View Farms, Main Road, Aquebogue

Owned and operated by the Reeve Family of Aquebogue – Brad and his wife also run the stand in Bridgehampton, on the south side of Montauk Highway, and the one in Watermill, on the north side – who have been farmers for generations here on Long Island. The newly expanded Bay View Farm Market, comprised of authentic Amish barns, offers local produce – currently leeks, scallions, rhubarb, spinach and herbs. In addition to goat's milk and goat butter, there are lots of casual, colorful annuals, and tomato plants in containers ready for your deck, as well as fresh duck eggs. Since this is a retail market and not a farmstand, there are also Snapple beverages, chips and other snacks. A hen house off to the right contains a variety of brilliantly feathered clucking birds for those of you who, like me, love all things avian. This is a good first stop for those traveling from the west on the L.I.E. to points further east. Open 7 days. Call 722-3077.

Gabrielson's, Main Road, Jamesport

If it's annuals, perennials or cut flowers that you're after, this garden center has it all. A recent stop provided me with pots of annual daisies that do not need excessive deadheading (removal of spent blooms) and a lovely hanging basket of old-fashioned fuchsia. Prices are fair and quality is high here. Carolee, who has attended many Master Gardening classes, really knows her stuff. Her expertise is something you just won't find at discount "box stores" like Home Depot. Remember, buying an annual plant is just the beginning. Next, you want it to thrive and give pleasure throughout the summer. Poorly grown plants may look healthy only to wilt as soon as you get them in the ground. Open 7 days a week.

Shop (continued from previous page)

Heading east toward Mattituck you'll find, for a short time in spring, my favorite source for local asparagus: a farm cart, hooked to a bright orange International tractor, that holds buckets of the fresh green spears and an iron box into which you deposit $3 for a generous bunch. This self-serve stand is located just after the turnoff for Aldrich Lane heading east and just past Laurel Lake Vineyards heading west. (For a change of pace, try roasting asparagus, tossed with a bit of salt and toasted peanut oil – Loriva makes a good one – for 10-15 minutes in a 400 degree oven).

Harbes Family Farms, Sound Avenue, Mattituck

This may look like a den of "agritainment" during the busy late summer months, with a big corn maze to amuse and folks toting armfuls of pumpkins across Sound Avenue, but Ed Harbes and his family are serious North Fork farmers. Ed farms many, many acres and grows, arguably, the best sweet corn on the East End. They offer it roasted and rolled in butter in season with a side of fresh lemonade, but even this time of year this stand is worth a visit. Local asparagus, rhubarb and lettuces are fresh from the fields, and flats of annuals are beautiful and abundant – just know what you want when you go as there is no personalized, informed service on the scale as good nursery offers. If your home truly is your castle, you'll find estate-size hanging baskets of impatiens that are truly breathtaking (and back-breaking, so they are used for display only. But you can still dream.....). Mattituck location now open 7 days. Call 298-0800.

Trimble's Nursery, Main Road, Cutchogue

Ann Trimble and Nancy Leskody are passionate about plants. They don't practice shortcuts, such as heating the greenhouses at night to force growth or applying excess fertilizer—two things that, while they hasten growth and hence make plants ready for sale earlier, can produce poorly performing adult specimens. "It's like plants on steroids," says Ann. What they do is grow quality plants under cool conditions, which prevents the "legginess" you often see in seedlings as a result of speed growing, and so Trimble's tends to lag a bit behind some early birds down the road. As a long-time devotee of this nursery, believe me, it's worth the wait. Plants grown under their conditions acclimate much better to the suddenly harsh world of the garden after leaving the protective womb of the greenhouse. Trimble's has gotten away from flats, compelled by the big fuel surcharges of the last two years, focusing instead on four-and-a-half-inch pots that house larger, more garden-ready plants that you can substitute for flats. Remember, with plants as with everything else, you get what you pay for and the tiny seedlings that fill flats take much longer to grow in a growing season that is short to begin with. You will still find a few flats of plants such as cleome (spider flower), cosmos, and other unusual plants, but the focus here is on quality. You'll also find gorgeous hibiscus and cutting geraniums (grown from cuttings instead of seeds), annual mandevilla vines and lots of perennial favorites, such as peonies and lupines. Trimble's also offers fine English garden design services. Ann is very detail oriented and even insists on going inside homes to see how the garden will be viewed "from the inside out." A garden is just a way, though perhaps the most delightful one, to extend your living space. Open 7 days. Call 734-6494.

Sang Lee Farms, North Road, Peconic

This farm, founded by Karen and Fred Lee, specializes in Asian greens as well as baby mixed salad greens. The pleasant indoor stand currently features a number of the farm's greenhouse-grown produce, such as mesclun and Asian salad mixes – the former of which includes 12 different greens including arugula, tatsoi and pea shoots, cucumbers, and baby bok choy. This latter stars in the stir-fry pack, a Sang Lee specialty that also currently includes asparagus, chopped onions, and scallions. This is the "fast food" of the local farmstand world, as it is completely ready to cook and eat. It even includes a pack of stir-fry sauce developed by Fred and Karen. Just follow the directions – you can also add some chicken or sliced steak if you like – and you have a fabulously fresh meal literally in minutes. Sang Lee also has local hothouse tomatoes, naturally field-grown asparagus, potted mixed herbs and an assortment of annuals and perennials. Look forward in June to sugar snap and snow peas and Napa cabbage. According to Fred Lee, this spring has been a bit colder than normal, but they are still on schedule in the process of switching from greenhouse to field-grown crops. Open 7 days. 734-7001.

Latham Farms, Main Road, Orient

Aside from the line of ferry traffic running along its spine, Orient is nearly untouched by modern-day intrusions. The village is quaint, the shoreline spectacular, and an old-time Orient family, the Latham's, are no strangers to the trials of farming on the East End. As Orient is cooler than Riverhead most of the year, with the surrounding Long Island Sound nearly touching the ocean out here, spring crops like strawberries are usually later. We always hope for them this weekend and that they stick around until July 4, but this rarely happens. Most times they begin a week or so after Memorial Day and conk out just before the 4th. But you will find rhubarb, arugula, radishes, and spinach, which I think tastes best in the cool weather of early spring. Later on, Latham's will feature beautiful bouquets of cut flowers and local green beans, potatoes, tomatoes and berries. They also grow great greens, such as red leaf and Boston lettuces. Now open weekends.

In closing, I'd like to share a few spring vegetable facts. First, do you know that there are only two perennial vegetables? Hint: they are both for sale at farmstands right now. Answer: rhubarb (yes, it is a vegetable) and asparagus. And the phrase "new potato" doesn't only refer to small red potatoes, but to the new crop of potatoes. They can be red, white, gold or even purple. However, if they're not left over from last year, as all local potatoes out there for sale right now are, they are new potatoes all. This year's potato plants are just now poking their heads from the cold ground, but by June they will be producing the first tiny spuds of the season. The plants, like the rest of us, are patiently anticipating summer.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Eons ago, way back in the 20th Century, when the Star Wars first broke out in our crowded little galaxy, who knew they would go on and on, just like all of our real wars. Now, after a mere 28-year run of prequels, sequels and some boringquels, director, writer and producer George Lucas has decided to end the spacey saga with a bang. Not the really big bang because, who knows, he may come up with yet another postquel or whatever to his Episode III - Revenge of the Sith, ballyhooed as the ultimate climax.

The bang I made reference to his finally taking a political stance. Lucas's high and ultra-fast flying, whimsical science fiction-dreamscapes never drew analysis to the real world around him. His far-out vision concentrated on combining the creation of new technology with the old-time nostalgia of 1930's Saturday morning movie serials. Popcorn never tasted better. With it's somewhat dark conclusion, Revenge of the Sith (you'll be happy that I am resisting doing lisp jokes) makes obvious direct comparisons to our ruling party and administration and Bush particularly. Need I say that this has stirred up another skirmish of political activism with neon-like sword swishing stirring up what's left of the ozone layer. Typically, Web sites and flogging bloggers are whacking away. The Web site, Pabaah.com has called for a boycott of the film. It 's no wonder Stealth venom is flying - the Sith Revenge had theatres sold out way before its opening. Is the movie that good? Lem'me tell ya!

Aside from the politically irate, I don't think many, if any, will be disappointed. Senator Bill Frist may threaten another "nuclear" power play but the general public and fans will devour it. For one thing, Star Wars' inventive computer-generated imagery is better than ever both technically and aesthetically. Its storyline suffers only from the fact that characters and events have been, in the past, shuffled like a "Go Fish" deck of cards.

We know of some of the eventual plot outcomes and the fate of its leading roles. Be that as it may, there are some surprises—Enough for me to censor my own pen. Mostly, however, the questions planted in the previous incarnations get answered—not to everyone's satisfaction, I'm sure. Anakin/Vader gone Evil (Hayden Christensen) wimps out to Senator Palpatine (Ian McDiarmid) who is more evil. Before that, he is convinced by Yoda, (voiced by Frank Oz) that he has to relinquish his great love Padme (Natalie Portman).

There are fans who may find deep meanings in Star Wars' continued wavering of philosophy - most definitely not a Lucas forte. Anyway, the word has always been fun. No one was looking for a "masterpiece" in spite of Mr. Lucas's own pyramid-like approach to the lengthy saga. Obi-Wan Kenobi (Ewan McGregor) remains hero-like even as Anakin/ Darth Vader sinks into an abyss of cruel ooze. His villainous is almost out-snaked by General Grievous who (or is it, what?) has a fabulous duel with Obi-Wan at his most deft. He's especially deft responding to Vader's almost word-for-word George W. Bush pronouncement, "If you are not with me, you're my enemy." Obi-Wan's retort is, "Only a Sith thinks in absolutes."

President Ronald Reagan quoted Star Wars references to great advantage. Now, Star Wars seems to quote back. In a chilling resemblance to Senator Frist, Sith's Senator Palpatine grasps at sweeping new powers. Padme laments, "This is how liberty dies - to thunderous applause."

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Rare Memorabilia Hits a Home Run

When was the last time you went shopping and actually had fun? At Grey Flannel, the theme is "more fun than two barrels of monkeys or a day at the beach." Remember the nickel rides outside Macy's as a kid? Bring your toddler for a ride on a scaled down Ford Model T made in the 1950s.

In 2005, Grey Flannel moved their entire operation from Great Neck to a beautiful new location in sunny Westhampton Beach. Their large and extensive public gallery at 8 Moniebogue Lane (just behind Main St.) displays an eclectic assortment of the finest in unique Americana and curios, from vintage Howdy Doody dolls and pinball machines to antique barber chairs and one-arm bandits from the 1933 Chicago World's Fair. In the front window you can see the "Grey Flannel Express," a classic Lionel accessorized train set rolling down the tracks. Other eye-catchers include an original 1950s three-sheet movie poster of Fess Parker as Davy Crockett; several vintage, large Coca-Cola advertisements, signs and collectibles; a gorgeous hand-made 1930s Chris-Craft mahogany model speedboat; a fully operational 1953 Seeburg Select-O-Matic 100 High-Fidelity Jukebox that plays up to 110 songs from the included 45 RPM records; an actual pair of original Radio City Music Hall double unit seats.

The gallery is open seven days a week during the summer. The gallery is accessible by air, sea and land. East Hampton Airport is less than 30 minutes away. The canal leading to the Bay and Atlantic Ocean is right behind the building; you can drop anchor and enter through the rear courtyard. Just look for the green 1949 Chevy custom "Grey Flannel" truck outside! The boys will be happy to take you for a spin or pick you up from the train station.

Every item offered in the retail gallery can also be seen on Grey Flannel's user-friendly website (www.greyflannel.com), where the viewer will be treated to an additional collection of game-used jerseys, bats, autographed baseballs and rare photos from sports, entertainment and politics that is second to none. Have something in your attic you would like appraised? You are encouraged to bring it down to the "permanent" memorabilia road show, Grey Flannel. Acclaimed worldwide for their expertise, knowledge and impeccable integrity, you will depart with your curiosity satisfied.

Bidding has begun for Grey Flannel's 12th major auction, which runs through June 22nd. Featured in this auction is Babe Ruth's game-used 1932 World Series jersey, attributed to the infamous "called shot" in Game Three. Bidding started at $400,000 and has already gone to $440,000; all known auction records are expected to be surpassed. Additional items include a bat from the 1932 season used by Ruth; a 1958 Mickey Mantle game-used jersey; a Bobby Orr 1970s NHL All-Star jersey; a 1999 Joe Pepitone Yankees World Series ring; a 1968 Joe Namath game-used NY Jets jersey; Derek Jeter's 2003 game-used World Series jersey and Norman Rockwell's original trial proof lithograph of his famous "Triple Self Portrait" that once hung in Rockwell's house.

The Ruth jersey is stored in Grey Flannel's massive on-premise safe, along with a plethora of rare American treasures. They can be viewed by appointment by calling (631)-288-7800, extension 221. Catalogs, preview times and general information are also available at this number. Bidding is by telephone or Internet at www.greyflannelauctions.com. There will be another auction in the fall; you are welcome to bring in your consignments and have the industry leaders realize the best possible prices for you.

Grey Flannel was founded in 1989 in New York by Richard Russek and has developed into the world's foremost authenticator, appraiser and dealer of game-used jerseys. In 1994 they became the Official Appraisers and Authenticators for the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall Of Fame. In 1998 they were hired by Sotheby's to authenticate the uniform collection of Barry Halper. Mr. Halper's collection rivals that of the Baseball Hall of Fame in scope and was offered in auction during the early summer of 1999.

Remember to come by and visit Grey Flannel when you're in the neighborhood - make them your first and last stop in the Hamptons. Come in and have an ice cold Coca-Cola from an original vintage 1950s Coca-Cola machine, as their treat!

Grey Flannel is located at 8 Moniebogue Lane in Westhampton Beach. Winter hours are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For summer hours, call 288-7800.

theatre preview: guild hall takes on hamlet...by jan silver

"With our country at war and our economy in transition, why tackle this Mount Everest of a play?" laughs Josh Gladstone, artistic director of East Hampton's John Drew Theater. "Because this play is so alive – it sheds such enlightenment on our world today."

"Hamlet is like a spoiled, bad-boy rock star who undertakes a journey out of love [for his father] and transforms himself along the way..... He even shares his changing mind with the audience [in his soliloquies] as the play progresses. Shakespeare's language is so musical and full of meaning on many different levels. And Hamlet is very theatrical and full of pageantry."

Gladstone has enticed a troupe of professional actors and technical staff to perform The Tragedy of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark between June 2 and June 19. He is approaching the text with a 21st century sensibility to tell a classic tale. With a limited budget courtesy of Guild Hall, The Morriss Center, The Joseph Ciner Foundation and other donors, Gladstone brings unbridled enthusiasm and creativity to the play. For example, he plans to use the entire theater to recreate the castle at Elsinore, so the audience will be surrounded and almost become a part of the play.

Michael Nathanson, a young veteran of Manhattan theater, television and film, will play Hamlet. Nathanson gave a critically-acclaimed performance as Trofimov in Guild Hall's production of The Cherry Orchard last year.

Michael Nathanson

Accomplished actress Kate Mueth will play Hamlet's mother Gertrude, and noted theater and screen actor Richard B. Watson portrays Hamlet's uncle King Claudius.

Other professionals in the cast include Shashi Balooja (Horatio), Meryn Anders (Ophelia), Jamie Carmichael (Laertes), Josh Perl (Ghost, Player King), Jonathan Peters (Polonius), Joe Pallister (Fortinbras), Dan Renkin (Rosencrantz), William Cullinan (Guildenstern, Osric) and Minerva Scelza (Player Queen). Even Gladstone's four-year-old son August, a born actor, will perform a few bits in the production.

The technical staff includes Joe Marchese (Guild Hall's technical director and sound designer, happily back after a long medical hiatus), Richard Horwich (dramaturg), Judy Militare (stage manager), Dan Renkin and Brad Lemons (fight directors), Michele Masotto (assistant director), Ann Ritchings (costume designer), David Martin (scenic designer), Sebastian Paczynski (lighting designer) and artist Brian Leaver (painting and image design).

Preview performances are Thursday, June 2, at 8 p.m. (ticket price is "pay what you can") and Friday, June 3 at 7:30 p.m. Opening night is Saturday, June 4, 7:30 p.m., and there is a Sunday, June 5, performance at 5 p.m. Additional performances are Thursday through Saturday, June 9-11, at 7:30 p.m., with an adult education show at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, June 15, and final performances Thursday through Saturday, June 16-18, at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, June 19, at 4 p.m. Tickets are $20 for adults ($18 for Guild Hall members) and $15 for students under 18.

Tickets can be purchased Thursday through Sunday at the Guild Hall box office on Main St. (Montauk Highway) between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m., just before showtime, or by calling the box office at 631-324-4050. Tickets are also available online at theatermania.com or by calling Theatermania at 866-811-4111.

Josh Gladstone had one final comment on Hamlet, "There is so much in a Shakespeare play that one production cannot capture all the levels, but I do hope this production will be rough and exciting to all who see it."

Take Five 2005 with Jan Silver

Hello and welcome back. The season kicks off with a whirl of good entertainment: comedienne Joy Behar and then Peter Cincotti in Westhampton Beach; the American premiere of a Simon Gray play and then comedian Jeffrey Ross in Sag Harbor. Richie Havens and then Martin Sexton sing in Amagansett. There's an award-winning foreign film at the Parrish Art Museum, and James Brady speaks about his new book in East Hampton. The Sag Harbor Whaling Museum just opened an interactive exhibit called "Island Kings, Whalers and Beach Boys."

There are Memorial Day services in many of our villages (check Dan's Day-by-Day calendar), and what kind of holiday weekend would it be without at least one big benefit? This Saturday it's Planned Parenthood's cocktail party with many celebrities converging at landscape designer Edwina von Gal's. For details on all of the above, and more, read on.

THEATER AND COMEDY

Bay Street Theatre in Sag Harbor presents its first summer production, Japes, a U.S. premiere. Written by acclaimed playwright Simon Gray (Butley, Otherwise Engaged, Quartermaine's Terms), Japes is the story of two brothers sharing their childhood home and the one woman they both love. Performances are Tues. through Sat. at 8 p.m. and Sun. at 7 p.m. ($40-65). On Monday, May 30, popular television and club comedian Jeffrey Ross takes over the Bay Street stage in the "Comedy Club" series ($38). Tickets are available at the box office (11 a.m. through showtime) 631-725-9500 or online at www.baystreet.org.

Joy Behar, co-host of ABC-TV's "The View," brings her sharp, comic intelligence to Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday at 8:30 p.m. ($75-100). ## theatre review: evita

"Was there ever such a woman as Eva Peron?" is a very fair question. Illegitimate, and born in Argentina into abject poverty, she grew up determined to become an actress, used men to achieve her goals, married a General who became President and went on to wield immense power herself despite having no official status. She died at a tragically early age of 33 from cancer and was almost beatified by the adoring poor people of Argentina. After death, her body was taken to Italy for 16 years until it was reburied in the simple family tomb in La Ricoltta Cemetery in Buenos Aires, where it still is a "must see" for all tourists. Debate still rages about whether she was devoted to helping the poor or to helping herself get rich.

No wonder this story attracted the attention of Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber when they were looking for a follow up to their first major success with Jesus Christ Superstar, and in 1978 Evita opened in London to immediate acclaim.

Gateway Theater opened the new season at Bellport with their production of Evita and from the opening, set in a dilapidated Argentinean movie house as the program is interrupted to announce the death of Eva Duarte Peron, it was obvious that this was going to be an electric evening.

There are really two key roles in this show. Naturally, Evita is one, and Linda Brescia, coming to the show fresh from an extended run on Broadway as Amneris in Aida, looked spectacular as the Eva Peron adored by the masses. She acted with great skill the complex nature of the woman, giving full range to the good, the bad, and the ugly parts of her character. She sang "Don't Cry for Me Argentina," the song that everyone associates with the show, with all of the passion and brio it calls for. In the reprise, at her final broadcast while she is very ill, she transformed the song into a more tender plea to her devotees. Evita is really written in operatic form with arias and recitative parts. The only jarring note was her tendency to become slightly shrill and nasal during recitative phrases – a pity because otherwise this was a wonderful performance.

The other role is one unusual in modern day musicals or plays. The role of Che – based on the revolutionary Che Guevara, is really a one man Greek Chorus, speaking often to the audience, sometimes to the players, but in a ghost-like role, unseen and unheard by the rest of the cast. Interestingly, Che was Argentinean, not Cuban as is often thought, but it is unlikely that he ever met Eva Peron. This role in many ways demands more than the title role, so productions can hinge on the success of the casting. Producer Paul Allan got it perfectly right when they cast Dan Cooney as Che. Dan Cooney has the swag, the self confidence and the charm that David Essex in London brought to the original cast. He is charismatic and has a superb voice, which he uses to the full, especially in the poignant "High Flying Adored" number.

Jonathan Hammond as Juan Peron combines suitable gravitas with bewilderment and lust for Evita to great effect. Ernest Marchain, as Magaldi, is a very convincing gigolo type musician. He is Evita's first conquest and then her first disposal on her way to fame and fortune. Lakisha Bowen, as Peron's current mistress, is lovely and has such a gorgeous voice as she laments her ousting from Peron's bed by Evita that it is almost hard to believe that he really would get rid of her!

The company, as a whole, performs with tremendous verve, so necessary for this show that moves at a rapid pace. The orchestra under conductor Jeffrey Buchsbaum was excellent and the staging minimalist but very effective in setting the atmosphere. All of the diction of the artists was clear, again very important for this show because Tim Rice's often biting lyrics are worth a listening.

Altogether, Evita is another triumph for Gateway as they start the new season. It runs until June 11th and is highly recommended to all who love a good story with great music that you will certainly come away humming or singing, plus artists who put their all into every minute of the show.

review: great sexpectations

"Reach into my box," said the woman with the sparkling turban, "and receive your sexual fortune." I stood in front of a room of mostly women, all sipping from elegant glasses of burgundy wine. The backdrop that draped behind me was Three Mile Harbor, as seen through the wide windows of East Hampton Point Restaurant. I fumbled through the brass chest with my eyes closed, and I retrieved the object that was said to forecast my sexual life: a heavy brass heart on a thick chain. The woman in the sparkling turban looked at me with kindness in her eyes.

"This is a sign of romance," she said. "But it is so heavy and solid - you have to learn to melt your heart." Interesting.

My friend Lizzy was called up to the front of the room as the sun set into the harbor behind her. She reached into the box, an innuendo which was surely not accidental, and pulled out a key. This, the fortuneteller said, symbolized opening the door to new people and new experiences. Lizzy grinned at the prospect.

The woman in the sparkling turban calls herself Madame Vulva, or when she's not on stage, Margaret Chandler. Upon introducing herself, she told the audience that she was writing the "Who To" Sexual Guide. To come, she went on, were the "What, When, and Where To..... but if you don't know the Why to, then I can't help you." The audience burst into laughter.

Madame Vulva walked around the room at East Hampton Point, picking out members of the audience to read their palms. Some women blushed as she traced their heart lines, others made humorous references to their lives behind closed doors. It was an intimate crowd and, by the end, I felt like we all knew each other well.

When she read my palm, she said that my sexual line was all over the place. "Yes, no, maybe, I don't think so," she said to me. "All I'm saying is I wouldn't want to be moving your piano!" Laughter resonated throughout the room.

The show was fun - nothing heavy, nothing too rooted in fact. But the cause is noble and necessary. A small, gray-haired woman stepped to the front of the room to explain why we were all there. She explained that her daughter, Margaret Chandler (aka Madame Vulva), grew up one of 10 children. One of her sisters was mentally retarded, and it was a source of much difficulty for the family. But they learned together how to bring joy into her life and their own by taking her horseback riding, canoeing, and dancing. The problem, Margaret says, is that many families don't have the funds to bring these joys into their children's lives. That's where the Lizzie Chandler Memorial Fund comes in, offering a budget for recreation to improve the quality of life of mentally retarded people and their families. Individuals can request help from this foundation.

Margaret Chandler has been a psychiatric nurse for 29 years, so she is deeply involved with helping people directly. This comedy show, though, is putting her on the path to helping people in a more monetary way. Her ultimate goal is to raise enough money to start a program called the "Behavioral Boot Camp." This is a total immersion for everyone who is close to the mentally retarded person. It teaches behavioral modification in a way so that everyone has a unified method. Otherwise, Ms. Chandler says, behavioral modification is not effective. However, she thinks that behavioral modification is vital to improving the quality of life of both the affected individual and his/her family.

Margaret Chandler is looking for local talent out here to serve as comics opening for her, as well as MCs for the event. She is also always on the lookout for venues and corporate or private sponsorships.

The next opportunity to see Madame Vulva perform out here will be at the Tavern in Southampton on June 18. For tickets, or just to make a donation to this worthy cause, log onto www.madamevcomedy.com or call 212-517-3926.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

GROUP SHOW AT THE DRAWING ROOM

We've said it before and we'll say it again: a gallery's setting goes a long way in establishing a positive context for the art. Last week's Commentary about LongHouse Reserve is a case in point.

Obviously, The Drawing Room can't compete with the LongHouse when it comes to country landscaping; after all, it occupies a building on East Hampton's Newtown Lane. But people new to the gallery may be surprised to see its backyard, flowering garden and light, airy ambience. It's a plus for any aesthetic venue.

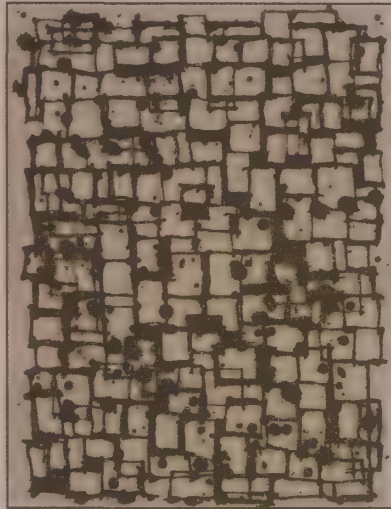

Collages by Suzanne Bocanegra are perhaps our favorite works, featuring miniature cloth aprons signifying (according to the press) peasant labor. The point is that the pieces' formal qualities bring dignity and beauty to a common item.

Such an observation recalls the feminist homage to "women's work," made well-known by such artists as our own local resident, Miriam Shapiro.

Katherine Porter's embroideries may also celebrate traditional, female materials, although we're not sure. We do know, however, that their designs are made all the more arresting by the material, and again recall another local artist, Christa Maiwald, whose embroideries signify her signature work.

The remaining exhibitors have other things in common, namely the use of lines to convey energy and movement. While both Pat Pickett's and Alastair Gordon's lines possess different configurations (swirls vs. a grid, respectively), they are complicated and compact. The shapes communicate a natural energy plus entanglements in gestural form. Ms. Pickett's pieces are not only natural but give the imagination a workout, the configurations reminding us of a spider's web in one case.

Mr. Gordon's grid also signifies this same energy, movement and entanglement, although it's hard to find corresponding items in reality like Ms. Pickett's works.

Configurations by Christine Hiebert are as energetic and arresting but not as entrapping: her gestural marks convey a sense of openness and freedom. Her pieces allow the eye and mind to wander, unlike Mr. Gordon's and Ms. Pickett's works, which capture the eye and guide it along certain well-organized paths.

HONORING THE ARTIST: MARGARET WEISSBACH

Growing up in Manhattan offered certain advantages for cover artist Margaret Weissbach. For one thing, she learned to navigate the subway at an early age. For another, living in New York afforded her the opportunity of visiting museums on a regular basis. Forget about going to the movies on a Saturday afternoon. Ms. Weissbach would see the latest art exhibit at the Met instead.

Ms. Weissbach had an unusual childhood, that's for sure. Consider the fact that she also attended a high school for music and art in Harlem. And yes, she took the subway to get there. "It was an adventure going to school," Ms. Weissbach says now. "A real journey. At each stop, more and more students would get on the train. It was fun to ride to school with all my friends."

There are journeys and there are journeys: Ms. Weissbach has gotten a lot of encouragement on her symbolic journey through life as well. "My eighth grade teacher was the first person to recognize my talent," she explains. "She helped me get together a portfolio. And my father, who was a music critic for the World Telegram, was also a big supporter."

Both high school training and lessons at the Art Students League gave Ms. Weissbach confidence, too, as she learned about two-dimensional and geometric space. Attending Queens College was another important step in Ms. Weissbach's journey, and one teacher especially, John Ferran, was a great inspiration. But she decided to transfer to the University of Wisconsin after attending a summer session there. "I was a New Yorker, but I loved the freedom at the University," she recalls. "I was also learning to draw the figure, not doing Abstract Expressionism, which was the rage at the time."

Those early training days gave Ms. Weissbach a myriad of experiences with diverse media and subjects; she continues to do figures using the medium of monoprints. She creates seascapes, geometric configurations and watercolors as well.

But Ms. Weissbach has also gone on to pursue other roles in her life: she obtained her Masters in Art Education, for example, and became an art instructor, teaching adults at the Art Barge and in Great Neck. "I love teaching," she says. "The students are coming to art with their whole life experiences. They learn a lot from each other."

Ms. Weissbach also went a step further and developed an internship program for New York's New Museum. She just went in to the museum one day and said, "What can I do?" Her efforts turned into a part-time job that lasted six years.

These days find Ms. Weissbach as busy as ever, creating art and painting with her grandchildren. She's also involved in what she calls a conceptual focus, "pulling together in my mind what my contributions to art are."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Artist Steve Alpert Changes Direction

Steve Alpert was a mild-mannered sort, to hear him tell it. He worked in the news business by day, producing, editing and shooting network TV, and by night, he painted landscapes. They were whimsical and thoughtful pieces, influenced in large part by his visceral connection to the beachscapes of the Hamptons, where he keeps a weekend home. That was then.

In March 2004, he read a story in the New York Times about a series of 361 photographs taken at Dover Air Force Base. The pictures were of the flag-draped coffins of US personnel killed while serving in Iraq. The photos resonated with Alpert in a way that surprised even him. He poured over the images for some time, until finally deciding to turn his hand in a new direction and recreate one. Until that moment, he had rarely attempted to paint people. He feared he was about to embark on something beyond his skill level, but he was driven by the pictures' poignancy to try.

He worked in oil, spending weeks on small patches of the canvas, and building up to the finer details. In a serendipitous turn, given the subject matter of the painting, he cast the last brush stroke on July 4th. He called the picture "The Price," but later, feeling it to be too cynical a comment about the price of freedom, changed it to "Duty, Courage, Honor."

Alpert felt more strongly about this painting than he had about his others. He wasn't sure what he wanted to do with it, but he reasoned that it should end up somewhere it would be considered meaningful. After e-mails and phone calls between himself, his dealer and a few interested parties, the Air Mobility Command Museum at Dover Air Force Base told him they would be proud to hang it.

Further, the museum director, Mike Leister, promised him a small handover ceremony involving members of the same Honor Guard unit that Alpert featured in his painting.

"Duty, Honor, Courage"

On May 3rd of this year, Alpert and his wife Dorothy drove down to Dover with the painting in tow. During the unveiling ceremony, he noticed members of the Honor Guard talking amongst themselves. A few looked at the painting and pointed to a particular figure on the left. "That's Sgt. Willis" they gestured. Moments later, Sgt. Willis himself appeared, and the moment, the feeling, were set in stone.

Since that time, Alpert has been working on a series of paintings based on photos taken by American soldiers fighting in Iraq. He's called the series "Through Their Eyes." So far, he's painted fighter aircraft, F-16s, F-105s, but he feels they are more documentary than political. He wants to make powerful and provocative images that are meaningful to him. "Hawks and doves will see what they want," he said in a recent e-mail. "If I wanted to talk about the politics of the images, I would write about them. I'm not writing. I'm painting."

After years in the world of documentary television, Alpert says he has seen and worked with millions of images. He's fully aware that what he sees in one may well be different from what someone else perceives. He's still not totally sure what has drawn him to make these particular paintings. He knows he wants to honor the times we're living in, and that he has strong feelings about men and women in uniform. But beyond that, it's nebulous. "Maybe it has to do with a sense of guilt lingering from the Vietnam era, September 11th, being a news hound. All of it."

Whatever has caused him to pick up his brushes and paint these patriotic images may forever be unresolved. But now that they're finished, Alpert knows exactly where they belong: he has decided to give away prints of his original painting "Black Hawk" to military personnel and their families in honor of the upcoming national holidays. The first handover ceremony will be on Memorial Day at Tricia's Gallery in Westhampton Beach. The second will take place on Independence Day at the Blue Door Gallery in Riverhead.

review: island kings whalers and beach boys

It is impossible to visit the beaches of Long Island and not find the surfers. You can see them on the roads with their surfboards strapped tightly to the top of their cars. They are a diehard group that simply love the ocean and surfing. But the history of surfing and how the sport was developed is a lot harder to find. That is, until the Sag Harbor Whaling and Historical Museum on Main Street decided that they would find out for us. Curator and local surfer Bettina Stelle, inspired by her own love of the sport, has designed the "Island Kings Whalers and Beach Boys-How Pacific Whaling Introduced Surfing to the World" exhibit for all those that have five dollars and a soft spot for surfing. The exhibit gives a wonderful and rare look at the history of surfing. Why would the Whaling Museum in Sag Harbor want to do an exhibit on surfing, you ask? Well, believe it or not, the whalers that were so prevalent in the 1800s were the first people to discover the sport.

The exhibit is complete with old surfboards, videos, and even an interactive on-site slim wave tank where you can actually make a wave by pumping a hand operated device that moves the water inside the tank, forming the wave. You can not only watch how the wave is formed, but you can also try and catch the wave that you created using a miniaturized surfboard that can be controlled inside of the tank.

The exhibit also features wonderful photographs of surfers on local beaches, as well as excellent artwork of waves and the surfers who ride them. One of the main highlights of the exhibit is a timeline, including interesting dates such as 1777 when

Captain Cook observed canoe and body surfing near Tahiti's coast. He wrote in his log, "I could not help concluding that the man felt the most supreme pleasure while he was driven so smoothly by the sea." You can also get history on the great writer Mark Twain, who tried surfing in 1872, and Laird Hamilton, most famous for his big wave surfing, who developed a tow in technique where a surfer could ride a jet ski into a wave instead of having to paddle into it. He developed this technique in 1993. The exhibit also cherishes and honors the surfing, free-spirited culture by showing videos of cult classic movies such as The Endless Summer.

Other interesting parts of the exhibit are old surfing magazines, comics and videos. The videos are presented on a large flat screen TV where you can watch the old surfing legends get great rides and talk about the sport. You can also watch a film titled A Videography of Surfing on Long Island, NY, which was filmed and originated by local surfer Chris Stewart.

The expo also gives you information on how to join the Surfriders Foundation, which is dedicated to the continued protections and enjoyment of the ocean. The organization is non-profit and helps protect local beaches by hosting clean-ups, whistle-blowing illegal waste dumps into the ocean and also encouraging water testing wherever waves are. Museum goers can sign up for this organization right at the exhibit.

I highly recommend viewing this exhibit if you have any interest or have ever had any interest in surfing. The Sag Harbor Whaling Museum is open Monday-Friday and is located on Main Street in Sag Harbor. You can contact them at 631-725-0770 or you can check out their website at www.sagharbor-whalingmuseum.org to find out more.

Longhouse: Art and Agriculture

Hidden away on Hands Creek Road in East Hampton, the 16-acre LongHouse Reserve grows richer year after year. The reserve is home to a synchronistic combination of lush gardens and landscape design with a wide variety of artworks scattered throughout the grounds. LongHouse was founded in 1991 by internationally known textile designer, author and collector, Jack Lenor Larson. His goal was to make an art form out of landscape and simultaneously show the broad range of planting potentials in the East End climate. A walk on the property puts visitors in contact with huge selection of plant species and an equally lovely tour through the sculptural brilliance of great artists like, Roy Lichtenstein, Alfonso Ossorio, Yoko Ono, Joel Perlman, Constantino Nivola, Dennis Oppenheim, glassmaster Dale Chihuly, and Willem DeKooning. Our island happens to be one of the best cultural centers on the East Coast, and much of what you'll see is homegrown – plant and sculpture. This season, the gardens around the lotus pond will host newly acquired works by Louise Nevelson, Roy Lichtenstein, Takashi Soga, Johnny Swing, and Toshiko Takaezu. If you've been, there's something new to see. If you haven't, there's even more to be excited about. True to her nature, Yoko Ono's all-white chess set makes an interesting commentary on war and how there is no black and white in the confusion of death and destruction, but most of what is on the reserve reflects a kind of whimsy not always felt in our everyday lives.

Right now in the LongHouse Gallery, "Rare Forms," a Bronzed Squash Exhibit by Amy Goldman, is on display through July 17th. Goldman, a prize-winning horticulturist, has created an arresting collection of bronze sculptures inspired by heirloom gems from her personal garden. Along with this exhibit of gourds, squash, and melons, LongHouse will distribute hundreds of seeds to children taking part in their school programs so they too can enjoy the wonders of growing squash and gourds at home. When the summer

By Amy Goldman

dies down and the squash have grown in September, the LongHouse SquashFest on the 24th will display the best and largest of the children's homegrown projects. Adults and kids will also get to help Goldman harvest the crop they helped her plant this May. Renowned Hamptons chefs will give cooking demonstrations and share some of the best dishes in their arsenals. Goldman is the author of The Complete Squash, and an active member of the Seed Savers Exchange, a non-profit for the preservation of America's agricultural Heritage.

The summer is going to be full at LongHouse this year. On August 6th, "Alexandra's Garden," photographs by Shonna Valeska will open to run through September 25th. The scanned images transferred to watercolor paper are a rich depiction of a private garden in East Hampton, and will make a perfect addition to the natural beauty of LongHouse. Also on the schedule, an ongoing program of sound meditation in the gardens with committee member Jim Owen will use sound to connect with the spiritual dimension of gardening. Owen will lead an early morning meditation group to foster mental alignment with the universe every Saturday, May 28th-September 10th at 8 a.m., for a suggested $10 donation. Probably one of the best programs is the Twilight Tour. Drink wine and enjoy a stroll through the reserve as evening becomes night. The frogs will croak, birds fall into silence, and the shadows envelop the earth. Groups of 15 will have the pleasure of these tours on Mondays beginning July 4th from 6-8p.m. $30 per person and $55 for couples. Take advantage of these great events.

By Louise Nevelson

The LongHouse reserve doesn't seem to have the notoriety it should. The open-air museum isn't open everyday, in fact, only Saturdays on the weekends right now, but the beauty of it is worth scheduling in. The museum is open to the public from May- September and is located at 133 Hands Creek Road in East Hampton New York. Admission: General Public: $10, LHR members: Complimentary. Call (631) 329-3568 for more information and reservations.

John Edward Gill

SACRED HEARTS

"The Papa Joe look-alike contests in Key West come to mind when reading Sacred Hearts. It is not that Gill looks much like Ernest Hemingway on the book-jacket picture, but that his writing style resembles Hemingway's so much.

Bill Townsend and Nicole Berman, the two main characters in the book, are lovers. Bill has a congenital heart condition, while Nicole has a nearly fatal automobile accident during the course of the story.

The action alternates between Paris and Long Island ... the physical settings are described in exquisite detail.

Gill, who is an English professor on Long Island and previously worked as a journalist and editor, has a great ability to write dialogue; he succeeds in telling nearly the entire story in this fashion.

In this novel no detail about physical locales is omitted."

--ForeWordreviews.com

"The lean, bravery-in-the-face-of-doom dialogue is reminiscent of Hemingway and reinforces the gulf between dreams and reality."

--Literary Magazine Review

Not to miss! John Gill's book exemplifies a strong talent for characterization and narrative. Timely for its social issues and at the same time fast, enjoyable reading. Gill follows a strong tradition. If Hemingway was not a mentor, he was clearly an inspiration."

EAST END KID: MADAGASCAR PREMIERE

BY EMILY HART POST

With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and David Post.

This may have been one of those experiences I'll remember for a lifetime – only time will tell. Because of this column, I was invited to cover and attend the New York premiere of the Dreamworks film, Madagascar, at the Zeigfield Theater. I got there with mom and dad early because spaces on the red carpet were designated for the press – NBC, ABC, Fox, Entertainment Tonight, E, CNN, and the list goes on, and of course it included Dan's Papers – in a pretty good spot. Mom was there with a TV crew to cover for her new venture From the RED CARPET Television, so we stood there together. I guess you could say that I pulled an Andrew Giuliani in that I may have upstaged mom. As the stars of this kids' movie came down the red carpet – which actually was green – all the press screamed at them to stop and I had the highest voice so I got some to come over. Then I grabbed the microphone and asked Ben Stiller a question and he laughed, then answered, then asked me a question. A few minutes later, the other star, Chris Rock, saw me and said "Where's your nanny?" then said, "You are real cute, and I mean it, but not in a Michael Jackson sort of way," and the reporters cracked up. And it was all shot for TV! So if that wasn't enough fun, we had great seats and I LOVED the movie, as did mom and dad – and it is set in the Central Park Zoo – one of my most favorite places. It was terrific and I am already asking to go and see it again. And if I see Steven Spielberg in the Hamptons I will tell him how much fun I had at his film. And I am ready for my next red carpet assignment!

Beach Blanket Baby: Toddler Safety at the Shore

Surf's up! Hit those waves! Children and the beach go together like ice cream and cones, hot dogs and buns, sand and castles (you get the idea). If your child is an official member of the beach blanket baby club, they will be beach safe and ready to build the biggest castle around. The first step I learned when I brought my son down to the beach was to let him know his boundaries. Bring that child right down to the water and let him know that the ocean is something to cherish and to fear.

When I brought my 18-month-old toddler down for the first time, we let him literally get his feet wet by sticking them in the surf. He giggled and attempted to edge his way in further. Children take risks BIG TIME and usually have no fear. We had to show him how far he was allowed to go and that he had to hold our hand. This didn't go over too well. He squirmed and cried and attempted to break free.

A beach blanket baby should always wear a life preserver or a safety suit. You can find a Heads up LifeVest at www.onestepahead.com in two sizes: Infant (up to 30 pounds) and Child (30-50 pounds). What I liked about this vest was that it is not only approved by the U.S. Coast Guard, but it also has a "safety grab strap" at the collar. Kids Toy Chest at www.kidstoychest.com offers a variety of life vests with floating neck and head collars and adjustable leg straps. These come in a variety of colors. I purchased a cartoon-themed one for my son at www.stearnsinc.com. He liked the colorful fish and swimming dog pictures. If he likes it, I have a much better chance at getting him to wear it! The tag on the life vest offers great water safety tips to go over with your child while they are wearing the vest. The tag also reminds you that it is federal law that children under 13 wear a Coast Guard Approved PFD (Personal Flotation Device) while boating. So if they intend to float or boat, or are just near the water, get them a life vest.

It's important to protect your babies' smooth skin from the damaging rays of the sun. Most skin damage occurs in the first 18 years of your child's life. Take precautions now! Steven J. Fishman, Southampton Dermatologist and father of two-and-a-half-year-old twins, recommends that you use a sunblock of at least SPF 30 that offers UPA and UPF protection. The waterproof and sweatproof lotions are great for your active toddler. "Apply the sunscreen 20-30 minutes before going out," Fishman said. "It takes time for sunblock to work effectively." Dr. Fishman recommends that parents put sunblock in their own hands to warm it up first before applying, so as not to give a cold shock to your baby. Parents of children under six months of age should consult their pediatrician on the right time to use sunblock. Fishman remarked about seeing a teenager in NYC recently wearing a t-shirt that said "pale is the new tan." Always protect your baby from the sun's harmful rays.

Babies R' Us, Buy Buy Baby and www.onestepahead.com all sell swimsuits, cover-ups, hats and short sets which are treated with SPF. While they are great, don't forget the sunblock as well.

Sea shells, rocks, seaweed, and possibly a jelly fish or two: Make sure that your baby avoids getting cut by wearing a water shoe. Old Navy offers a very cute Zig Zag River Sandal for your baby/toddler. The straps are secure and give the baby traction in and out of the water. The Gap has a water sandal that comes in sizes 4-11 that is quick drying and has a rubber sole, which is great for walking over beachy terrain. Also, www.onestepahead.com sells a closed-toe Beachwalker shoe. It looks like a sneaker but is specially designed to go in and out of water and stay on your child's foot. They come in sizes 5-12. It's important to protect those toes so you can go home and say "this little piggy went to the market, this little piggy went to the shore."

Essentially the best defense in protecting your toddler is offense. Keep your eyes open and always be alert. As quick darting, fast moving, marathon sprinting as they are in your house, they are going to be even faster at the shore. Swimming lessons are in the near future, but for now, apply that SPF, dress them safely and make sure that your child has fun. A beach blanket baby always wears his sunscreen, life vest, beach shoes and a smile!!!!

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

An End of an Era

Watching the last Star Wars was an emotional roller coaster. At first I was anxious to see the movie, then I was scared that it was going to be bad. Then I was disappointed because the first half of the movie wasn't that great, then I was stupefied by how amazing the second half of the movie was. When the movie was over, I walked outside, so pumped that the film was so good that I started doing a Star Wars happy dance right in the middle of the street. One by one, others started joining me in the Star Wars happy dance as people were cheering in front of the theater, while others turned around and purchased tickets to see the movie for the second time. When the celebration was over, I then went into a state of sadness, for this was the end of the Star Wars era. This was the real end, there are no other Skywalker's in the family bloodline that are interesting to talk about.

My emotional state since I have seen this movie is still a little strange. Awe is the only word that I can think of when I think of George Lucas's ability to write and create such an exciting and interesting story. I keep wondering if anything else in Hollywood will have the ability to have such an effect on so many people. I have my doubts. My generation plays way too many video games. None of us take the time to write cool stuff like Star Wars anymore. Nope, we get Monster in-Law. I hope all of you hippies know how lucky you guys got it when it comes to music and art. Nobody dominates these two fields better than a flower child, Stars Wars is no exception.

Star Wars is so good that after seeing the premier with all of the Star Wars geeks for the first time, I went and saw it again the next day. I needed to verify the fact that the movie was amazing. While watching the film my mind could not stop help make connections to the politics in Star Wars and the politics of today. George Lucas wrote this story nearly thirty years ago, he had no idea that America would be at war with Iraq, and yet there were many correlations between The Republic in Star Wars and America today. I guess intergalactic politics isn't going to be so different from American foreign policy.

Why doesn't the concept of a galaxy far, far away where battles are fought to the death using light sabers ever get old? Aren't I getting a little bit too old for this kind of thing? For some reason though, you are never too old to enjoy Star Wars. Yes it may be true that the people that really get to enjoy it are kids. The reason for this is the fact that kids are much less skeptical about things that are impossible to believe. For example, an eleven year old boy is much more likely to try and use the force to move an object in his house. An eleven year old believes that there is a chance that he may one day become a space pilot, defending the galaxy. An eleven year old is more likely to believe that the wookiee race is a real group of people that he plans on meeting one day.

Me, I am more skeptical. I don't believe that there is an actual group of sheepdog-like people, wookies, that roam around on another planet. I think that there is going to be another name for them. Although I do still think that one day I will become a space pilot, defending the galaxy and bringing justice and peace to it, I don't think that there is going to be this evil guy running the whole show named Darth Vader. And now, after nearly ten years of trying to use the force to move something, I have decided that I cannot learn how to use this power on my own. I once believed that I would be able to learn the force all on my own. But now I know that this is not reality. The force is definitely a real concept. The only problem is that I still haven't met a Jedi master to teach me how to use it.

You absolutely have to see this movie. There is just no way around it. It is one of those movies that if you do not see, people will look at you funny if you tell them that you never have seen it. It is one of those movies that you can talk about at the dinner table for the next twenty years. You will be able to remember where you were, what time of day you saw it, and who you saw the movie with. Yes, it is true, this movie is going to be in the same league as The Matrix, Jaws, Titanic, Forrest Gump, and dare I say it, Ghostbusters.

OVER THE RIVER AND THROUGH THE WOODS WITH KEN KINDLER

I sprained my ankle last week so I couldn't walk a trail in preparation for this article, my first in my summer series. That isn't a problem, though, because I have some very valuable information I can share with you. I receive approximately a dozen trail related e-mails a day, usually straight from the www.hike-li.org website, and on the average, four of those e-mails are asking me how to get maps of the trails. Usually I suggest selecting the FYI link on the Hiking Long Island Website. Three hiking groups are now offering trail maps. East Hampton Trails Preservation Society is offering a map created by Charles Whalen. It is an all-inclusive full color 24" x 36" Town of East Hampton Map, which includes every trail in East Hampton with full geo references. It is printed on weatherproof, tear proof Polyart. Photo by Ken Kindler. Folded size is 4" x 9."

Anyone interested in ordering a map from the East Hampton Trails Preservation Society should send a check made out to EHTPS ($11 including postage for EHTPS members and $16 including postage for non-members) to Richard Lupoletti, 66 Oyster Shores Rd., East Hampton, NY 11937.

To find out how to save $5 on the map (and enjoy some great hiking with interesting people) by joining the EHTPS, call Richard at 631-324-1127.

There are approximately 100 copies of the map remaining from the first offering, and when they are sold out the price will be marked up. The East Hampton trail group is exceptional in so many different ways (and I don't say this just because they offer me the leftover refreshments after the monthly meetings); look into membership.

Flying squirrel

Working on the Paumanok Path

During the summer of 2005, EHTPS is planning at least one kayaking event per month for four months, starting with Accabonac Harbor on June 25, and you can arrange for a delivered kayak rental. For information, call Richard.

There will be a poetry reading hike in the Walking Dunes on June 11. Who could ask for a more inspiring and unique setting to pay homage to our Earth Mother?

I can't think of a more beautiful place to bicycle than Shelter Island. If you are interested in participating in an island experience, call leaders Jerry Brown and Lois Peltz in advance of June 18 at 329-9414.

During the weekend of May 14-15, I joined the Shinnecock Nation on their "Run for Peace." We didn't run; we walked along the Paumanok Path, and it was obvious that the people walking with me already had nature in their hearts. Tohanash, a member of the Shinnecock Nation, and her granddad Richard helped me cut and blaze a new segment of the Paumanok Path near Laurel Valley County Park, and we were blessed by the appearance of a flying squirrel (see picture).

On June 4, Southampton Trails Preservation Society will be walking some of the new sections of the Paumanok Path. Visit the Hiking Long Island website to get the details: www.hike-li.org

Ken Kindler is a Trails and Open Space Advocate working to help the trails groups and land managers care for our "Natural Island." If you would you like to learn more about our trails or help care for them, visit the Hiking Long Island website. www.hike-li.org

CASA CHIC - SOUTHAMPTON

If you remember the EGP Collection that was located on Montauk Highway in Water Mill, you will be happy to know that they have relocated to Southampton and the shop is now doing business as Casa Chic.

Specializing in modern and contemporary furnishings for the home, owners Elena Testino and Giorgio Petracco joined forces to open EGP and moved to the Hamptons in 2000. Giorgio was associated with Palazzetti and opened his own showroom in Manhasset and Elena had a furniture store in New York called E&F Home Design. Together they landed on the East End and are residents of Southampton since 2000. Casa Chic also carries a large selection of fabric, upholstered and leather sofas, occasional chairs, coffee tables, dining tables, side tables and accessories, as well as fine outdoor furniture.

At Casa Chic, you will also find a unique selection of contemporary lighting, original art, decorative prints, one-of-a-kind mirrors and limited edition photographs. The interesting and unique selections of floor coverings that they carry include animal hides and natural fiber rugs in a dozen different patterns, colors and sizes. In addition, to complement your home, there is a wide selection of accent accessories that are imported from all over the world. This is a one-stop-shop that should not be missed.

HAMPTONS HOUND - BRIDGEHAMPTON

Now are you ready for this new shop in Bridgehampton? Hamptons Hound is the first luxury pet boutique of its kind in the Hamptons, where you can purchase designer doggy wear, hard-to-find accessories, tantalizing toys and delectable home-baked goods while offering a comfortable patio café for pets and owners to relax and socialize.

Owner Roxy Kuzak, a summer resident of Bridgehampton, decided to open Hamptons Hound after becoming a dog owner. She realized there was no luxury pet store in the Hamptons that offered anything beyond the basics. "I wanted to create an atmosphere similar to a luxury fashion boutique, but with the added plus of being able to bring your dog and give them a special outing," stated Roxy. She was also frustrated that there were not many places to which she could bring her Bernese mountain dog puppy, Kaya. One of her goals was to offer not only healthy, homemade snacks and high-end accessories, fashions and toys, but also to provide a gathering place for owners and dogs.

The store is decorated in lush colors and is casually designed for comfort for both owners and pets. Shoppers can also enjoy music, a photo gallery and reading materials. Complimentary treats are available for dogs and complimentary beverages for their accompanying humans. An outdoor patio area will have café seating and a play area for pets. For the pups who

"lunch", pastry chef Tania Turzer, formerly of Levert House, has created a full menu including pupcakes, HH Spice (for finicky eaters), hamburgers, frozen yogurt treats and birthday cakes for pooch's special birthday.

Roxy Kuzmak has spent months tracking down the most fashionable and unique pet wear from around the globe and is offering the trendiest styles for dogs including European labels from Italy and France. She has also commissioned artisans to create Hamptons Hound designs in accessories and fashions exclusively available at the store and on the Hamptons Hound website, www.hamptonshound.com. Owners can find attractive belts and flip-flops for themselves with matching collars and leashes for their dog.

There is a huge assortment of colorful and original leashes and collars in every price range. For those who want to pamper their pooch, there is a Georgian four poster bed, a leather day bed designed by Philipp Pein and an alligator-style wardrobe for pups to store their clothing and accessories.

Hamptons Hound will offer weekly community events for customers and their pets including "Yappy Hour" sunset cocktail parties, doggy beach parties, book readings and discussions, lectures on dog care and nutrition, and much more. Morning coffee and afternoon tea will be served. Special services will be offered including Doga and professional pet photography. Hamptons Hound is also available for birthday parties, weddings, Bark Mitzvahs and doggie cakes that can be ordered to go. Products are also available on the website at: www.hamptonshound.com that will be up soon.

Hamptons Hound is located at 2487 Main Street, Bridgehampton. For more information, call Hamptons Hound at 631-537-7650.

Spring Into Summer Fashion

The transition from spring to summer fashion this year is seamless, if you'll pardon the pun. With trends boasting a feminine, flirty appeal, longer skirts and loose pants matched with sophisticated tops or high-end t-shirts and lacey camisoles are the way to go. The success of this spring's "Bohemian Rhapsody" will tow the line for summer as well.

Retailers such as Bloomingdale's and Neiman Marcus have reported a substantial increase in sales over the past several months, specifically with the fuller and tiered skirt lines. Many designers have jumped on board with their own couture versions, including Jean Paul Gaultier, Tahari, Giorgio Armani and Dolce & Gabbana, just to name a few.

This fashion trend has also encouraged a number of Moroccan and Indian-inspired designers to be at the top of their game. Women's Wear Daily reported last week that Lahore, India will host the first Pakistan Fashion Week this fall. Who would have imagined? The fashion world has really embraced non-western traditional designs, and it has opened the door, allowing them to strut their stuff. It's only a matter of time before we become more familiar with designers from that sector of the world.

Back at home, in our "sea of fashion," let's talk pants. When it comes to pant lines, the long, loose look continues to inspire designers this season. This classic, loose-fitted pant, which Katherine Hepburn made famous, has once again resurfaced. The key to any clothing selection (like many relationships) is compatibility. When visualizing whether or not a certain style will look flattering on your body, the answer is simple...try it on. Not everyone can wear the same thing that supermodel Gisele can wear. Height and body type can be the deciding factor.

A few notable labels that have made a splash in the pant category are Theory and Diane Von Furstenberg, a designer known primarily for her dresses. I absolutely LOVE them. It's not easy to make a masculine pant look feminine, but with a touch of silk fabric sewn around the waistband and pockets, Von Furstenberg has achieved it.

I have shopped around for pants this season, and the biggest obstacle has been length. You know some of us are not 5 feet 10 inches, and designers should keep that in mind. I've managed to make a few pairs work by wearing EXTRA high heels, but now that summer is here, I love my flip-flops. Looks like my tailor will be getting a lot of business.

As the season warms up, we change fabrics, colors and accessories. While the fashion trend continues in 2005 to stay with the top selling bohemian styles, accessorizing your ensemble offers a new direction. Flip-flops and wedge shoes are a hit thus far, and when added to a long skirt or linen loose pant, you can't go wrong.

Shoes made with metallic ornamental material, whether a flip-flop or another style, are worth checking out. Gold, silver, light purple and pink metallic are most popular. A few shoe designers with hot designs this season include Audley of London, Marc Jacobs,

Belts, belts and more belts. This season, belts made of silk with rhinestone buckles and simple tie-scarf styles are the perfect addition to any outfit. Whether you select a solid or patterned print material, this accessory will complete your look by adding definition and a bit of character to the most basic colors.

Big, chunky, and long necklaces are in. Dig through your mom's jewelry box and see what treasures you can find. Perhaps a jade, turquoise or amber gem stone is among her old favorites. The money you save on the necklace can go towards a pair of Jackie-O style shades. That's right, size does matter, and this season, oversized sunglasses have been on the upswing. I must save for that pair of Chanel classics I saw at Saks.

What else is in the fashion news, you ask? Another trend? Only this trend is among the rich and famous. I'm not quite sure what celebrity was first to market her own designs and fragrances, but it seems to be the thing to do. I had no idea there were so many chemistry majors and sketch artists in school. The latest to join the likes of J-Lo is none other than Paris Hilton. Paris announced the launch of her new handbag line, Parlux. I guess she wanted to follow in her younger sister Nicky's footsteps. Or perhaps she was bored with "The Simple Life."

Memorial Day Weekend is here and I hope you have the perfect outfit from head to toe. Remember, trends come and go, fashion can be bought, but style is all your own.

—Kelly Krieger

East Meets East End

I've always dreamed of walking through the crowded markets of Bombay, India. I can almost smell the pungent curry floating from the food stands, the bright colors of silky scarves billowing from the rafters as I browse. The spices themselves, a reddish orange paprika or a green curry powder, would contribute to the vibrancy. Or at least I imagine they would. But India has always resided in the folded corners of Someday, and until that day, I have to improvise with what I have.

Thankfully, there is a place where cultural diversity is celebrated throughout the year. Mandala Yoga and Dance Center, in Amagansett Square, always honors Indian culture, because India was the birthplace of yoga. This is visible in the laughing Buddha sitting at the front door, or the Indian music spilling from the open windows. Mandala has, in the past, collaborated with other businesses in Amagansett to throw both Brazilian and Indian Festivals. This small, lively summer gathering is called Music in the Square, and these celebrations have rocked with music, dancing, and family enjoyment. While the fate of Music in the Square is still uncertain, Jolie Parcher, director of Mandala, has embarked on yet another project to promote the celebration of culture: a three-day Indian Bazaar inspired by the streets of India, which Jolie once walked before she made her home in Amagansett.

Memorial Day Weekend is a time in which we traditionally celebrate all things American: clambakes on the beach, picnics, and softball games at the local baseball diamond. These activities are rituals for many of us, and should certainly be cherished. But it's always nice to add a little spice to your traditions, and there is no place with more spice than India.

The Indian Bazaar this Memorial Day Weekend will help you mix some flavor into that bland hamburger meat. There will be canopies set up around the green selling a wide range of Indian merchandise, like Indian print quilts, bedspreads, sarongs, Tibetan jewelry and Buddhist statues supplied by vendors. Throwing an Indian-print quilt over your bed would change the whole atmosphere of your room, giving it an Eastern feel. Wrapping an Indian sarong around your body this summer will make you feel luxurious in the unique, intricately designed fabrics.

Mandala Yoga and Dance Studio will be selling their gorgeous, comfortable yoga clothes, like Woo, Hard Tail, and Velvet. Yoga mats, mat bags and other merchandise will be available as well.

Hampton Chutney is right on hand with their flavorful Chai Tea, crispy dosas, and variety of chutneys for refreshment.

Every day there will be a different special event for kids at 1:30 in the afternoon. Megan Chaskey will bring her creative puppets on Saturday for a Buddhist puppet show. On Sunday and Monday, there will be yoga class for kids as well as story time, where beloved Indian tales will be shared. There will also be face painting and other surprises for children.

Live Indian music will accompany you as you stroll between the vendors sampling their wares. Compact disks of Indian music, ranging from relaxing to energizing to fabulous for yoga or as background music, will be available as well.

This Indian Bazaar is a benefit for the Hayground School in Bridgehampton, and you can expect to see Hayground kids and graduates manning a fresh lemonade stand. There will also be a raffle to benefit the school.

It's a wide world out there, and there is no way to see everything in just one lifetime. But right here in the United States, we have people who have carried their traditions all over the world, and laid them right on our doorstep. It may not be time for me to walk through a night bazaar in New Delhi, but I can hop in my car and head over to Amagansett Square for a little taste.

—Emily J Weitz

All That Glitters

Don't let the sun, sand and saltwater ruin your favorite fine jewelry this summer. Instead, let it shine bright in the hot weather with helpful hints from Jerry Ehrenwald, president of the International Gemological Institute (IGI), the largest worldwide independent laboratory for testing and evaluating gemstones and fine jewelry.

In addition to working with members of the fine jewelry industry, IGI is one of the few gemological laboratories in the world to offer its services directly to consumers. As such, IGI gemologists know first-hand what happens when fine jewelry is not cleaned regularly and treated properly.

The IGI gemological staff examines jewelry brought to the lab by consumers and often finds that diamonds are far from clean and have undergone some damage. This includes scratched and chipped diamonds, jewelry with bent prongs and gemstones so dirty they must be cleaned with an ultrasonic and/or steam cleaner before gemologists can begin examining them.

"Consumers bring in diamonds that are tarnished with some sort of cleaning agent such as soap," said Ehrenwald. "The main culprit is usually hand lotion, which builds up over time and coats jewels. Always take off fine jewelry before applying sunscreen and allow it to soak fully into the skin." Before heading to the beach this summer consider the following tips from Ehrenwald:

Remove all jewelry before taking a dip into a swimming pool or Jacuzzi as a chemical reaction may occur between chlorine and certain alloy metals, which are able to alter the color of the precious metal.

Keep your bling off the beach. Beaches are one of the most common places to lose jewelry.

"Hands can become cold in Atlantic waters causing fingers to shrink and rings to easily slip off," stated Ehrenwald. "Abrasion from the sand poses a risk to jewelry as sand acts like coarse sandpaper on gems. Even building a large sandcastle can put more wear on a ring than a year of normal use."

Never wear precious gemstone jewelry when sunbathing, cleaning, gardening, working out or participating in any activity that could possibly damage the stone and or article of jewelry when worn on your hand.

When packing for a weekend trip to the Hamptons, consider the following for keeping jewels safe:

"Organization is key when traveling with jewelry," said Anissa Carroll, a senior graduate gemologist with IGI. "Believe it or not, a diamond can scratch a pearl, so store fine jewelry in its own home when not being worn (such as individual soft cloth pouches or lined jewelry boxes) to prevent scratching, dulling and the tangling of charms."

When selecting a hotel, be certain safe-deposit boxes are available for storing valuables. Never leave fine jewelry unattended in a hotel room or car.

When keeping jewelry in a safe-deposit box, place the articles in individual soft cloth pouches or lined jewelry boxes to protect against scratches and damage.

To save time when flying, place jewelry in carry-on baggage until you clear security. The metal in jewelry can trigger airport metal detectors, which means you'll receive a thorough search.

Be sure jewelry is adequately insured. Relying on an existing homeowner's insurance policy may not provide sufficient protection for jewelry, particularly when traveling. Always consult an insurance agent after purchasing jewelry and consider obtaining an independent appraisal report that reflects the grade of the diamond to the internationally accepted system for diamond grading and includes a photograph of the jewel. This assures a fair replacement if the article is lost, stolen or damaged.

Consider IGI's patented laser inscription process, known as Laserscribe, in which a laser beam inscribes a diamond identification number or personal message directly on the girdle (side) of the stone. This process is permanent, does not impair the quality of the jewel and is invisible to the naked eye. The price of IGI Laserscribe services starts at $20 and is dependent upon the stone's carat weight.

If the jewelry is ever lost or stolen, Laserscribe allows it to be traced and positively identified. In fact, if the jewelry is registered in IGI's database, through its Registration and Recovery Service, the Institute will contact the local police, search the auction market for the jewelry and alert jewelers and pawn shops of the lost or stolen property via the Internet.

If you are in the shopping mood for new jewelry this summer, insist on an IGI grading report. Along with providing an unbiased assessment of the jewel's color, cut, clarity and carat weight, the report also informs you if the jewel is synthetic or has undergone any treatments, which dramatically affect value.

To learn more about IGI's consumer support products and services, log onto www.igi-worldwide.com or call 212-753-7100.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Flags are flying this holiday weekend to commemorate and remember the men and women who have made the supreme sacrifice to maintain our freedom. There is a time for everything, as they say, and although it is a sensitive time, it is nevertheless the official beginning of summer. And here on the East End, we welcome the reopening of farm stands to help us celebrate a summer of good eating and good cheer. As the season progresses we can look forward to preparing savory foods made from a variety of home-grown ingredients.

Outdoor grilling is part and parcel for the holiday weekend. And with that, the participation of family and friends have the opportunity to become part of the celebration. When I think of barbecue, I almost immediately think about accompanying dishes, such as salads that can be prepared ahead. So if you're firing up the grill this weekend and planning to invite guests, ask them to bring a dish - with just a word of advice, "keep the fare simple and seasonal."

More and more my ear is tuned into people conscious of eating healthy, and it is music to my ears. The following salads incorporate legumes and grains: satisfying ingredients that truly take the edge of the appetite and keep you in the shape you aspire to all summer long.

WHEAT BERRY SALAD WITH SCALLIONS AND DRIED CHERRIES

High protein wheat berries are available in natural food stores and some specialty food stores. For optimum results in cooking wheat berries, toast and soak overnight before cooking. Then cook the wheat berries in the water they soak in about one hour or until just tender.

Yield: 2 1/2 cups

For the wheat berries

- 1 cup wheat berries
- 3 1/2 cups water
- 1 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt

For the salad

- 2 cups cooked wheat berries
- 1 bunch scallions, trimmed and thinly sliced
- 1/4 cup snipped chives
- 1 medium red onion, finely diced
- 1/4 cup slivered almonds
- 1/3 cup dried cherries

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

- 3-4 tablespoons macadamia or walnut oil
- 1 tablespoon raspberry vinegar

1. Toast the wheat berries in a skillet, over medium heat, stirring for 5 minutes. Remove from heat and rinse in a strainer. Put into a saucepan with water and let soak for at least 1 hour or overnight. Cook the wheat berries about 1 hour, or until berries are tender. Remove from heat and fluff with a fork. Drain if necessary.

2. Put the wheat berries in a mixing bowl and add remaining ingredients, adding the oil sparingly or just to coat. Add raspberry vinegar and taste to adjust seasoning as necessary. You may prepare the salad up to several hours and up to 2 days ahead, refrigerate covered. Serve at room temperature.

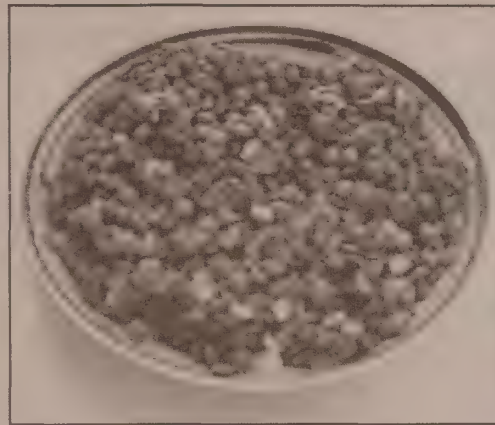

MME. JEANETTE
PEPIN'S SALADE DE
LENTILLES

Jacques Pepin's mother Jeanette prepared this exceptional salad for me back in the 80s. Prepare the dressing while the lentils are cooking so it is ready to add to the warm drained lentils.

Serves 4-6

For the lentils

- 1 cup green lentils
- 4 cups cold water
- 1 onion stuck with 1 clove
- 3 shallots, finely chopped
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- Pinch dried thyme
- 1 bay leaf

- 1/2-3/4 teaspoon coarse (kosher) salt
- Freshly ground pepper

For the dressing

- 1 1/2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
- 3 tablespoons imported red wine vinegar
- 6-7 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley for garnish

1. Rinse lentils in a strainer and place in a heavy saucepan. Add water, clove-pierced onion, shallots, garlic, thyme, bay leaf salt and pepper, and bring to a boil.

2. Reduce heat and simmer with cover ajar, maintaining a lazy surface bubble. Cook about 20 minutes until most of the liquid has evaporated and lentils are tender but still firm.

3. Drain lentils in a large sieve, discarding the liquid. Remove onion and bay leaf and discard. Transfer mixture to a ceramic or glass bowl.

4. Place mustard in a mixing bowl with vinegar. Whisk in oil in a slow, steady stream to incorporate. Add to lentils while still warm to help them absorb the dressing. Stir gently with a rubber spatula to combine ingredients and refrigerate for several hours or overnight. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve at room temperature.

The Question About Salmon

By Silvia Lehrer

Salmon is probably America's best-loved fish, and for good reason. It is a regal fish deriving its beauty from its shape, the pink of its firm flesh and the mildness of flavor, making it a perfect foil for seasoning and cooking in numerous ways. About two years ago however, a directive was announced in Brussels that the European Union is taking the pink out of salmon. It appears its beauty is only skin deep.

The alarming news is in regard to the potentially harmful but commonly used pigment found in salmon feed. Wild salmon, a seasonal fish from our West Coast, acquires its natural pink hue by consuming large amounts of shellfish. Farm-raised salmon, on the other hand, sold in supermarkets year round, would be an unappetizing grayish color without the additive, canthaxanthin, an artificial color enhancement, which is mixed into the fish feed.

Wild salmon is noted for its omega-3 fatty acids, essential nutrients important to fetal brain development. In addition it has been documented that the omega-3 oils in wild salmon are linked to reductions in auto-immune disease, arthritis and other inflammatory diseases. The fat in farm-raised salmon also contains omega-3 oils; however, the USDA testing in 2002 showed that farm-raised salmon contains an average of 35 percent less omega-3 fatty acids than wild salmon, and the dye canthaxanthin has perceived cancer-causing risks if eaten in excess. Yet there is strong scientific evidence that eating an oily fish such as farm-raised salmon should be an important part of one's diet. Prudent advice for farm-raised salmon is to restrict consumption to no more than one meal a month.

Labeling and marketing wild salmon versus farm-raised salmon is a new cause for concern. In the past, studies in farmed salmon have gained tremendous media coverage. The New York Times, in a recent investigation of New York City vendors, reported that any number of retailers are marketing farm-raised salmon as wild salmon and charging premium prices for it. Supermarket chains are obligated to label truthfully and price accordingly. Our local seafood merchants are making that distinction, I'm happy to report.

Organic farm-raised salmon is being imported locally from Ireland. According to one local merchant, the fish is being fed organic natural feed. Educating the consumer to the difference between farm-raised salmon, organic salmon and salmon taken from the wild is significant so that the consumer can make choices. Some of the factors will be availability – wild salmon is not available year-round the way farm-raised salmon is. Fish farming has meant that salmon is available to everyone. Many in the food world claim that wild salmon is far superior. I have found the texture of wild salmon to be firmer and leaner, kept trim by swimming hundreds of miles against strong currents, while the farmed fish are bred for their larger size and late maturation.

Price may be another factor as wild salmon is considerably more expensive than farm-raised. Here on the East End we are fortunate to have at our fingertips a great variety of local fish and shellfish. Lucky for me, I enjoy all manner of fish, and studies across the globe indicate that a diet in increased fish consumption is generally a healthy one. And for salmon lovers – the wild salmon season has begun.

Spice It Up With Grilling Rubs

Old Stone Market of East Hampton is a wonderful little place where you can find the most delicious grilling treasures. Located in Springs, the market carries the freshest deli sliced meats, and cheeses. They also offer gourmet gadgets and dry products from the Mediterranean region of Italy and France, and an amazing selection of international jams and jellies. The latest buzz on the East End is of the Old Stone Market's new line of items, which help you make this season's barbecue affairs anything but ordinary.

The latest products featured exclusively at the Old Stone Market include cedar and alder planks for grilling, an entire line of dry rubs, seasoned sea salt (which is harvested on the Ile de Re, just off the French Atlantic Coast), and imported Black Madagascar peppercorns.

There are many varieties of grilling rubs available at the Old Stone Market. The Mediterranean Rub is great on fish, poultry, and vegetables. If you enjoy Thai food, then the Thai Rub should be your pick for seasoning pork, chicken or fish. Their Quebec Steak Seasoning is delicious on steaks, swordfish, and tuna. There is also chili seasoning available for steak, pork, lamb or fish. Old Stone Market even offers its very own Herbes de Provence, which are made with lavender and an aromatic mixture of herbs, and are meant to reflect the blend of dried herbs commonly used in southern France.

The Seasoned Sea Salt is carefully hand raked and sun-dried to perfection, making it absolutely pure.

The Old Stone Market carries a few lines of Seasoned Sea Salt, including Hawaiian Red, Celtic Gary, Citrus, and Salish. Fleur de Sel is one of the most in demand sea salts that they feature. Harvested by hand off the village of Guerande in Brittany, it's a lovely table salt with a distinctive flavor and texture. It's delicious, especially on the top of a plain omelet, or on fresh bread with unsalted butter. Only the spendthrifts use Fleur de Sel for cooking.

Located off the southwestern coast of Africa, the island of Madagascar is home to the finest, most aromatic pepper in the world. The Black Peppercorn, grown to perfection on the exotic lush mountaintops, is the most exclusive item the Old Stone Market carries. It's the preferred peppercorn of the great chefs in France, including France's #1 chef, Paul Bocuse. We've learned from the Chinese and Greeks of 400 years ago that there are many benefits of black pepper. It's effective in treating symptoms of arthritis, asthma, bronchitis, headaches, muscle aches, and headaches. The mental benefits of black pepper are even more inspiring. It can clear up confusion, alleviate stress, anxiety, and depression, and keep you focused. Every year, the French buy up 95% of the entire supply of the one of a kind spice, but you can find part of the remaining 5% at the Old Stone Market. Karen Voucher, a 30-year New York City restaurant veteran, is the only importer of Madagascar Black Peppercorn in the United States. She has become widely known as the ultimate chef's resource. "Customers who buy the pepper in my store immediately come back for more," she said, proud of her pepper. "I have been told that once you use it, you don't want anything else."

In addition to the Old Stone Market, you can find the Madagascar Black Peppercorn on sale at Loaves and Fishes Cookshop in Bridgehampton and Claws on Wheels in East Hampton. In New York, some restaurants that use the pepper are Allison in Bridgehampton, and Les Halles, The River Café, and Daniel, which are all in the city. When leaving the state, you can get your fix of the pepper at Chez Jean Pierre (in Palm Beach, Florida), Madelaine (in Phoenix, Arizona), and Carole Peck's Good News Café (in Woodbury, Connecticut).

The Old Stone Market ships the Black Madagascar Pepper nationwide to restaurants and individuals. They also feature a new shopping service, and such specialty groceries as olives from Greece, shell steaks, sushi quality tuna, fresh salmon and ham cakes, gourmet French and Italian goat cheeses, butter from Normandy, and fresh breads and baguettes from Tom Cat and Sullivan Street bakery in New York City.

Old Stone Market also provides elegant at home catering, and is located at 472 Old Stone Highway, in Springs. Stop by or shop online at OldStoneMarket.com. Place your orders via email at osmarket@optonline.net, fax, or phone 631-267-6244. That way, you can pick up your entire order Friday or Saturday, just the thing for weekend entertaining!

Hot Potatoes

You ask the average American where the potato comes from and they'll say Ireland, but that's just not the case. Potatoes are from the Americas and have been part of indigenous diets from as far back as 200 B.C. when the Peruvian Indians began harvesting them. The potato has changed and evolved over the past 2000 years, but its importance as a staple of our diets has not. It is said that the average American consumes around 140 pounds of potatoes a year! Versatile and filling, the potato is used in probably more ways than any other vegetable. You can mash it, fry it, dice it, slice it, coat it in cheese, puree it for soup, and when in doubt, bake it – or even twice bake it.

While most people think of potatoes as big and off-white, the spud comes in a variety of shapes, sizes and colors.

At the local farm stand, two varieties seem to be prevalent: russet and red. Russets are the most common potato anywhere, not just at farm stands. This is because a cook can do almost anything with them. The thick brown skin makes them ideal for baking, and the fluffy white flesh makes for great mashed potatoes.

The second variety that you will see out here is the red potato, or “new” potato. Generally grown in the summer and autumn months, these spuds are perfect for garlic smashed potatoes and salads. The red potato isn't actually red throughout; the skin is a smooth (and when cleaned) shiny red color, but the interior remains white. The colors make for a great contrast, and the skins are usually left on in dishes.

Yukon Gold potatoes are also fairly common and can be found in most supermarkets. The interior is yellowish in color and has a creamy texture. Nice for mashing; the pigment gives the illusion that they are filled to the brim with butter, even if they aren't, allowing high cholesterol diners to believe they're indulging when they're not.

And of course there's the sweet potato, smack full of beta carotene. They are fantastic baked or mashed, but shamefully underused and usually reserved for Thanksgiving. The fact is these potatoes are great for summer barbecues, and compliment the sweetness of fresh roasted local corn.

Although these four varieties are the norm, there are some new potatoes gaining favor in the American market. Color is in. Especially when it comes to food. Chefs will flock to anything that makes a dish look more interesting, appetizing or unique. Purple and blue potatoes are just the right ingredient to catch the eye and still fill the stomach. Like blueberries, these potatoes (which grow in South America) have a natural pigment that gives them their blue and purple color.

Generally you will see blue and purple potatoes in chip form on supermarket shelves, but they are also available fresh and are great for making salt potatoes. They have a slightly nutty taste, but not overbearing in the least. Besides salt potatoes, they are great for potato salads and even mashed blue potatoes.

Even more obscure than the blue potato is the “all red” potato. Unlike the red potato, this variety has a red skin with a pink interior. Its uses are very similar to those of a blue potato. These potatoes, along with the purple and blue varieties, lose some of their color when fried, but I have heard of “rainbow fries,” a combination of red, russet, blue and sweet potatoes, cut into waffle shapes and deep fried.

Potatoes are a fantastic side dish for any meal. In fact, I once lost my wallet (and credit cards) and was forced to live on different varieties of a five-pound bag of potatoes for an entire week, and I never tired of these amazingly versatile tubers. Here's just one recipe to get you started this summer.

Rainbow Roasted Potatoes

1 lb. Yukon Gold potatoes, peeled and quartered
1/2 lb. purple or blue potatoes, peeled and quartered
1/2 lb. all red potatoes, peeled and quartered
Freshly ground black pepper, Salt
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons chopped parsley leaves
Preheat oven to 400 degrees F.

Put the potatoes on a baking sheet. Season with salt and pepper. Drizzle the olive oil and sprinkle the parsley. Toss the potatoes to coat. Roast in the oven, until golden and crispy on the outside, tender and cooked through on the inside, about 30 minutes.

Dining in the Hamptons

For those world travelers who have been spoiled by "Fine European Dining," Savanna's Restaurant has managed to bring that same European flare to Southampton. The doors have recently opened for Savanna's 2005 season, and new chef Massimo Felici delivers some of the most exquisite Italian cuisine on the East End.

Conveniently nestled on the corner of Elm Street in Southampton near the train station, the building's historic architecture transcends a timeless style throughout. The bright, elegant space is colored only by antique white paint, contrasted by dark elegant wood floors and tables dressed in white linen, and adorned with small bud vases that fill the room. Simple, stylish wall sconces create an illuminating warm glow.

Once we were seated at one of the many cozy tables, it was time to explore Savanna's extensive wine list. Manager Roberto Polesello has created a diverse menu comprised of offerings based on the "best of each region," he explained. Roberto selected a wide range of wines from California, Long Island, Oregon and Washington, as well as international vintages from Australia, France, Italy, New Zealand and South Africa to afford customers the opportunity to experience the best of the best. Geographically, vineyards are known for making superior vintages of a particular type of wine i.e. Merlot, Chardonnay, Cabernet, Pinot Grigio, Pinot Noir, etc. We decided on an Unwooded, Scarpantoni from Australia to pair with our first course.

Spicy Yellow Fin Tuna Tartar made with fresh mint, chives and avocados delicately wrapped in thin slices of kiwi and finished with a spot of caviar was our introduction to an evening of abundant heavenly treats. The unique combination of flavors surrounded a delicate Tuna Tartar that melted on our palates. Next up was a generous Maryland Lump Crab Cake. A large portion of sweet crabmeat lightly sautéed to a crisp toasty outside, accompanied with Mache, Sweet Mango and Papaya was the perfect medley of freshness. And just when we thought we were ready for the main event (or main course that is), a Mascarpone Polenta Cake draped with wild mushrooms and sweet sausage ragu arrived. The soft polenta cake was light and fluffy while the sauce and cheese added an extra hearty-richness for balance. Each dish is artistically designed, creating a unique and beautiful presentation.

Savanna's

Savanna's is also famous for their homemade pastas, and we were graciously treated to a tasting of their very popular Pappardelle with Juniper Berries, Rosemary and Barolo Wild Boar Ragu, and Fettuccini with Fresh Maine Lobster and cracked Pink Peppercorn. Both dishes completely different, yet equally delightful. The Pappardelle consisted of a meaty sauce flavored with drippings from the tenderly cooked Wild Boar. I had never seen Wild Boar offered on a menu before and was pleasantly surprised with its exceptional taste. As for the Fettuccini with lobster, this light creamy sensation was filled with sweet and tender chunks of lobster meat mixed with pink peppercorns to add a mild spicy flare.

Finally, for our main entrées, we tried the Spicy Marinated and Grilled Cornish Hen with mashed potatoes and broccoli rabe and the Sautéed Mediterranean Dorade with shallots, asparagus, fresh thyme, Chardonnay, spinach and tomato. I usually don't order anything too spicy, and the Cornish Hen definitely had a little more than a hint of spice to it, but it was not at all overwhelming. In fact, it offered an alternative to the "usual" or "conventional" roasted poultry technique; with its crisp outside skin touched by spices, it intensified the juiciness of the meat. Another first was Savanna's Mediterranean Dorade. This fresh fish is similar in taste to that of Red Snapper and Chef Massimo Felici creates a healthy version by serving it with fresh asparagus and spinach.

Savanna's also offers several other popular dishes that include New York Strip Steak, Veal Chop Paillard and Crispy Wood Oven Roasted Duck, just to name a few.

Now for the pièce de résistance. Dessert! When Felici sent four desserts to our table, we wanted to share them with everyone around us. That was until we started tasting them. Then we wanted them all to ourselves. The Chocolate Ganache was made with a cookie crumb and praline bottom and topped with crushed hazelnuts. This decadent dessert could be shared by two. Felici prides himself on preparing the freshest of everything and his Napoleon is made to order with a light, flaky, freshly baked pastry filled with fresh velvety smooth custard. And the cheesecake and Panna Cotta were a spectacular ending when paired of course with a glass of Moscato D'Bricco Quaglia La Spinetto (a sweet bubbly dessert wine).

Savanna's is an unforgettable dining pleasure that offers a sophisticated menu, attentive service and outstanding fare.

Jiggly JELL-O

It jiggles, it wiggles, and it kind of even bounces. Jell-O is not only "America's Most Famous Dessert," it is the quintessential American success story. Behind each bowl of that gelatinous mixture is over 150 years of history. Peter Cooper (of Cooper Union fame) made his name in the railroad business, designing the Tom Thumb locomotive, but he was also the first person to file for a gelatin patent. Originally called "Peter Cooper's Clarified Gelatine," this substance was produced in the same factory as glue.

It seemed the world just wasn't ready for this unflavored gelatin and in 1897 after fifty years of poor sales, Cooper sold his patent. Pearle Wait, a carpenter by trade, saw promise in this jiggly substance. It was he who turned gelatin into a fruity dessert, but it was his wife, May, who is credited with naming it Jell-O. In less than five years, Wait, low on capital, sold the patent for $450 to a fellow townsman in LeRoy, New York.

The new owner Frank Woodward, a high school dropout, concocted a grand marketing scheme, but it didn't look as if it was going to pay off, so he offered the patent to his superintendent for $35.

The sale never went through, because before any of the papers were signed, Jell-O sales soared. The marketing had paid off. Woodward had created a clean, well dressed, well educated sales team who were sent out in "spanking rigs, drawn by beautiful horses" to sell the dessert product. In addition, he published 15 million recipe books which contained celebrity recipes. By 1902 sales reached $250,000, and it is said that by 1909 they broke $1 million and four years later, they doubled that.

Jell-O was sold unflavored until the early 1900s. The recipes provided were to make the gelatin mixture taste sweet and fruity, but it wasn't until later that prepackaged flavors appeared; first orange, lemon, strawberry, and raspberry were introduced, followed by lime in 1930.

The average resident in Utah consumes approximately 150 pounds of Jell-O a year and still most people don't know what it's comprised of. Trust me, you don't want to. But what you might want to know is there is a vegetarian form of Jell-O called Agar-Agar. Agar-Agar is a seaweed-based product that has the same consistency as Jell-O without the use of animal products.

I, for one, don't really care what it's made of. What has always astonished me is how, when fruit is added, some sink to the bottom of the bowl and some congeals on top. For those of you like me, wonder no more. I've learned the secrets of which fruits float and which sink to the bottom of the bowl. Fresh fruit, like bananas, apples, orange and grapefruit sections, strawberries, and sliced peaches and pears all float, while seedless grapes and fruits in heavy syrup like cherries, fruit cocktail, apricots, peaches, pears, and pineapple all sink.

This weekend why not try one of these deliciously wiggly dessert recipes? Cool and refreshing, Jell-O is simple to prepare and kids love it – even the sugar free variety (which was originally developed in 1925).

GINGER ALE SALAD

From Jell-O Cookbook, 1904

Pour 1/2 cup of boiling water over one package of Lemon Jell-O. Set in hot water until thoroughly dissolved, stirring all the time. Cool and add 1-1/2 cups ginger ale. Set in a cold place until it begins to thicken, then stir in 1/4 cup finely cut nutmeats, 1/4 cup finely cut celery, one cup finely cut assorted fruits (pineapple, orange, apple, cherries, or grapes), one tablespoonful finely cut crystallized ginger.

VEGETARIAN JELL-O

2 tbs. agar-agar flakes

1 2/3 cups white grape juice

1 cup seedless grapes, washed well and cut in half

Directions

1. In a small saucepan, stir together the water and agar-agar flakes, and place over medium heat.

2. Bring the mixture to a boil, reduce heat to low, and cook while stirring constantly for 5-10 minutes or until the agar-agar is thoroughly dissolved.

3. Place the grape juice in a glass bowl, add the agar-agar mixture, and whisk well to combine.

4. Place in the refrigerator, chill for 30 minutes or until partially set; gently fold in the grapes, and chill for several additional hours or until totally gelled. Serve in small individual glass dishes, or transfer to small individual airtight containers for transport.

Good God Look at that Grossly Gargantuan Grouper

I still remember where I was when I first came face to face with the gargantuan fish known as the grouper. I was safely snuggled between my mother on the left and the arm rest on the right, as the chair on the moving platform toured us through the Oceans of Life exhibit at Disney World's Epcot Center. After flowing by the shark tank, I thought I had seen the scariest ocean creatures the ride had to offer. But then we turned a corner, and I heard my mom exclaim, "Wow, look at that grouper!" As any 10-year-old boy would, I spun my head around faster than the possessed girl in The Exorcist, then almost leaped out of my chair when I saw what was waiting for me around the corner.

A pair of big, soulless eyes stared at me from behind the window, bulging out of the head. The head itself was big and ugly, and taking up most of the surface area was a wide mouth that looked like it was constantly burping in my face. Below the mouth, multiple chins sagged as if the fish was a fat, grumpy old man. If it were not underwater already, I imagine there would be drool at the cracked corners of its obese mouth. Then there was its skin. The scattered splotches around the mouth, eyes, chins, and the rest of the body were enough to make any chocolate-loving teenager going through puberty feel much better about his/her changing complexion. When I read that these fish actually go through sex changes later in their life, it explained why these ugly suckers are still around. Thankfully, I can say that this was the first, last, and only time my eyes ever had to scar themselves by looking at this fish in real time.

I will admit that all groupers are not all bad. I prob-

2 spring onion bulbs or scallions
3 cups of canola oil

Sauce

4 tablespoons of sherry wine vinegar
4 tablespoons of Dijon mustard
1 cup of mayo
1/2 cup Honey

Directions

Mix flour, fresh herbs, salt, and pepper together in a bowl.

In a separate bowl, beat eggs.

Take grouper strips and lightly dust in flour mix, dip in egg, then flour again: this will create double crusted strip of fish.

In another bowl place all ingredients for sauce and mix together.

In a pan, pour in canola oil and set stove to medium/high flame.

Then place strips onto a plate and garnish with honey mustard sherry sauce.

Serve.

ably just ran into one of the uglier, less personable ones. A few weeks later, I stared one down with a salivating grin because it looked so delectable on the dinner dish. Not all groupers, obviously, are alike. They vary in skin tone, texture, flake size, and other attributes. In fact, groupers belong to one of the largest and most expansive families of fish, the sea bass. Although they are mostly found in the South Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico, many of them still manage to find their way on to the dishes of several fine restaurants here on the East End. I guess what some say is true. Beauty is only skin deep and what is inside matters. For an ugly fish on the outside, the grouper is one tasty fish on the inside.

Here's a recipe you can use to turn this odd-looking creature into a delectable dish:

Grouper Tenders in a Honey Mustard Sherry Sauce

Serves 4

Ingredients

2 lbs of fresh grouper cut into strips
1 1/2 Cups of flour
2 tablespoons of fresh chopped herbs
1/2 tablespoon of salt
1/2 tablespoon of pepper
4 eggs

GOLDBERG'S, WHAT TOOK SO LONG!!

The History of Goldberg's famous

In 1920, Izzy Goldberg fled Poland to come to America. With only the clothing on his back and a little black notebook in his pocket he set out to carry on his family's legacy here in America. In his little black notebook were his father's secret Bagel Recipes.

In 1928 Izzy met Helen Fetner and they were married. Living in Brooklyn, Izzy began his first Bagel Bakery in the Bronx, baking in a Brick oven using a wooden plank. Bagels were the size of today's minis and were only baked in plain and salt selling at a penny a bagel. Izzy and Helen had four sons. Artie, Al, Jerry and Marty. As their boys grew so did their Bagel bakery. As each son became old enough they began working in the bagel bakery and in 1949 "Goldberg's Famous" was born. Artie, Al, Jerry and Marty branched out to Brooklyn and the Bronx and then also Bagel Chateau in Manhattan and New Jersey being the first Bagel Restaurant in the state of New Jersey.

Today Uncle Marty and Artie's son Marc have now expanded to the Hamptons, first in Southampton and now together in East Hampton, adding many more varieties and delicious mouth watering appetizers and Delicatessen to their menu, but are still using Izzy's secret recipe and carrying on their tradition of bringing you the best Bagels and deli around.

Dining in the Hamptons

You want to take your visiting friends or family to a great restaurant, but you're tired of the same old fare. With all the fantastic options in the Hamptons, quality food is not hard to come by. But how about something with a little more character? Something with a little more flavor? Walk in through the billowing curtains on the open porch of Q, A Thai Bistro and be greeted by the soft glow of hand-made lanterns and walls tiled with mirror. Let the smells of lemongrass and Thai basil overtake you, and get ready for a meal that offers a deviation from the norm.

Q, A Thai Bistro recently opened for its fourth season, and the regulars have already integrated it into their weekly routines. My friends, Robin and Lizzie, and I sat at a round table in the corner of the dining room. The last time I had been there, it was in the thick of the summer and had been warm enough to enjoy the evening breeze on the living room-esque porch. This time we stayed inside to enjoy the flickering candlelight and soft music.

While last time I dined at Q, I opted for a Sonoma Pinot Noir, this time we all stuck to Singha, the typical Thai beer which the owners, Vesna and Joey Gmerek, special order from Bangkok. Vesna didn't even ask what appetizers we wanted, which was all the better, because I never could have chosen one.

Out she came with a giant oval platter, flaunting the delectable appetizers that Q had to offer.

Chicken Satay with a peanut dipping sauce was served on skewers. A vegetable roll wrapped in a silky coat came accompanied by a tangy ginger soy dipping sauce. Pan seared tuna, so rare it melted in my mouth, came with a spicy soy wasabi sauce. The steamed dumplings, filled with chicken, and the Shui Mai dumplings, filled with shrimp, were both accented by a soy ginger sauce. The fried vegetable egg roll, crispy on the outside with fresh mushrooms, cabbage, and carrots on the inside, was delicious with the sweet chili dipping sauce.

Our waitress, Brooke, came out to clear our plates, and we noted the fact that it was the very same waitress that we had had a year ago at Q, when just Robin and I came to dine. We commented on it to her, and she said she just couldn't tear herself way from the job. The waitstaff and owners are like family, and she just couldn't imagine a better job. This only made me love Q more, and I'm not surprised, considering I feel at home every time I walk in the door, encompassed by the soft glow of the dining room.

And then came the entrees.

To accompany all of our entrees, we were served white rice wrapped in plastic bags and placed in little bamboo cases, which kept the rice steaming hot throughout the meal.

The sumptuous twister shrimp is cooked in a cilantro lemongrass broth, served with Asian long beans and exotic mushrooms. The broth infuses the large shrimp with a deliciously pungent flavor.

I am not generally a fan of eggplant, and I have to say that this is the only eggplant dish I've ever really enjoyed. But the Thai eggplant at Q is dynamite. Thai eggplants are milder than Western varieties, and the way Q prepares them, with Thai basil and garlic in a sweet chili sauce, combines their delicate flavor with fresh accents.

The drunken noodles offer a nice alternative to the more traditional, though absolutely scrumptious, pad thai that is available at Q. These drunken noodles come with chicken or beef and are tossed with Thai basil, garlic, eggs, and vegetables.

But the ultimate masterpiece was the crispy red snapper, served whole in a coconut curry sauce with Thai herbs. The fish just seemed to fall right off the bone. I spent six months living in Bangkok, and this was a typical meal for me. You pick the meat off the bones and then use the bones for toothpicks. This manner of serving is very traditional, and the delicious broth that seeped into the snapper was authentic and fresh.

Next time you are in the mood for something with a little spice, head down Noyac Road to the soft, warm lighting of Q, A Thai Bistro. Its friendly atmosphere coupled with its fantastic food will make it well worth the slight deviation off the beaten path.

—Emily J Weitz

Drinks for the Season

With the official start of summer season this weekend, get ready for some outdoor entertaining. Here are some ideas for various cocktails that take advantage of seasonal ingredients that would be delicious while sitting by the pool or standing around the grill.

Fresh mint is plentiful at farm stands, so why not make mojitos? Mojitos start with "mojito syrup," which you can buy or make by muddling mint leaves and covering with limejuice, sugar and ice. For a single drink, use 1 ounce of syrup, 1-1/2 ounces of light rum and 5 ounces of seltzer. Serve on the rocks, and garnish with mint or a lime wheel.

Another mint-based drink is the mint julep. Even though the Kentucky Derby is over, this can be served all summer. Fill a tall glass with crushed ice. Muddle a handful of mint leaves with a teaspoon of sugar. Add a splash of soda water and 3 ounces of bourbon. Mix, and then strain over the glass with the ice. Add a splash of rum, two mint leaves and a cherry.

Pineapple is a nice addition to drinks. A friend recently made a drink combining vodka with pineapple juice in which lemongrass had steeped. The Mexican Pineapple Leap combines the juice of 1/4 lemon, 2 ounces pineapple juice, 1/4 ounce grenadine and, of course, 1-1/4 ounces tequila. Shake with ice to chill and serve in a martini glass.

The Blue Grass Cocktail is another delightful pineapple cocktail. It is made with 1-1/2 ounces bourbon, 1 ounce pineapple juice, 1 ounce lemon juice and 1/4 ounce cherry liqueur, shaken with ice to chill and served in a martini glass.

How about a watermelon margarita or martini? For the margarita, combine in a blender with ice 1/2 cup frozen watermelon, 1-1/4 ounces tequila, 1/2 ounce roses lime juice, 1/2 ounce midori and 1/2 ounce sweet and sour mix. Garnish with a lime wheel. For the martini, combine 2 ounces vodka and a slice watermelon, chopped and crushed. Shake with ice to chill and serve in a martini glass garnished with a watermelon wedge. If you like passion fruit, try a Between the Sheets. It contains 1 ounce rum, 1/2 ounce cognac, 3 ounces passion fruit juice and 1/2 ounce lime juice. Serve on the rocks.

To make a strawberry margarita, combine in a blender with ice 1/2 cup strawberries, 1 ounce tequila, 1/2 ounce cointreau, 1 ounce of Stoli strawberry vodka or other berry-flavored vodka, and 2 ounces sweet and sour mix. Garnish with a lime wheel.

With the arrival of the first hurricane this week, it seems a Hurricane would be an appropriate drink. Mix one shot each of Malibu, Captain Morgan, light rum, orange juice and cranberry juice. Serve on the rocks. Garnish with an orange wheel and cherry.

Peaches will be in season soon. For a peach martini, combine 2 ounces of vodka and 1-1/2 ounces of Peach Schnapps. Shake with ice to chill and serve in a martini glass, garnished with a fresh peach wedge. For something quite different, try a Peaches and Cream. Combine in a blender with one cup of ice, 3/4 ounce Amaretto, 3/4 ounce Peach Schnapps and a scoop of vanilla ice cream.

You can invent your own cocktail, blending together whatever fruit is in season and whatever liquor or liqueur you prefer. Mixed berries martini? Go for it. Kiwi, banana and rum? Why not? If it sounds good to you, it is! Also, when making mixed drinks with strongly flavored fruit, don't buy expensive, "top shelf" liquor. Enjoy the summer, and drive carefully.

Rejuvenations by Christina Poulos

If a relaxing bike ride through the park is what you desire, or if you truly enjoy biking alongside hazardous traffic, then the indoor group cycling program called spinning is not for you. Created in 1986 by cyclist Johnny Goldberg, spinning is a fabulous cardio workout for participants of all fitness levels and ages. More like a high-powered aerobics class, spinning is the ultimate way to sweat off excess pounds and stress in the safety of a studio.

You'll target both your body and mind in a typical 40 minute spin class. Most spinning classes contain anywhere from 12 to 50 participants and are led by certified instructors who are also on stationary bikes. Heart pounding music and sometimes black lights are used to enhance the mood as you are led through a course that is meant to mimic an intense outdoor bike ride. Each bike is fully equipped, with clips or cages, gear racing handlebars, and an adjustable bike seat to help, as you encounter steep hills and soar down open roads.

The key element in spinning is a resistance knob. Following the instructor, everyone in the class adjusts the resistance in order to simulate going up and down hills. This allows participants to customize the intensity, according to his/her own capability and limits, throughout the entire workout.

Beginners should always consult with a physician before attending a serious spinning workout. For those of you who may not yet be familiar with how far you can push your body, wearing heart rate monitors are encouraged to safely gauge workouts. Try to stay as close as possible to your target heart rate zone.

With virtually no stress on the body's joints, spinning is considered a non-impact sport. Another reason it's great for beginners is that it is not competitive, like an outdoor cycling race may be. When the high energy instructor leads you up hills that may seem overwhelming, no one but the individual "spinner" knows how far his or her resistance knob is being turned. During the first spinning class I ever participated in, I can recall mouthing the words "Yeah, right!" to my friends as we all pretended to adjust the knob and increase the intensity while the instructor attempted to lead us up an enormous hill.

The gear you need for spinning is much simpler than that of an outdoor cyclist. Stiff soled shoes are recommended. A cotton shirt and socks are best for absorbing moisture and keeping you fresh. Loose clothing is definitely not a wise idea, as it creates a hazard and may interrupt your flow as you hop up and down from your seat. Shorts are typical spinner gear – opt for the thickest pair you own. You can even find padded shorts or gel-filled seat covers to protect your behind from potential soreness afterwards. A towel and large water bottle are the ultimate spinning staples. Your instructor may even question those that aren't prepared with the two essential items. Intense sweating is something that some may never really experience until they try spinning, so it is important to constantly replace water lost from the body. A towel will also help to keep you dry and not so slippery, and wiping down your bike at the end is customary and appropriate because there may be another class going on right after yours.

Jet-setting celebrities like Alyssa Milano, Helen Hunt, Julia Roberts, Will Ferrell, Hilary Swank, Jodie Foster, "CSI's" Marg Helgenberger, David Duchovny, and Calista Flockhart are all known to push the pedals, making it obvious that the advantages of spinning are incredible. Spinning is one of the shortest workouts you can do to burn the most amount of calories. An average spinning workout of 40 minutes will allow you to burn off about 500 calories (About seven workouts like that can burn off an entire pound!). Spinning not only enhances your level of cardiovascular endurance, but it allows you to improve your muscle tone as you work your quads, hamstrings, calves, hips, and abs.

You never have to rely on the weather to determine when you'll spin, which will allow you to stay at peak shape all year long. Spinning is one of the few workouts you can partake in where you can shut your eyes, sweat, and still get an effective workout. It's also a great way to get revved up for Memorial Day, which is merely hours away.

Green Grass & Wickets

Behind every hedgerow should be a croquet pitch. Although the American rules vary from those of the international, I will be focusing on the former. Even then, those rules are up for modification. Croquet depends on your lawn. Ideally you need a level, nicely manicured, 100 foot long x 50 foot wide playing area, but intense games have been played on less.

Wickets ("hoops") and stakes are set up as follows. From the south end of the pitch, a stake should be paced six feet toward the north, in the center of the pitch. The first wicket should be placed six feet after that, again centered on the pitch. The second wicket is placed another six feet away. The next two wickets should be placed parallel to each other 16 feet to the north side. These two should be equally distant (roughly 20 feet on a regulation pitch) from the center-line of the pitch. 16 feet farther north a wicket is placed straddling the centerline (the center of this wicket should be the center of the pitch). The north side of the pitch should mirror that of the south side. In total nine wickets should be on the pitch and two stakes.

Once you have set up your wickets and stakes, which is much easier than it sounds, you must choose teams. If there are two teams of two, each player uses one ball. Team A uses the black and blue balls, while Team B uses the red and yellow balls. If it is a one-on-one competition, it is suggested to still use two balls to a side (player A using the blue and black balls and Player B using the yellow and red balls).

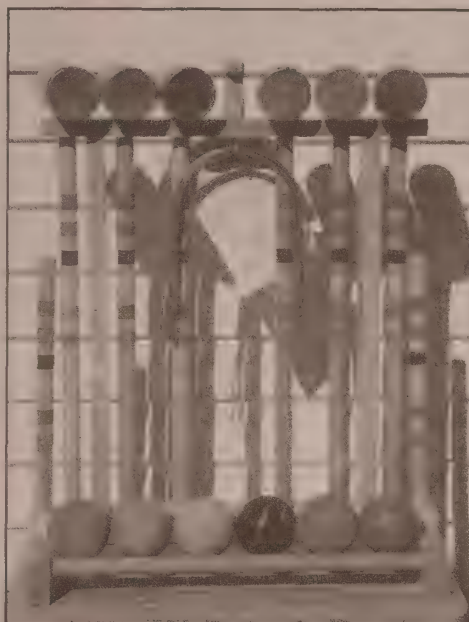

A coin is flipped, and the winner begins by hitting his/her first ball. The order goes as follows: blue, red, black, yellow. The ball is placed equidistant between the first wicket and the finishing stake

(three feet on a regulation pitch). The balls are hit through wickets in a counter-clockwise route (the mallet can either be swung between the legs or "golf style"). If the ball goes through a wicket out of order, it does not count as a score and no points are awarded. If you hit your ball completely through the proper wicket, you are awarded one point and a bonus shot. If your ball is knocked through a wicket by another player's ball you are awarded the point, but no bonus shot.

If you hit another player's ball you are awarded two bonus shots. These can be taken in one of four ways.

- 1) From where your ball stopped.
- 2) "Taking a Mallet Head" – a mallet head's distance away from the ball you hit.
- 3) "Foot Shot" or "Hand Shot" – you can place your ball directly next to the ball you hit, then, holding your ball still with your foot or hand, you can hit your ball, moving the second ball.
- 4) "A Croquet Shot" – you can place your ball directly next to the ball you hit, then hit your ball without holding your ball in place with your foot.

The goal is for each player on a team to score 14

wicket points and two stake points by following the direction of the course and hitting the balls through the wickets in order and the stakes on either end. Each player takes his/her turn and no two players can hit at the same time. After the shot is taken and no bonus shots are accumulated (by passing through a wicket, hitting a stake, or hitting another ball) the next player takes his/her turn.

There are various takes on the game: cutthroat, poison, etc., but these are the basics. It's a rather low impact game that can take anywhere up to two hours to finish. Time limits can be imposed if need be. It's an easy game to play, but a difficult one to master. I've been playing for years and still haven't captured the subtle nuances of the perfect swing.

If you're just getting started or are a seasoned veteran, croquet sets can be found in every price range, from K-mart specials to Wood Mallet Limited's handcrafted $1,090 Signature Set. No matter what set you use, get out and take advantage of a fine game that you can play in your own backyard.

Alternatennis

Playing or practicing traditional tennis may not be for everyone. The sport is sometimes overshadowed by the "extreme" factor that today's fans and spectators yearn for when watching an athletic match-up. Like a speed demon driver who hates keeping within the lanes on the highway, it can be hard to maintain the patience one needs to keep the play within the boundaries of the court. Meanwhile, mastering such skills as topspin, serves, and volleys can be as difficult as looking cool while wearing white shorts, white sneakers, white socks, probably a white shirt, and either a white headband, bandana, or hat.

Hot shots like Andre Agassi have already brought alternative apparel and athletic wear to the foreground for the sport of tennis already. Therefore, for all of you non-tennis fans, it is time to think of alternative games we can play so that you get your behind on the court. Time to shed some pride for a trim pair of buns, as the tennis court can be an ideal place for summer exercise. Tennis instructors have to think of several ways in which to maintain a child's interest while teaching the sport, so try thinking like one of them.

One way to make the sport of tennis a little different is by combining it with another sport – baseball. The opposing teams can be comprised of one or multiple players. If playing with more than one, designate the location of first and third base at the intersection of the alleys and the horizontal line that divides your half of the court. Second base is where the net meets the vertical line that divides the top half of your side of the court. Your opponent's serve is the pitch. Your return of the serve and game play that follows determine on what base you will be. Winning a point using traditional tennis rules puts a runner on first. The batter gets a shot that bounces twice within the white lines of the opponent's territory. Getting a triple is not easy, and it should not be. You get to third base in one hit if your shot lands on the inner edge of the back white line. Then there is the home run, which is tough too. Pull a Babe Ruth and chalk one up when you slam a shot that lands on the outer edge of the back white line. If you lose the point, that is an out. Give it a try, and you will like it. Having players at the bases increases the challenge of play, as your teammates become obstacles.

Not up for sports fusion? How about a little target practice and defense tactics? Bring some extra tennis balls and set up pyramids comprised of four of them, one resting atop a triangle of three. Each pyramid is a target for your opponent to hit while you defend your own. Do not worry about the white lines when playing this game. With the net as the only boundary in play, you are sprinting and swinging as much to knock that top ball off on your opponent's side as you are trying to block a shot from toppling your own. This is a fast-paced game that adds excitement through the strategies players must concoct in order to simultaneously attack and defend.

Maybe you want to play, but you do not feel like playing on the entire court. Here's an idea for you. It is a form of mini-tennis. Decrease the field of play by designating the two boxes that comprise the upper portion of each half of the court. Beginning with a volley, follow with traditional tennis play. This may seem pointless at first, but think of the agility and precision that are required to win this type of game. After all, you cannot really slam a shot without running the risk of hitting the ball too far out of bounds. Therefore, the name of the game is finesse. The play is quick and you will be surprised at how addictive this game can really be.

Give some of these alternative tennis games a try. It is worth the effort to get on the court and get the heart beating and the skin sweating. Once you get into it, you may even experience a creative spark and come up with some stylish, alternative games to play on the court yourself.

Dan's Editorial Staff

Nobody says it quite like Adam Sandler, who dedicated a song to his red hooded sweatshirt and the long and reliable friendship they shared. I, too, have a soft spot in my heart for the sweatshirts I've loved. I've never written a song about them, but here's an article – the least I can offer.

I have a well-equipped wardrobe, and could probably live for the next three months wearing a different outfit every day. So why does it seem like I am always wearing the same thing? Because there is one piece that complements every ensemble. One item that I could never leave behind on an overnight trip. One thing that I just can't live without: my zip-hooded sweatshirt. It is the perfect final touch on those cool summer nights where you wouldn't dream of reverting to a jacket, and it is a nice layer below the jacket in winter, to give you that extra warmth. The hood, the icing on the cake, really makes it a must-have in any wardrobe.

Granted, sweatshirts are often seen as your "around the house" clothes, or your "workout clothes," or maybe even your pajamas. But there are some awesome sweatshirts out there that fit the body in flattering ways while giving you that cozy sweatshirt feeling.

A sweatshirt, made of 100% cotton, can represent the places that you've been. I wear Trinity College across my chest with pride. Add a hood to that sweatshirt, and it is now fitting for a walk on the beach, even if the wind whips cold. Add a zipper to that, and you have a warm layer on top that can still flaunt your shirt underneath, but can also be zipped up to the chin for those colder moments.

Now add a little bit of tailoring, so that it's cut more slim against the body, and you actually have a cute addition to your outfit.

I have gone through cycles in my sweatshirt-wearing, and each one still holds a special place in my heart. It started a long time ago with a grey sweatshirt that was once my sister's. It said "Deer Run" across the chest in green letters, and the neck was cut to give that grungy look that was so cool in the late 80s. When that sweatshirt ran its course (and you'll know when it's time to say goodbye, hard as it may be), I moved on to a maroon zip-hoodie, under which I always used to wear little tank tops. That way I could pretend it was summer all year round, zipping up the heavy-duty zipper for warmth.

I graduated to my Chicago Bears hooded sweatshirt the summer before college, when I decided that I no longer wanted to wear something with tattered cuffs and coffee stains. I bought the Bears sweatshirt at a second-hand store for 99 cents. Salvation Armies and other second-hand stores usually have excellent sweatshirt selections. I found it in the little boys' section, which is the place to go for the cute sweatshirt that fits your body a little more snugly. That sweatshirt took me all the way through college, and sometimes I still snuggle up in it, if only for the memories.

My new best friend has shaped to the woman I've become. The grungy sweatshirts that I used to rock are still shoved lovingly into the corner of the closet, but now I like to feel like pulling on a sweatshirt doesn't make me less presentable. I bought my fitted zip hoodie last year at Mandala Yoga and Dance Center in Amagansett. It was a splurge: about $75 for a sweatshirt, whereas the last one I had purchased was 99 cents. But it has been well worth it. I probably pull this sweatshirt onto my body for some amount of time about five times a week. It's comfortable, warm, and adorable. It has a touch of lycra to make it stretchy, which is key if you want it to fit to your body. It has a little Buddha on the back in the lotus position. So I am still representing something that I believe in, I am still wrapped up cozy in cotton, only now I can step out of the house and still look presentable. It's an evolution, and it's still in the works. But one thing is certain: my wardrobe will never be complete without some form of beloved sweatshirt to top it off.

Crunchy, Munchy Granola

Health conscious individuals are always searching for that perfect snack. What's portable, delicious, satisfying and healthy? Granola! It's a take-with-you-treat that can be added to yogurt, ice cream, cereal, or just grabbed by the handful and taken on the run. Thinking of going on a camping trip, a ride to the beach with the kids or a jog down Dune Road? Grab your Vitamin Water and your granola bar for a quick burst of zing when the going gets rough.

Ahh granola. I have happy memories of growing up and seeing peanut butter granola bars lining the shelves of our cabinets. To us it was just like candy; we didn't know otherwise. As an adult I've become obsessed with granola cereals. I guess it's truly a sign of maturity when you begin to read the back of cereal boxes for their nutritional content and not to see if you won the "mystery prize." I look for such things as zinc content, iron and omega fatty acids.

Zinc...ahh zinc. You often hear people taking zinc lozenges when they have a cold. Do they definitely work? There are debates about that, but zinc is a mineral that is associated with human immune functions, metabolism and cellular health.

You've heard of Anemia? Low iron can lead to you feeling weak and looking pale. If you spice up your granola with pumpkin seeds, you'll get that added zip of iron. In addition to containing iron, they are also a source of omega 3 and omega 6 fatty acids. These acids are instrumental in decreasing heart disease risk and they have numerous other benefits for men and women. Who knew that that Jack O' Lantern could come in handy?

Flax is the latest little seed that is getting a miracle reputation. Flax has been said to equalize and stabilize blood sugars and help the intestinal/digestive track. Many Breast Cancer prevention books include flax oil and ground flax seed in their recipes. According to Hodgson Mill's website, www.HodgsonMill.com, the flax seed was first carried by ancient Egyptians in their medicine bags and used by the Babylonians in 3000 BC. Flax has come a long way and is such an important nutritional product, so don't hesitate to sprinkle some into your granola and reap the benefits.

Granola can come in boxed form, hot off the shelf at your local grocery or health food store. You can also create your own. A great site for recipes is www.recipesource.com/munchies/snacks/granola. It gives you 49 different recipes for fun and easy granola bars and cookies. For some fun you can add dried fruits, coconut, peanuts, almonds, and even chocolate chips to your granola. But just remember the more fun stuff that you add....the higher the calorie and fat content.

So this summer, instead of baking those chocolate chip cookies when the kids are bored....get out your ingredients and "sow those wild oats."

KITCHEN SINK GRANOLA

Ingredients

- 10 cups old fashioned oats
- 1/2 cup wheat germ
- 1/2 cup milled flax seeds
- 1/2 cup pumpkin seeds shelled and crushed
- 1/2 pound unsweetened dried shredded coconut
- 1 1/2 cups slivered almonds
- 1 1/2 cups chopped pecans
- 1 cup brown sugar or substitute
- 1 1/2 cups water
- 3/4 cup canola oil
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1/2-cup molasses
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon vanilla
- 2 cups dried fruit (raisins, craisins, blueberries)

Directions

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. In a large bowl mix oats, wheat germ, flax seed, coconut, pumpkin seeds and nuts. In a large saucepan, combine the brown sugar, water, oil, honey, molasses, salt, cinnamon, and vanilla. Heat until thoroughly mixed, but do not boil. Pour the syrup over dry ingredients and stir until coated well. Spread into five 13 x 9 inch jelly-roll pans. Bake 20 to 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Bake an additional 10 to 15 minutes for a crunchier texture. Cool mixture and add dried fruit. Store in airtight container in a cool dry place.

Clippity Clop with Ali Spencer

A Horse for all Seasons

The warm weather is here and, just as we do, horses have spring fever. As we shed our layers of coats, sweaters, and heavy footwear, they shed their layers of sheets, blankets, hair, and more hair. And there is a lot to do to help a horse move from winter into summer.

The first sign that summer is approaching is the shedding of a horse's winter coat. Many horses are shaved for the winter so their dense coat won't make them excessively hot while they're being ridden. This is especially important in areas such as the East End where so many stables have indoor rings that tend to stay warm.

If a horse is clipped, all that has to be done is to wait for his summer coat to grow in. There isn't much shedding involved. On the other hand, horse owners who ride outdoors, even in the coldest winter months, or give their horses time off in the winter, frequently don't clip their horses, or worry about blankets and don't give a second thought to the horses getting cold. Their hair puffs out to allow a warm layer of air to form right against their skin. The worst thing you can do to an unclipped horse is to constantly take his blankets on and off, forcing the hair to flatten. This will actually make the horse colder.

When the weather starts to get warmer, the only thing the owners of unclipped horses have to do is work overtime brushing their horses. Then brushing them some more.

Of course, along with new coats, horses also get new shoes in the spring. Gone are special winter shoes with Borium imbedded in them for extra traction, and with a bubble pad covering the bottom of their hooves to keep the snow from sticking in their feet.

Horses can't really run around as they like to do on ground that is frozen and covered with ice. In fact, after a few hours most horses stand at the gate waiting to be brought into the barn. But in the spring and summer, many horses have to be bribed with grain and carrots in order to be brought back in from the field. A horse's ability and desire to stay outside for longer periods of time increases as the weather gets warmer – a reaction with which humans can easily identify. But it is in a field, eating grass, where you will see a horse most relishing the arrival of spring. And there is nothing like seeing a horse going out into the field in the spring, dropping to his knees, then flopping on his side and having a good roll in the dirt.

For horses who have been ridden in indoor rings all winter, riding in an open field can expose a lot of faults that an indoor arena has hidden. Walls tend to keep a horse moving in a straight line. In an open field, however, it can become very clear that one's horse is inclined to drift to the left or right, or travel with a bulge instead of a straight body. Since horses will have much more energy upon moving outside, it's sensible to be a little cautious during the first few outdoor rides.

But, undoubtedly, the best part about moving into the summer, for both horses and horse owners, is putting away the blankets. In the winter, most horses wear about two blankets while in the stable, plus an outer layer for going in the field. Winter means a lot of pulling blankets off the horse, throwing blankets back on the horse, folding blankets, washing blankets..... well, you get the idea. Horses don't like it anymore than we do. Many horses get itchy skin from constantly wearing blankets, from a lack of circulation and fresh air to the skin. Pulling a blanket off a horse is the equivalent of a person taking off a layer of thermal underwear, a turtleneck and wool sweater.

Of course, summer comes with its own problems. Show horses need to be bathed regularly, saddles and bridles need to be cleaned more often, horses get sweaty from working in the heat, dirty from rolling in the dust, and flies and mosquitoes arrive to pester the horses.....

It's wonderful to love a horse.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Beware of Little Beasties

Nothing is more disappointing than to see a plant blooming one day, and wilt and die the next! Over the years, we have heard many tales of plants that disappear from sight and topple over with their roots gone. Unfortunately, the East End is home to a garden pest that must be controlled!

Voles are widely distributed throughout the northern hemisphere, and are seen in many gardens where soil is well cultivated. They are prevalent in areas surrounded by woods and open meadows. Gardeners have made woodland and meadow homes even more desirable by building stone walls, mulching with bark and woodchips, feeding birds, and planting herbs, vegetables, spring bulbs and perennials.

Voles are small, tunneling rodents, unlike mice and moles – part of the microtine branch of the rodent family. All other North American rodents belong to the cricetine branch. Their closest relatives are the muskrat and lemming. They are highly reproductive (there may be as many as 300 in one season) and need to be controlled by natural or planned means.

Voles are herbivores, voraciously eating nuts, seeds, bulbs, barks, roots, and stems. Most voles encountered on the East End are dark grey or grey-brown with a pale belly. They are typically four-to-six inches long with a tail that is shorter than a mouse's tail.

Voles inhabit roadsides and adjacent uncultivated lands. However, they invade gardens when population builds and when their wild habitat becomes unfavorable. Voles forage for plants and seeds during both day and night. During the winter, they burrow in tunnels beneath snow, where the snow's insulation keeps the animals active throughout the winter.

Voles use mole tunnels to gain access to the roots of plants. This past year at Rock Cottage we lost many dahlias, angelicas, delphiniums, and roses due to these beasties. Each plant was thriving and then suddenly died. A slight tug revealed that the roots had been eaten away.

It is impossible to eradicate voles. As such, a program that limits their destructiveness is the best approach for ensuring garden survival. Undertaking steps for habitat management, environmental control, trapping, and baiting all need to be used.

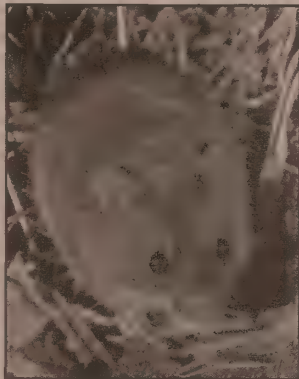

Start out by ensuring food sources, such as leftover vegetables, birdfeed, and compost heaps are protected from voles. Make sure mulch is not built up around trees.

We have found the traditional mousetrap, provided it is secluded from birds, pets, and children, is a good vole control. Use a little peanut butter or bits of bacon as bait. Place the traps in areas where voles are known to forage – check daily.

Natural predators, including owls, hawks, snakes, foxes, and cats can help keep the vole population down. Unfortunately, many New Yorkers visiting the Hamptons eradicate these beneficial predators, so vole populations have grown. Where possible, protect these species.

Close mowing of lawns, and weed control in and around gardens, is also effective in limiting vole populations. These help reduce vole pathways and deter them from active foraging.

We have found that elimination of grubs, which reduces mole populations, will also reduce vole damage.

age. Since voles use mole tunnels for plant access, eliminating grubs eliminates a mole food source and reduces their tunnels. This has a direct effect on plant access by voles.

Most vole repellants on the market are ineffective. The research suggests sound devices and fumigants are almost worthless. Two repellants – thiram (a chewing deterrent) and capsaicin (hot sauce) – are moderately effective if reapplied after rainstorms. We believe a mixture of chicken eggs and water deters voles, as does the use of moth balls pushed into garden soil around precious plants. Use of castor oil as a soil/plant spray also has a beneficial effect.

Some people have found the use of predator urines (fox/coyote) has a positive effect on vole control. They can be purchased in some of the nursery and garden supply houses on the East End of Long Island.

Rodenticides may be effective, though temporary. Dangerous around children, pets, and other wildlife, the use of anticoagulants and other rodenticides should be marginal. Minimize the hazard to birds and other animals by anchoring cardboard boxes over poisoned feed to prevent access by animals other than voles.

While none of the above works completely, a program that combines approaches will at least control voles. It is important that gardeners exercise some diligence in vole control. It is unfortunate, but in this instance it is a question of vole or garden!

Traveling In Style

I took my last vacation about five years ago, and the thought of retrieving my dad's old brown suitcase from the attic filled me with anxiety. One look at the shabby, oversized clunker, sitting in a corner of the attic completely covered in dust and cobwebs, and smelling like a laundry hamper, made me turn away in disgust. Obviously, my wife and five-year-old daughter would never allow me to humiliate them in public by carrying such a vile thing in my hands. Something had to be done – and fast. Disney World was waiting.

At my wife's suggestion, and my daughter's insistence, I finally settled on a 3-piece set of matched luggage from American Tourister. The color – a lovely burgundy – was an instant hit with my wife and daughter, the latter of whom reminded me that I now had luggage “just like mommy and me.”

Matched luggage sets are really cool. If you are a color-coordinated, fastidious kind of person like me, you'll find that they are very fashion forward and might inspire you to travel more often. My particular set included a 25 inch upright suitcase and matching duffel bag and toiletry case. The buttery soft exterior featured a dark brown PVC trim with accents. Decorative touches included white topstitching, silver hardware, logo plaque, and a geometric-patterned lining.

The 25 inch upright easily maneuvers on four multi-directional spinner wheels that each turn a full 360 degrees to take the pressure off your elbow, arm and shoulder. For a guy who has been lugging around a suitcase for ages, this was a blessing. I always wanted a suitcase with wheels. Not so much because I minded my arms getting tired carrying a heavy suitcase around, but because wheeled suitcases are the enemy of baggage porters and hotel pages. With a wheeled suitcase, travelers do not need to be assisted, which means they do not have to pay tips. Hey, we're living in tough times!

Some additional features on the upright include an ABS honeycomb frame and corner guards, which offer extra durability to help protect exterior and contents from wear and tear. The comfort grip handle slides in and out with the push of a button and locks into place. You can tuck the handle away in a zippered compartment for safe and easy portability.

The duffel bag is always ready for weekend travel or carry-on to the plane. Double carrying straps with a 12 inch drop and a detachable comfort-padded shoulder strap make transporting items easy. The bag features one large zippered closure, matching geometric patterned interior, and silver hardware including visible logo plaque. For more information, please visit their Web site at www.americantourister.com

Several months after the trip to Disney World, I thought it might be a good idea to take my wife hiking in the White Mountains of New Hampshire. I hadn't gone hiking since my college days, and I didn't even own a backpack. My last one, a drab, olive green affair that I got rid of well over a decade ago, served me well at the time. But, boy, was I surprised when I perused several websites featuring their latest line of hiking gear. Like most everything else these days, backpacks, too, have reached new heights of style and fashion.

There are a lot of contradictions when it comes to selecting backpacks – perhaps not too surprising since it's a decision based on personal comfort, convenience, and weight-issues each owner will consider differently. But aside from all this, color and style are usually the major influences that determine which backpack you will ultimately choose to buy.

I finally decided on the Gregory Reality backpack. This backpack doesn't have all the “bells and whistles” sported by other packs, yet in my opinion it still earns top honors because of its workmanship, including triple-stitch sewing and bombproof bar tacking. The Reality also has hybrid loading capability – top loading as well as panel loading – which makes it easier to pack and retrieve items. And it comes in a stylish array of colors that my wife and I found appealing. I chose dark green; she chose the WM Tega™ sky blue backpack “women's series” model. For more information you can visit their website at www.gregorypacks.com.

Of course my daughter had to give her final approval on our choices. Now my only problem is how to convince her that mommy and I want to go alone.

—Frank McChristian

Slightly Disconnected

Two weeks ago my brother, an otherwise very competent person, dropped his cordless telephone in the swimming pool. He lives in a house where cell phone reception does not exist, so for several days he was more or less unreachable. I recently visited him and headed to the garage for a phone I had thought I remembered seeing. I discovered a red rotary phone dating back to the 60s that was left by the previous owner. I plugged it into the jack and there was a dial tone. The relic may have resembled Commissioner Gordon's Batphone, but it worked, and worked well.

The whole fiasco got my mind reeling. I began to wonder why more people didn't use antique telephones and if there were any completely waterproof cordless telephones on the market.

Like with most antiques, collectors are looking for function as well as style. And although a candle stick phone from the 1920s looks nice silently perched on a mahogany desk, the old fashioned ring and the novelty of chatting with one hand on the receiver and one on the earpiece add dimension and enjoyment to the phone. If you are looking for something functional, make sure it has been updated to work on modern telephone line systems.

There are far too many styles of telephones to cover, but a few caught my attention. Telephones from the 20s and 30s are great additions to any modern house. Their distinct ring, durability, and the imposing rotary dial make them conversation pieces as well as useful appliances. Sure, the modern convenience of touchtone orful numbers are ideal for guest rooms. Guestrooms don't necessarily need telephones, but if you are going to have them, why not make them special?

As much as I enjoy the ring of an antique phone, the truth is, I can't carry them around outside and I sure as hell can't go swimming with one. The East End is surrounded by water; the ocean, bays, streams, creeks, ponds, of course swimming pools. I try to spend as much time as possible by the water and although I like that time to be peaceful, occasionally the phone rings. So now, instead of falling out of my floating lounge chair, swimming to the opposite side of the pool and shorting out the cordless phone with my soaking wet hands, I have discovered the submersible, floating, waterproof telephone. The Uniden WXI377-R is a bright yellow, rubber coated telephone that can fall in the pool and be left out in the rain and still work. With its 1500 foot range you can take it anywhere in the yard and maybe even down the road to the beach.

Most people don't put enough thought into their telephones. This spring, look into the past for a bit of style to accent any setting and look into the future to keep connected in the water.

—Christian McLean

doesn't exist, but coming out to the East End is about slowing down anyway.

Nothing is more offsetting than when I see a plastic cordless phone surrounded by turn of the century antique furniture. No matter how elegant the sofas or settees are, the fact that there is a Panasonic answering machine perched next to them simply destroys the whole feel of the room. The room is screaming for something else.

In their heyday, phones like the Automatic Electric candlestick, the Western Electric 202, Western Electric roundbase 102, were cutting edge technology and cost a pretty penny. That hasn't changed, these phones now run into the $500 price range, but it's a small price to pay for consistency. The only drawback to these phones is the requirement of an additional external bell box, which can take up room. Phones can also be rewired to function without the bell box, but the phone won't ring.

If you're looking for a phone that will add some color to your home, fast forward to the sixties. Leave it to the age of psychedelics to come up with a rainbow array of rotary phones. Starting in basic black and moving to yellow, pink, mint, and sky blue, these col-

Things You See At Restaurants and Want in Your House

There are some items that look so at home in public settings that you have to wonder, how would that look in my own home? It is just something that seems so ingenious that it creates the character of the bar or restaurant. Couldn't it have the same effect on your own dining room or bar area, making your home a much more interesting social setting? Of course some rooms are meant to be intimate, but others would be much nicer if you bring the outside in.

The bar area becomes more and more authentic as we imitate a real, loud, grimy bar. So you have a couple of options. Either you can start hiring smokers to come in and stink up the joint and start peeing directly on the floor, or if you would prefer to keep your home bar a classy joint, just get some of the décor from your favorite place. Hang up a flashing "Rolling Rock" or "Coors Light" neon sign on the wall. You can find any neon sign, from "St. Pauli Girl" to "Amstel Light," at www.neonsign.com. And that jukebox that gets the whole crowd rocking late into the night? Imagine that fun, energetic vibe kicking in your own living room. Part of the fun of a traditional jukebox was that moment you watched the record fall into place and pick up the tune. But if you've hocked your record collection for a pair of legwarmers back in the 80s, don't fret. Today, old-fashioned-looking jukeboxes come designed for CDs. For example, at www.gameroomantiques.com, you can find a jukebox with a Phillips 100-disc changer and five speakers. These old-fashioned models revamped for the 21st century don't come cheap, though. $7095 will secure you this fabulous party-starter.

The other day I went with a huge family group to a Vietnamese restaurant in Hartford to celebrate my friend's college graduation. Little cousins were ducking under the table, while their great grandmother slurped her noodles. With all of these varying interests, how was everyone going to sit at one table? Plus, there are so many different dishes available, many of which I had never tasted, that we were all sampling from each other. The best solution, which I never see in private homes anymore, is the Lazy Susan. These fabulous round disks rest in the middle of the table and spin around, so you can pass the salt to Great Grandma without having to get up. They are the perfect method for sharing dishes, particularly in a big group. You can buy your own lazy Susan for your dining room table at , where you'll find wooden, corian, and marble varieties.

Diners around the country vary greatly, and I, being from the diner capital of the world, New Jersey, am particularly sensitive to the aspects you can count on. One thing that is almost always consistent in a true diner is the lighting. You know those lovely stained glass shades that hang low over the tables, casting a yellowish glow on the late-night patrons? There are often many of them in the diner, and usually they are all slightly different. Having just one of these in your dining room makes it much more special.

One restaurant item that has really caught on as a household necessity is the pepper grinder. I remember when it was a unique part of the "dining out" experience to have freshly ground pepper sprinkled over my pasta. But now it is common to find professional pepper grinders in any amateur's kitchen. Loaves and Fishes offers a line of pepper mills called the Chiarugi, which actually cut the peppercorns instead of crushing them. These peppermills range from $83 to $182.

Decorating ideas are all around – there is no need to limit ourselves to what we think fits in the home. If you walk into a restaurant and fall in love with the ambience, think about how you can apply it to your own dining room. You can find just about anything online nowadays, so there is no reason you can't have that obscure table ornament on your own kitchen counter.

Braving Summer Showers

It's been a rainy springtime, and that means we've been relegated indoors too much. But with the right preparation, you can carry your shelter with you, stepping outside to embrace the sweet smell of spring rain without winding up wet. Umbrellas can become your portable house, keeping you dry and warm, even on the rainiest spring afternoon.

It's no wonder Shirley Manson sang that she's only happy in the rain; from the $2 buy-and-toss kinds, to the $435 Pucci ones, umbrellas are coming in an increasing array of shapes, colors, styles and price ranges. Whether you're a pragmatist looking to invest in a wind resistant umbrella, or an art buff looking for an umbrella with your favorite Monet piece imprinted on it, there is an umbrella to suit just about anyone's character and personal style.

Attesting to the rising trend against plain black umbrellas, Brella Bar (248 Elizabeth St., near Prince St., 212-625-3133), is a store devoted entirely to innovative umbrellas, from high-end brands like Pierre Vaux and Flann Lippincott to handmade wooden ones. Prices range from $100 to $400 and they also have a stock of vintage parasols, umbrellas and walking sticks, dating from the early 1900s through the 60s.

Similarly, Bellaumbrella.com sells vintage originals from the 1910s to the 1950s. The wide collection ranges from the bejeweled to the ruffled-up. The Red Canopy with white floral fabric on the underside and a silver embossed handle with two red faux gemstones ($210) is quite impressive.

For $42 you could possibly get one of the season's most innovative umbrellas. Sold exclusively at wish-ingfish.com, the illuminated umbrella from Bright Night features a bright white krypton bulb underneath its canopy, lighting your way for up to three hours with a combination of fashion and technology. Weighing in at only 16 oz., it is very durable and comes in a plastic tube with a carrying strap.

For the more trendy shopper, Burberry's clear umbrellas with their classic plaid trim, are one of this season's most coveted accessories. The $115 umbrella has a brushed silver metal handle, a snap closure, and is relatively lightweight. For those willing to go all out, Emilio Pucci's prints are featured on a handful of umbrellas that retail for $435 at Neiman Marcus. Most of the umbrellas this season are signature prints in a combination of white, turquoise, yellow, fuchsia, green, purple, and black.

If you're not looking to spend quite so much, Saks Fifth Avenue sells Moschino umbrellas for $55. They're adorable and conveniently pint-size, so they easily fit into a back pocket. Olive & Bette's, the ever-popular chain of boutiques, sells Muquel-Ruis's $35 cheery designed umbrellas, though most of the models are rather flimsy and are only useful in light rain. London Fog (around $14.99 at Target stores) has a variety of models that fit into medium-sized purses. They also have comfortable gel handles that give a good grip.

For the more technologically savvy, Sharper Image (sharperim-age.com), widely known for its sleek and sophisticated electronics, offers three distinctly practical umbrellas. The Flat Briefcase Umbrella ($19.95), which folds flat to fit in briefcases, and the Full-Size Pocketsize Umbrella ($14.95), are both ideal for business types. For the cold Hampton winters, the Large Windefyer Umbrella ($34.95), is ideal because with a 4-foot, 8-inch canopy, it's large enough for at least two people, and it withstands winds as strong as 60mph.

The newly renovated Museum of Modern Art has a Cloud Umbrella ($45), with a simple black exterior and a turquoise interior covered with white, fluffy clouds. Similarly, Bed Bath & Beyond's Inspirations line offers umbrellas with prints derived from famous works of art, like a pink-and-blue print of Warhol's Marilyn and Monet's Waterlilies. Most are done in muted tones and sell for $20 each.

Basket Case

Springtime always makes me hungry. Being outdoors also always makes me hungry. Pretty much anything makes me hungry and now that my days aren't spent cooped up, an apple's throw away from the fridge, I've been looking into other means of being able to eat wherever and whenever I feel the urge.

When I was younger, a brown bag lunch and thermos of my favorite drink did wonders, but my palate has refined itself in the past few years. And although peanut butter sandwiches come in handy, in outdoor settings I'd prefer a little more. This isn't an article about food though. It's about dining. It's about what you need to eat outdoors without making the task arduous.

The occasion and your dining companies are essential in devising the proper outdoor dining plan. If you're having a picnic with a group, pack for an extra person. Additional guests are always going to pop up and if it's possible to avoid sharing six settings among seven people, it is advisable. That said, packing lightly is a very good idea. You have to carry everything after all.

Before you head out find the right picnic basket. They come in several varieties, although I prefer the wicker baskets of old, complete with leather straps, brass buckles and a cloth lining. I also like the baskets resembling vintage luggage. Even these two varieties take many forms, so the one you use should be determined by necessity, luxury, and how far you are willing to lug silverware, crystal, and china. I recently saw a rattan basket which was worn like a backpack, redistributing the weight of the basket, allowing for walks to more secluded places in the park, beach, woods, or fields. Most baskets come fully stocked with servings for two, four, or six people, but if you are looking for something unique, you can restock these baskets with your personal china, crystal, and silverware. It really depends upon how often you are going to be spending lunchtime outside.

In addition to the flatware, a blanket is a must. Some baskets come with additional straps to hold blankets, but if yours doesn't, rattan lends itself quite nicely to weaving in string or ribbon to attach the blanket.

If your major concern is durability and weight, then maybe rattan isn't the basket for you. There are picnic bags made out of canvas as well. I recently saw green polyester canvas, which was insulated and contained: 4 acrylic tumblers, 4 napkins, 1 corkscrew, 1 cutting board, 1 cheese knife, 4 plates, 4 each knives forks & spoons, 1 bottle stopper, 1 set of salt and pepper shakers.

For a romantic picnic, wine is probably in the cards. Most basket makers take that into consideration when perfecting their design, but if not, a matching canvas or rattan wine carrier can be easily found, even at local vineyards.

If you're heading out on a date and want to be impressive here are a few helpful tips. One thing that can absolutely destroy a picnic is insects. So make sure to spray yourselves with bug spray before leaving the house and store the spray in a sealed plastic bag in a separate compartment of your basket. A better option is to keep it in an entirely different carrying bag. Wash your hands before you set out. Pack citronella candles for a sense of romance as well as function. Keep individual foods in small re-sealable containers and serve small portions to keep plates from building up food that will eventually be discarded in the trash. Bring trash bags so not to mess up the interior of the basket. Avoid mayonnaise based foods, creamy salad dressings, and anything that will spoil quickly. Pack handy wipes, extra paper napkins (for the occasional spill), sunblock, a cell phone, a map, and a flashlight because even the most romantic sunset picnic, eventually goes dark. Although a moonlit walk sounds dreamy, the reality of trudging around in the dark will eventually set in and no one will be impressed with your lack of preparedness. The only thing worse than plodding along through the darkened woods without a flashlight is to do it in the rain, so above all, make sure to check the weather before you head out.

With sunny skies in the forecast and flowers in bloom, taking your food outside seems like the ideal way to pass a lazy summer day. A little wine and food in the right setting, with the right supplies, will go a long way. Just don't forget the corkscrew.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

The price of East End real estate is at an all time high. Properties on the East End rank among the most expensive real estate in the country rivaled only by NY penthouses, ranch estates in Brentwood California, mansions in Bel Air, sprawling Texas spreads, and Hawaiian Plantations. In fact, 3 out of the 10 most expensive properties on the market right now in the US are right here in the Hamptons. Our claims to fame here on the East End include Three Ponds Farm, the highest at $70 million, then The White House in East Hampton at $50 million and Eothen, better known as the Church Estate, in Montauk, reduced to a mere $45 million. All three remain for sale and all three are exceptional properties in their own right with their own set of unique features. Three Ponds Farm, in Bridgehampton, can accommodate the most discerning equestrian enthusiast as well as a passionate golfer and whatever entourage they may bring, with its vast acreage, its three ponds, golf course, stables and guest quarters. The White House, on the pond in the heart of East Hampton Village, is a stately landmark showplace that is known for its all-white appearance broken only by the red geraniums that bloom in its flower boxes each summer. It will lend the new owner obvious prestige and access to just about all of what the East End has to offer right at their finger tips. Eothen is the Greek word meaning "toward the east" and you can't get any more east than this famous compound. The only building further east is the lighthouse. This property offers the kind of privacy that one rarely finds anywhere. Set on a glacial bed, practically on the beach. The spread of five buildings face out on to one of the most spectacular views on the entire eastern seaboard, surrounded by acres of some of the most pristine preserved land in the Montauk Moorlands. As they say, you get what you pay for.

One would think that actually getting these prices would be unheard of, but we have already watched them come and go. The Burnt Point Estate on Georgica Pond, in Wainscott, sold at $43 million last year, proving that these properties do move at those prices. Then there was Maycroft, in North Haven, for $20 million. Bidding on the exquisite architectural masterpiece and landmark, Villa Maria, in Water Mill, is still going on, jacking the price higher and higher as I write. Martha Stewart recently sold one of her East Hampton homes on Georgica Pond for $9 million and the new owner has plans to knock it down and start anew. We have seen small oceanfront parcels in such high demand that they have gone up in the millions.

The White House

It has been said of late, that the over-inflated real estate bubble is about to burst. When and if it does, financial experts predict that the Hamptons, particularly second homeowners here will feel it first. Second homes in relation to what one can afford or what is priority, obviously tend to go first. East End brokers have ridden high in this market. They still are reporting bidding wars through out the area.

It's not just New Yorkers seeking refuge from the city anymore. The Hamptons is now attracting not only national, but international interest as well. The larger real estate moguls have branched out all over the two Forks, bringing with them a client base that stretches out all over the world. Last season, a Russian heiress took the highest priced rental. Now the priciest summer rental has more than doubled since then and who knows who will or has paid the almost million dollars it will take to spend a few short months in Southampton? That's almost $15,000 a day! Is it possible that we could see even higher prices next season? That rentals could go as high as $2 million and high-end estates could have the potential of someday bringing maybe $100 million dollars? Or, has interest in homes, land and commercial real estate out here reached its peak? Who knows when it will ever end on the East End?

You can reach Diane at eastendrealest@aol.com

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY- Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

PRETTY POEM

Dear Dan,

I know you don't typically publish poetry but I've gotten some great feedback on this piece. Maybe you could find a space for it. (Copyright Avery E. Andon 2005)

Stuck on You

Hearts left blistered, burnt well-done
Menaced thoughts become obsession
Passion sought receives aggression...
Complications often mingle
Turning couples back to singles
Dinner lasts for awkward moments
Stuck together, detached components...
I don't condone it, this worried manner
Love is lust, enough with banter
Steady swift, yet slow when needed
Inner-cravings get sowed and seeded...
Reach the top, then fall to earth
In contemplation of self-worth
Back again, down just that road
That got you lost left to erode...
Helpless actions feel so rushed
Tired endings, speech goes hush
Eyes shut...bodies meet
Hate gives up, as lovers sleep...

WHAT DOES IT ALL MEAN?

Dear Dan,

Your "Crosses of a Thousand Uses Strike Again"

story combines disregard of basic fact with incorrect assumptions in a disgusting, bad taste attempt at humor. It dishonors the somber and sincere effort of the East End Veterans to recognize and honor those who have died in Bush's Iraq war, a war based on lies and deceit. More than blatant bad taste your report is disgusting. The message of the crosses, stars of David and Muslim crescent moons, and ceremonies accompanying their display, has been and will continue to be "Bring Them Home," the best way to support our troops. Their first use was on the East Hampton green at the windmill. On a Friday afternoon in a stiff March wind and snowstorm East End Veterans and a handful of volunteers were on their hands and knees for hours pounding the crosses into a frozen ground to be ready for a Saturday morning series of brief remarks by religious leaders, town and village officials, and veterans. The 1,350 symbols remained in place for six days as specified in the permit issued by East Hampton Village, not merely one day as you said. The American Legion in Amagansett and the VFW were not involved. Both declined an invitation to participate.

The East Hampton Middle School asked to use 200 crosses for their "Kick Butt Day," an annual anti smoking event, to stand for some 1,600 Americans who die each day from smoking. We were glad to lend them. A misunderstanding brought their prompt removal.

Our crosses were not used in Watermill as you contended. They were set up on the grounds of the Southampton Methodist church, along with hundreds of photos of Americans killed in Iraq displayed inside the building and assembled by a Greenport organization opposed to the Iraq war. A very moving ceremony held in the church on that Saturday afternoon included our "Bring Them Home" message.

Your attempt to trivialize a serious effort by a group of combat veterans with "THERE THEY ARE AGAIN!" and suggest the crosses are an undesirable gimmick, and then link them to some long forgotten Batmobile replica is altogether despicable.

Dear Dan,

David's article on how the curse of the Red Sox is now on the Yankees is CRAZY! He needs to learn that the Yankees always get off to a slow start. Now that it's May, the Yankees are winning again. Dear Dan,

I read with glee your description of $$$$$ in your article, It Goes From One Pocket To Another Pocket To Another Pocket.

Now just try to imagine doing the whole thing with a recalcitrant ex-spouse. ## INDEPENDENCE DAY

Dear Dan,

Can anyone tell us when they will be doing the fireworks show in Sag Harbor this year. Last year my California family and I went to see the July 4th fireworks like we do every year, only to discover that the fireworks were on July 3rd...the day before. We found that very strange since the 4th still fell on the weekend. My two and four-year-olds were quite disappoint-

Thanks for your help. We loooove Dan's Papers!

Police Blotter

Alms For the Conflicted? A man who was going door-to-door, soliciting for church donations happened upon the home of an off-duty police officer. When asked for identification, the alms solicitor became a wee bit belligerent, which only intensified after the officer identified himself. According to police reports, the man gave chase and the off-duty officer followed and arrested him. Charged with resisting arrest, criminal impersonation, trespassing, and soliciting, the alleged "no-good-doer" was remanded to Suffolk County Jail after failing to post $20,500 bail.

Something To Be Said About Being Quiet... A young woman learned the hard way that sometimes the best reaction is inaction. According to Southampton Police reports, she was arrested after interfering with the arrest of her friend, who was subsequently charged with drunk driving after an accident.

Right? Apparently, some unknown person crashed into a business establishment earlier this month causing $25,000 worth of damage. Police are investigating the incident and have not revealed the identity of the commercial building, nor do they have any leads.

Call Me Crazy...But If Your License Is Questionable You Probably Want To Err On The Side of Caution. But some are risk takers, like this woman who was pulled over while talking on her cell phone. The officer, after running her license, found that it had been suspended. She was charged with aggravated unlicensed operation of a vehicle in the third degree.

Scores Liquor and Electronics. It appears that some unknown someone kicked in the side door to a Whalebone residence. Once inside the home, the thief absconded with several bottles of whiskey, a speaker switch box (whatever that is) and a laptop computer worth $2,000.

Bandit Baby Shower? They made a getaway in a gray or blue Buick, but first scored about $500 in baby goods from Baby Gap in Bridgehampton Commons according to a store manager, who witnessed a couple doing a very special brand of "shopping."

Scooter Scoots! A Flanders resident was punched in the head and, adding insult to injury, the culprit then stole his scooter. Of course, inquiring minds might ask, what was the victim doing on a scooter past midnight?

Liquor House. A Palo Alto Drive home was relieved of five bottles of wine and a bottle of liquor around the middle of May. Apparently the boozer gained entry through a broken bedroom window in the front of the house.

Shhhhhh! Mums the Word... It seems the Sag Harbor Fire Station has been under siege by burglars. The faithful might remember, not that long ago, when an apparent "inside job" cost the station a few duckets. In a recent turn of events, police are now investigating vandalism and a break-in at the firehouse. According to reports filed by authorities, someone broke a window in order to enter the building and then caused damage once inside. Details of the ongoing investigation were not released, but police are "looking into everything."

STOP FOR TURTLES From late spring through the fall, our indigenous turtles roam their now fragmented environment. As they wander out onto the roadways, they are often struck by speeding and unexpected motorists. These precious turtles are slow moving and can be easily avoided. When frightened, they withdraw into their shells and resemble an elliptical stone in the road. Please drive with care and help a turtle cross the road.

Look to Experience

A Conversation with Rocco Oliverio
President and Founder
The Real Estate Store, Inc
and Bridge Building Co., Inc

By Warren Strugatch

Rocco Oliverio founded his real estate and construction businesses in the Hamptons in 1975. In the three decades since he has become a mainstay of East End real estate and a well-known figure in the community. Warren Strugatch is a business writer whose articles have appeared in The New York Times, Newsday, and New York magazine Warren: Good afternoon, Rocco. Thanks for sitting down with us. Congratulations on your 30th anniversary in the Hamptons. Rocco: Good afternoon Warren. Thank you. Warren: Spring in the Hamptons. That means one thing. Rocco: Real estate. Warren: So, how is the market this year? Let's start with sales of existing homes. Rocco: Spring is always busy, this year especially so. The market is hot, hot hot. Did I say hot? Yes, interest rates have edged up, but they're still extremely low. In fact, there are more good financing deals out there now than ever. There are interest-only deals and low introductory rate deals. Geographically, from Westhampton to Montauk it's not uncommon for properties to sell above asking price. Buyers compete.

Warren: Let's talk about new home construction.

Rocco: That's a favorite subject for me. The trend is certainly bigger homes, ranging from 8,000 to 15,000 square feet. The flavor of the day is post-modern. Vacant land is scarce and when it's priced right it doesn't stay on the market long. Warren: You've been here 30 years. What's changed since you hung out your shingle?

Rocco: New construction is a charged issue. As a builder you want to do things right, to make sure you dot your i's and cross your t's. I suggest you work with a builder who knows local ordinances and local laws. Do your homework. Ask to see bank references. Ask how long the builder's been around. Look for stability. If someone hands you a business card with only a cell phone number, I think that speaks for itself.

Warren: Architects?

Rocco: Hire an architect with a local address and a local track record. Hire a good general contractor and leave things in his or her hands.

Warren: Clients often complain about how long the process takes. Rocco: The builder should be candid up front. Look, it's going to take a year or more. If you try to hurry the process you'll sacrifice quality.

Warren: Rocco, take out your crystal ball. Polish it up. What do you see in terms of the real estate market five years from now?

Rocco: Warren, I have no crystal ball. Anyone who says they can predict this market is shoveling it. I don't know where the ceiling is. No one does. My best advice is when you find a property you like, act quickly. The right time is now.
